Miniaturized, Implantable Identification Technology With Multiple Medical, Security and Emergency Applications.

MEET THE CHIPSONS

Jeffrey, Leslie and their boy Derek will be America's first cyborg family.
Are you ready to "Get Chipped"?

[Article Source: By Lev Grossman With Reporting By Kathie Klarreich/Miami - Sunday, Mar. 03, 2002]

With his school uniform and his plump, pinchable cheeks, Derek Jacobs of Boca Raton, Fla., looks like an ordinary youngster. But looks can deceive. When he was 12, Microsoft certified Derek as a qualified systems engineer, one of the youngest ever. At 13 he was running his own computer consulting company. Now he's 14, and what's Derek doing for an encore? He's becoming a cyborg--part man-child, part machine. Derek, his mom Leslie and his dad Jeffrey are the first volunteer test subjects for a new, implantable computer device called VeriChip. Later this spring, pending Food and Drug Administration approval, doctors will load a wide-bore needle with a microchip containing a few kilobytes of silicon memory and a tiny radio transmitter and inject it under the skin of their left arms, where it will serve as a medical identification device. It sounds like science fiction. (Remember the Borg on Star Trek? Resistance is futile!) But VeriChip is quite real. The Jacobs family could be the first in a new generation of computer-enhanced human beings.

In some respects Derek is a regular eighth-grader. He's quiet and polite. He plays the drums. He used to be on the swim team before he quit to make time for his computer business. He remembers vividly when he first saw VeriChip on the Today show. "I thought it was great technology," he says. "I wanted to be a part of it." And when Derek sets his mind to a problem, he generally solves it. "Derek stood up and said to me, 'Mom, I want to be the first kid implanted with the chip,'" remembers Leslie Jacobs, an advertising executive at Florida Design magazine. "He kept bugging me to call the company until I finally broke down."

Leslie set up a lunch with Keith Bolton, vice president of Applied Digital Solutions, the company behind VeriChip. At first Bolton (who jokingly refers to the Jacobses as "the Chipsons") was skeptical. Since the first wave of VeriChip publicity, he has heard from roughly 2,500 would-be cyborgs. But the Jacobs family is particularly well suited to test VeriChip for use in medicine. If a patient with VeriChip were injured, the theory goes, a harried ER doc could quickly access the victim's medical background by scanning the chip with a device that looks like a Palm handheld computer.

In the case of the Jacobses, that could be a lifesaver. Derek has allergies to common antibiotics, and Jeffrey is weakened from years of treatment for Hodgkin's disease. A few years ago, he was in a serious car accident; and when he got to the hospital, he was in no shape to explain his condition to the staff. "The advantage of the chip is that the information is available at the time of need," Jeffrey explains. "It would speak for me, give me a voice when I don't have one."

The operation to insert the chip is simple. "It takes about seven seconds," says Dr. Richard Seelig, the company's medical-applications director, exaggerating only slightly. An antiseptic swab, a local anesthetic, an injection and a Band-Aid--that's all it takes. Once the skin heals, Seelig says, the chip is completely invisible, and the Jacobses will hardly know it's there. "The chip is fully biocompatible," Bolton says. "No body fluids can get in, and nothing can be loosened or come out."

Applied Digital Solutions--which is trademarking the phrase "Get Chipped!"--has big plans for its little device. In the next few years, it wants to add sensors that will read your vital signs--pulse, temperature, blood sugar and so on--and a satellite receiver that can track where you are. The company makes a pager-like gadget called Digital Angel that does both those things, and its engineers are doing their darnedest to cram Digital Angel's functions into a package small enough to implant. Once they do, VeriChip will be very powerful indeed. That's one of the reasons the Jacobses want to get involved. "There are endless possibilities," says Derek. "For me it's marvelous," says Leslie. "Every day I worry about my husband. We definitely feel it will make us all feel more secure."

Security is part of the VeriChip business plan. The company has already signed a deal with the California department of corrections to track the movements of parolees using Digital Angel. Seelig believes VeriChip could function as a theft proof, counterfeit-proof ID, like having a driver's license embedded under your skin. He suggests that airline crews could wear one to ensure that terrorists don't infiltrate the cockpit in disguise. "I travel quite a bit," he says, "and I want to make sure the pilots in that plane belong there."

Could the airlines or government really require pilots to get chipped? "I think we have a right to demand that," says Seelig. "Our lives are in their hands." It sounds extreme, but there are precedents. In the early '90s several states considered laws that would have required female child abusers and women on welfare to wear birth-control implants. The proposals were not very popular. "There's a feeling that technology has outpaced the policy process," says Steven Aftergood, a senior research analyst at the Federation of American Scientists. "We aren't in a position to apply these new devices with the wisdom and prudence that is needed."

Prudent or not, implant technology is racing ahead with bionic speed. Kevin Warwick, a professor of cybernetics at the University of Reading in England, is working on the next step. In a few weeks, he will receive an implant that will wirelessly connect the nerves in his arm to a PC. The computer will record the activity of his nervous system and stimulate the nerves to produce small movements and sensations; such an implant could eventually help a person suffering from paralysis to move parts of the body the brain can't reach. If all goes well, Warwick will put a companion chip in his wife Irena and let the two implants communicate with each other. "If I move my finger, she'll feel something," he explains. "We'll be closer than anybody's been before--nervous system to nervous system."

There are plenty of skeptics, but Jeffrey Jacobs is not one of them. "People have been worried about Big Brother for years," he says. "The three of us want to be part of not just this new technology but an evolution of humanity."

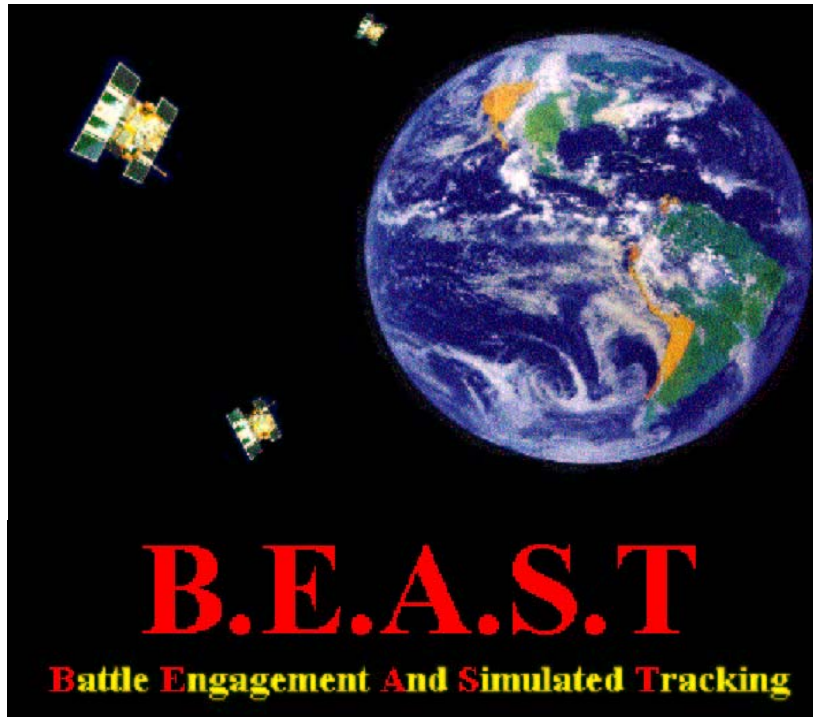

The FDA is expected to approve the Jacobses' implants within two months, and there are other ways to speed up the evolution. Two weeks ago, Applied Digital Solutions signed a deal to distribute VeriChips in Brazil, where kidnapping has become epidemic, especially among the rich and powerful. Government officials hope that VeriChips implanted in people considered at high risk could be used to track victims via satellite. "Here [in the U.S.] we're still dealing with FDA and privacy and civil-liberties issues," says Bolton. "But we're not stopping. We're going into South America right now!" Technology has a way of moving faster than legislation, and if it comes down to a race between cyborgs and Senators, guess who will win? Resistance is futile.

The Mark of the...

During the year 200X all mankind will be forced to receive a biochip implant somewhere in their body. While people will be informed that the biochip will be for purposes of identification, and daily transactions. The reality is that the implant is linked to a massive "Super Computer" system that will make it possible for government agencies to maintain a surveillance of all citizens by ground sensors and satellites. Even worse...once the biochips have been implanted, they will transform every man, woman, and child into a controlled slave. While believers of this particular scenario worry about such possibilities coming into actual implementation, the very reality that such technology really exists would seem to provoke a certain degree of anxiety in almost everyone. Not long ago, Science News reported that new electronic devices had been developed which made it possible for outside intelligence's not only to eavesdrop on the human brain, but "to influence the person's brain cell conversations and talk directly with individual brain neurons."

Biochip implants could be used in a great variety of human applications: "A number could be assigned at birth and follow that person throughout their entire life. It could be placed on the back of the right or left hand so that it would be easy to scan at stores. A few years ago, plans were initiated to begin producing a so called "smart card" which would encode all the basic facts about one's life and could be carried easily in a wallet or purse. A White House official who addressed a high tech conference sponsored by IBM, spoke approvingly of the smart card, but suggested an even better idea: "Place a chip in your ear. We need to go beyond the narrow conceptualization of the smart card and really use some of the technology that's out there", he said. Insert the chip into a person's brain and they instantly become a subservient New World Order slave. [Source: cannot be recalled, saved from an url long ago]

FACTS & THOUGHTS

Choose Tails: If you toss a penny 10,000 times, it will not be heads 5,000 times, but more like 4,950. The heads picture weighs more, so it tends to end up on the bottom more often. (A case of the 'tail before the head'.)

Keeping Fit: A United Parcel Service delivery person typically makes up to 300 pickups or deliveries a day. That compares to someone doing 600 sets of step aerobics a day. (They should be paying the Company to work there!)

Termites Love Forever: Termite queens are fertilized regularly by the same mate for life, unlike bee and ant queens, whose male partners die after the first and only mating. (The temerity to bee an ant male!)

A Clean Cloud?: A large cumulonimbus cloud can hold enough water for 500,000 baths. Most of the water droplets in a cloud re-evaporate and never reach the ground, only one-fifth actually falling as rain. (Saving some for next time.)

Too Polite: In a recent 5-year period, 24 residents of Tokyo died while bowing to other people. (Too strenuous an exercise! That's our excuse!)

A Great Way to Go: If you are afraid that you might die laughing — you are suffering from cherophobia. (Too many take this too seriously and have almost no chance of dying in this way!)

JOKES & RIDDLE

In Sunday School they were teaching how God created everything, including human beings. Little Johnny was particularly intent when they were telling how Eve was created out of one of Adam's ribs.

Later in the week, his mother noticed him lying down as if he were ill. "Johnny, what's the matter?"

Little Johnny replied in an anguished tone, "I have a pain in my side. I think I'm going to have a wife!"

LEADING UP TO THIS OR A PASS STEPPING-STONES

[Source: BT Magazine Staff writer Oneil McQuick]

Smart cards are one of the first revolutionary turns for worldwide acceptance of a chip. Here is what the experts had to say, "A smart card is a card that is embedded with either a microprocessor and a memory chip or only a memory chip with non-programmable logic. The microprocessor card can add, delete, and otherwise manipulate information on the card, while a memory-chip card (for example, pre-paid phone cards) can only undertake a pre-defined operation. Smart cards, unlike magnetic stripe cards, can carry all necessary functions and information on the card. Therefore, they do not require access to remote databases at the time of the transaction. Today, there are three categories of smart cards, all of which are evolving rapidly into new markets and applications..." Here are some and they can be identified with a goldfish symbol most like these.

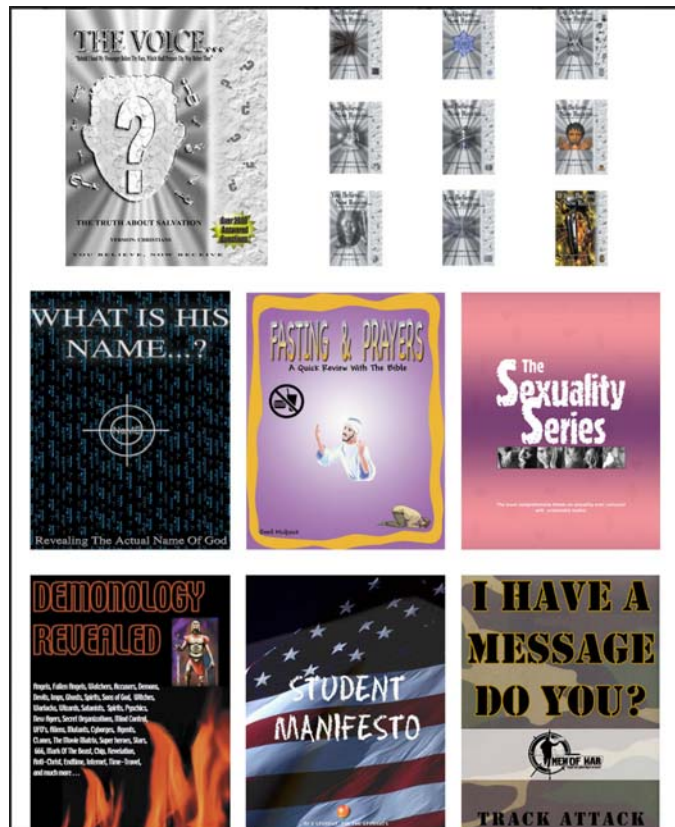

Along with these are bus passes, highway (turnpike) passes, train passes and even some passes to entertainment events with magnetic strips.

Then after these came things, like "Pay and Go." Just scan the cards at the counter and money is automatically deducted. The next step, with excuses as card and identity theft, will be making that card your hands. Major mega retailers would be the targeted outlets of these and hence forcing us to have it, if not by direct force. Not saying this is the case, but say a Wal-Mart is to pioneer this, what would happen is that because the goods are extra ordinarily low and has become a dependency of most, people would have to choose to buy there or other retailers without the chip technology. Though you would have the choice to buy there, you simply cannot buy anywhere else and live, for the goods there are the cheapest and most economic. If per say, you choose to buy at another retailer, the food and necessities amassed couldn't allow for survival and you either choose to starve or buy from one of these retailers with the chip technology; these would get breaks for having it and those without plagued with taxes and tariffs. Remember, the mark of the beast is a choice, "And that no man might buy or sell, save he that had the mark, or the name of the beast, or the number of his name" (Rev 13:17). But seems direct force by the nature of the choice. So what will happen is that we will start producing new slaves (controlled indirectly). Pray that wont be the case with companies such as Wal-Mart, for I shop there, advise others to buy the MP3 CD player there for the LIM CD and I love to shop there, for as they say, "Always low prices, always." Then again, though the Waltons or CEO's of these mega marts might be big and mighty fallen ones, they can be force to subvert their entities to the ploy of the Anti-Christ; if not already, especially under the new product tagging with this smart bar code to every product that is even traceable when it leaves the store. So what would hinder this is not a hope of these fallen angels leaders and mega merchants not giving in, but the prayers of the saints, the prayers of you and I, God hears and deliver us; and if when such a time later comes, "Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil: for thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff they comfort me. Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies: thou anointest my head with oil; my cup runneth over" (Psalms 23:4-5). In others words, God can sustain through any terrible event and if you must, "loved not [YOUR] their lives unto the death" (Rev 12:11) and refuse this chip.

DIGITAL ENUMERATION

[Source: Moody Magazine]

Dr. Hanrick Eldeman, Chief Analyst of the Common Market Confederacy in Brussels, has revealed that a computerized restoration plan is already under way to straighten out world chaos. A crisis meeting in early 1974 brought together Common Market leaders, advisers and scientists at which time Dr. Eldeman unveiled "the Beast". The Beast is a gigantic three-story computer located in the administrative building of the headquarters of the Common Market. That monster is a self-programming computer that has more than one hundred sources distributing entries. Experts in programming have perfected a plan that will handle by computer all of the world's trade.

This master plan would imply a system of digital enumeration of each human being of the earth. Thus the computer would give each inhabitant of the world a number to be used for each purchase or sale, removing the problem of present credit cards. This number would be invisibly tattooed by laser, either on the forehead or on the back of the hand. This would establish a walking credit card system. And the number could be seen only through infrared scanners, installed in special verification counters or in business places.

VeriChip: Miniaturized, Implantable Identification Technology With Multiple Medical, Security and Emergency Applications.

How Small It Looks

The VeriChip can provide medical and identity information when scanned.

How VeriChip Works

An implantable, 12mm by 2.1mm radio frequency device, VeriChip is about the size of the point of a typical ballpoint pen. It contains a unique identification number and other data. Utilizing an external scanner, radio frequency energy passes through the skin energizing the dormant VeriChip, which then emits a radio frequency signal containing the identification number. The number is displayed by the scanner and transmitted to an FDA compliant secure data storage site by authorized personnel via telephone or Internet. The VeriChip insertion procedure can be performed in an outpatient, office setting, requiring only local anesthesia, a tiny incision and perhaps a small adhesive bandage. The foremost brand is called Digital Angel.

The Digital Angel Personal Safety and Location System includes:

- Clip-on system monitor - Quick Start Guide
- ThermAlert Watch - Wall charger
- Auto charger

Here Are Some Of The Benefits, They say:

Safeguarding Your Business Assets:

- Fleet management
- Vehicle, equipment or product theft, reporting and recovery
- Tracking high-value packages and containers
- Monitoring parolees
- Tracking livestock and endangered species

- Monitoring nuclear waste, monitoring remote water reservoirs

Safeguarding Personnel:

Personnel safety and security can be improved by equipping those on the move with compact, lightweight monitors that:

- Pinpoint their location
- Monitor their physical condition
- Report on critical environmental changes

Advanced Biosensor Technology:

Medical system biosensors, worn close to the body, will report:

- Pulse
- 3-lead ECG
- Blood pressure
- Blood chemistry (Oxygen)
- Body temperature
- Core temperature

Additional sensors will be added in the near future as they become commercially available.

The Digital Angel System Enables You To:

- Locate a loved one or pet easily
- Find out quickly if someone has an emergency situation, has fallen or has wandered away
- Safeguard seniors, children – all family members

Nancy Nisbet

Here is what she had to say, after implanting the chip: "I am interested in human relationships with technology and human relationships mediated by technology. The development of relationships with technology and through technology has, perhaps, never been so easy or seductive. From the ability to customize the computer's appearance to our personal tastes to our convenient and intimate conversations through email and chat, our sense of self, both in relationship to technology and to others, is shifting.

Through my art works I seek to investigate this shifting sense of self and perforate understanding of one's own identity. I am particularly interested in the effects of increasing access to and expanding uses of the Internet and other digital technologies. With respect to on-line activities, there are a few areas of interest to me; perceptions of the physical body's relationship to identity, evolving communication styles, and new experiences of time and space. I also want to seek out reciprocal effects of our relationships with technology. For example, does my shifting understanding of my body's relationship to my identity on-line influence my perception of my embodied identity off-line?"

Nisbet, 34, purchased the chips from a veterinary clinic -- they are commonly used to identify livestock and pets. And after several rejections, she finally found a doctor willing to implant them in her body. (Microchips haven't been approved for human use in either the United States or Canada when this was recorded.)

INSPIRED BY SEPTEMBER 11

[Source: cannot be recalled, saved from an url long ago]

In September, Applied Digital Solutions implanted its first human chip when a New Jersey surgeon, Richard Seelig, injected two of the chips into himself. He placed one chip in his left forearm and the other near the artificial hip in his right leg.

"He was motivated after he saw firefighters at the World Trade Center in September writing their Social Security numbers on their forearms with Magic Markers," Bolton said. "He thought that there had to be a more sophisticated way of doing an identification."

Applied Digital said Seelig, who serves as a medical consultant to the company, has now had the chips implanted in him for three months with no signs of rejection or infection. Ordinarily, the company said, the chips would be implanted in a doctor's office under local anesthesia.

Applied Digital's executives said the ability to inject the chips opens up a variety of RFID applications in high-security situations, as well other types of human identification systems. The chips, they said, could be implanted in young children or in adults with Alzheimer's disease, to help officials identify people who can't identify themselves.

But the company is backing away from involuntary identification applications, such the tracking of prisoners or parolees. "We are advocating that this technology be totally voluntary," Bolton said.

Whether the technology will boost the market for RFID chips remains uncertain. Industry analysts had assumed that by now RFID would constitute a far larger market than its current, $900 million annual tally.

A consortium of major manufacturers has sought to push the technology as a replacement for bar codes in everyday products ranging from cereal boxes to shaving cream cans, but the cost hasn't dropped low enough to make that feasible. More recently, a group led by the European Central Bank began work on embedding RFID chips in the euro bank note, but the chip category has yet to find its killer app.

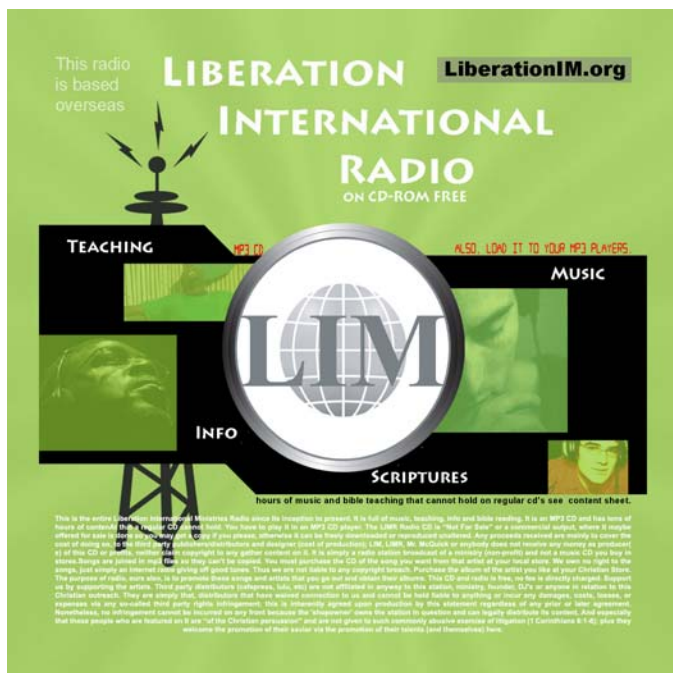

Applied Digital nonetheless has high hopes for its RFID technology. The publicly held company's stock did not fare well last year, plummeting from a high of $3 a share on Feb. 7 to 11 cents per share on Sept. 17. But its per-share stock price jumped to 50 cents from 38 cents after the company announced the VeriChip.

THE MARK OF THE BEAST MIGHT JUST BE THE ULTIMATE SATANIC INSERT!

[Source: Cutting Edge Ministries]

"Inserts are just about anything that gets inserted under the skin or into the body that has a demon, and sometimes, physical poisons (the most common is cyanide or mercury) attached to it." ["Becoming A Vessel Of Honor In The Master's Service", p. 103]. Let us stop here for a moment to consider the shocking information we have just received from this doctor who has ministered specifically to people coming out of Satanism through the glorious work of Jesus Christ. Prior to an insert being placed into the body, it has received an incantation or a spell that attaches a demon to the insert! Thus, when a person receives such an insert, they have just received a demon into their body, somehow magically, supernaturally attached to the insert! If Antichrist used this type of insert, placing it into the right hand or the forehead of the peoples of the world, he would have a most powerful tool by which to control all the people from that moment on! Perhaps this is the major reason people worship Antichrist so completely, and resist the Divine Judgments designed to bring them to repentance. Suddenly, I more completely understand the Great Tribulation Period a whole lot better.

For many years, I had struggled with the concept that, when Antichrist arises, the huge majority of the peoples of the world shall follow him like lemmings follow each other over a cliff. How can this be, especially in a technologically advanced country like the United States, Canada, Australia, or Europe? Now, I can better understand this dilemma; if huge numbers of people, in every continent in the world, possess Satanic inserts in their body at the time of the appearance of Antichrist, they will be under the influence of at least one demon, if not more. These demons could then exert a powerful force, or influence, over the thinking and the emotions of the person in whom they cohabit. Thus, the demon(s) inhabiting tens of millions of people worldwide will rise up to demand that person follow Antichrist; or, more likely, the demon(s) will cause that person to have tremendous feelings of love and devotion for Antichrist, thus making their loyalty that much easier. [sounds similar to the previously discussed cyborg and Internet dilemma]

"I think it is no accident the gay movement has popularized ear rings for men. What effect does the placement of such ear rings have in a non-homosexual young man? I would be very concerned about this if I were a young man. I am not saying that all jewelry is demonic. However, some of it is." If the person performing the piercing of the ear, or the eyelids, or any other part of the body, is a Satanist, he could have previously "blessed" each "insert", so that, unbeknownst to the recipient, demons are ritually attached to the insert. That young man or woman could then be under the influence of the demon, without realizing it!

"Also, I heard from some higher craft members who have just recently come to Jesus, that these computer chips will be placed in driver's licenses and credit cards in the near future ... Are these micro-chips the 'mark of the beast'? I think they very well could be ... Please note, Scripture says the mark shall be received IN the hand or forehead, not ON. Could this be because the Lord knew an insert would be used rather than a simple surface mark? I suppose you could say that the 'mark of the beast' is the ultimate insert."

Once again, we can see such great evidences that our society is being conditioned to accept the Black Magic Satanism of Antichrist. It seems like we see "inserts" everywhere in our society today. We see earrings galore, plus rings in the nose, the eyelids, the tongue, the bellybutton, and some even in the private parts. If the person who is inserting these devices is a practicing Satanist, you could very well be at least afflicted and maybe demonically possessed without even being aware of it. Anyone who gives assents to be pierced gives Satan and his demons the "legal ground" they need to come on in and possess you.

Finally, remember that demonic possession does not generally give a person that uncontrollable falling down and writhing behavior most people associate with demon possession. Most possessed people act very normally most of the time. However, at the time of the demon's choosing, the possessed person will suddenly come under the control of the demon. I think the prime time in history for this sudden control to occur will be when Antichrist arises, and will factor very heavily in the vast majority of the peoples of the world accepting him. At that moment, all possessed people will suddenly be under the control of their demon masters.

Thus will be fulfilled the prophecy, "and all the world wondered after the beast. And they worshipped the dragon which gave power unto the beast: and they worshipped the beast, saying, Who is like unto the beast? who is able to make war with him?" [Revelation 13:3-4]

Now, I understand how it is that so many billions of people will fall all over themselves to worship Antichrist. Many will be possessed by different means, but possessed nevertheless. And, when the demon [or obeast] inside says, "worship him", the poor deluded and unsaved human being will comply.

I also believe the controversy over whether the Mark of the Beast will be IN or ON the skin may now be resolved. The Mark of the Beast will be just the last in a long line of "Satanic Inserts", and the most effective. Further, it will be backed by the ultimate in Satanic Black Magic power. [This use of inserts can be truly seen in a Movie called "Fortress." Truly, the End of the Age is very close.]

My question exactly, how on God's green earth are the unsaved going to get the gospel if we the Christians don't go and bring it to them. You don't even have to go far, they are at your work place, community, home, etc. Saints, stop warming the pews and get out and shine for Christ and exert some love to a fallen humanity. Of such, if you need guidance, L.I.M has created a prototype evangelism program that all ministries or individual can use; along with materials. It is called Men of War. WHY THE MARK OF THE BEAST IS DEADLY WRONG

Even if the chip is not the mark of the beast, once the biochips have been implanted, they will transform every man, woman, and child into a controlled slave. Or as one writer puts it "A New World Order Slave." The word of God finally warns and is even worse:

"If any man worship the beast and his image, and receive his mark in his forehead, or in his hand, The same shall drink of the wine of the wrath of God, which is poured out without mixture into the cup of his indignation; and he shall be tormented with fire and brimstone in the presence of the holy angels, and in the presence of the Lamb: And the smoke of their torment ascendeth up for ever and ever: and they have no rest day nor night, who worship the beast and his image, and whosoever receiveth the mark of his name. Here is the patience of the saints: here are they that keep the commandments of God, and the faith of Jesus" (Rev 14:9-12).

"And the first went, and poured out his vial upon the earth; and there fell a noisome and grievous sore upon the men which had the mark of the beast, and upon them which worshipped his image" (Rev 16:2).

"And the beast was taken, and with him the false prophet that wrought miracles before him, with which he deceived them that had received the mark of the beast, and them that worshipped his image. These both were cast alive into a lake of fire burning with brimstone" (Rev 19:20).

Simply say NO to that mark!!!
