The Victimized Aggressor

Kindness is the Sun
Kindness is the flower
Kindness is the sum
Of knowledge and its power.

"You know, I can and I bet many people could relate to your experience. Plus that kind of well spoken honesty is so rare. It may not seem rare to you, but sensitive people never think it is that rare to be that honest with oneself not so much about "what is absolutely true" but how one really feels, which is often very telling of what is really going on as we learn to express and digest these feelings at best in the presence of someone, if only God, who is willing to listen and enjoy admiring, as a reflection of themselves, the everlasting living wisdom of the human Soul, what I think is the greatest "method" of healing there is, one for which no one could really charge money and gain something so much more priceless than mere credits to buy food.

"In my experience, I know what it is like to have someone close reflect back to me my greatest fears about my own supposed weaknesses as a human being or, most acutely, "as a man". But one's fear of weakness does not mean it is a weakness. Most people hold themselves up to an impossible and equally nebulous standard, whether they have had a role model or not. There is just no and no need for comparison, I feel, though that does not always stop us.

"What I mean is that in my experience there is a part to the "abuse" that is a reflection of our fears of weakness (what is really a strength that has not consciously survived impossibly narrow cultural "standards" that absolutely nobody meets but tries to in the absence of any better conditions in which to develop their sense of self and world) and part is their projection of their own similar fears; so there can be some understanding there both ways.

"I trust that over time you will realize that no one is to blame for the breakup of your marriage. Chances are, she had no more idea of how to be your wife than you had as to how to be her husband, though if I may say I think it was more her issues than yours that ended the relationship, not that she doesn't likely have every good and meaningful reason for those issues - they just were not things she was ready to deal with that could appreciate your patience, sensitivity and willingness to help. She didn't need a man. She needed a trained counselor and, only in that case, then also a supportive husband.

"She probably chose you for a husband, a fine choice, because she felt safe with you and associated being a good wife and mother with her idea of you fulfilling an impossible set of conditions - solving all her anxieties about herself. It sounds like you helped provide her with a relationship that was safe enough for her old traumas to surface but not safe enough for her want to address them with you or with anyone else, in which case this points to a profound developmental disorder that probably goes back to her childhood, a realm that probably contains the person or persons she really has all this rage towards, people she in fact needs to betray to help herself and for the sake of anyone else she ever tries to be close to, for the sake of her own children.

"If that description of your ex is correct, it sounds like she may have a developmental aversion to so many traumatic feelings (perhaps around her father) that this habitually gets projected onto the closest person to her, that of aversion to and aggression toward yourself. The psychodynamics are completely different when someone has a lot of repressed aggression (from an original trauma having nothing to do with you).

"All relationships will bring up emotions - that's Life and a good part of it when people can manage to be reasonable with one another. But for her it sounds like she is so unable and may have so developed to avoid processing her emotions that any possibility of dealing with them or you was not even a consideration for her - the reason for which she projected them onto you. She was so mean, in other words, because you were so good, hard as that may be to believe.

"Basically, you sound like you did the honourable things by giving her space. But it would have never been enough, especially since pushing you to accept or to have to accept conditions that were not fair to you or any human being without being able to speak with you about how she felt was a "deal breaker" in my opinion. When a psychotic is so out of touch with their own true needs and feelings (which make them vulnerable and thus too unsafe), then how can they even begin to show a consistent socially appropriate interest in or consideration for the reasonable needs and feelings of others? - and reasonable demands that they show such an interest soliciting nothing but the psychotic's state of victimization and aggressive even escalated aggressive resentment, even pathological hatred, a psychotic delusion from which they themselves are the primary victim. In my family, demands I made in this regard, relating to extensive life-altering injuries, were treated as though I had and they had to endure and be patient with my "mental illness" or "social problems", even, in one case, problems relating to having had a "particularly hard time with family issues."

"In fact, their family coping mechanism/psychosis/sacred story is so developmentally and cellularly ingrained and entrained in them that my behaviour, words, feelings and attitude must, ironically enough, be as confusing and stressful to them as theirs is to me. (Whenever my father would attack people who triggered his psychosis - by attempting to set reasonable social boundaries or simply looking hurt - the rest of my siblings would cease to take an interest in such people but to tacitly condone my father's aggression, which aggression had to be for "some reason" after all - they, like he, were being "victimized". This is part of the protective psychosis, a part of how their brains stay safe in a psychotic family tradition.)

"Since she cannot process or even cognize her own emotional pain, much less be conversant about her own real motivation, to avoid painful emotions and the tremendous personal lack of safety this must cause for her when her normal coping mechanisms of control and compulsion fail, she could not take much of an interest in your emotions. When we learn to avoid and self-immolate to avoid our own emotions (especially as a developmental imperative for our own survival - from psychotic parental conditions), then it is that much easier and even necessary at times to dismiss and mistreat the feelings of others, even our own children. The result can be very aggressive, habitually cruel, even.

"Such a person cannot take a reasonable socially appropriate interest in the feelings or needs of others, their reasonable feedback to cruel behaviour only inciting more cruelty and a dismissive and cavalier attitude as in "you are not OK (to take exception to tone of voice or any signs of unprovoked aggression), but really I am not OK". (really not OK)

"This is put under the general subject of "alcoholism" or alcoholic personality type, of which I have written much myself as a means to regain my own equilibrium with just such relationships, most of which gain a distance and orientation to my life (as I expect in yours) that, given there will always be great love, are exactly the way things should be. Perhaps that is why I can relate to it so well.

"Like I said before, I don't think she is a truly bad person, only that she needed counselling and, only in the event of the safety of a trained therapist, a supportive husband.

"My friend, I don't think you could have done much more. And I am very sorry you have had to go through this all.

"I am guessing this is what she does with men. I would wonder how old was her oldest before the end of her first marriage. The eldest child may be a trigger, according to my friend, Gina, as certain aged children can trigger trauma from the parent's own past at that same age.

"When the brain is hurt it cannot learn to process emotions it needs to learn to gain socially appropriate rapport with an intimate partner. The brain then becomes routinely overly aggressive and cavalier, alternating between what looks like fear, rage, and indifference to the feelings of others.

"We are talking about a truly vulnerable person who did and likely does struggle to be "in control" and "in power" at all times.

"Anyway, that is just my take on things from what little I have read. Hers is that of an abnormal psychology, which can play havoc with someone who is trying to reason everything out. It isn't reasonable, which is probably why you are trying to figure out what you could have possibly done to solicit that kind of aggression and ambivalence from your ex wife.

"Hers sound like signs of intense emotional or sexual trauma.

"On another note,

"Great work. Journaling or writing can bring the truth to light. The simplest explanation is usually the right explanation, and the most sane explanation, however improbable it may seem. It sounds to me like you are not just recovering from the end of a marriage, which is trying enough, but also from some severe emotional abuse.

"When someone says "you are just too sensitive", that is a big red flag to me, along with everything else.

"Too sensitive is crying while watching a squirrel open a nut or a dolphin clap its fins together, and even then I would not think sensitivity was that crazy a response.

"A psychotic person does not know and does not want to know how you feel about it, because the aggression is part of a whole developmental coping system used to protect them from intense emotional anguish and physical tension, tension that is often relieved, but not exclusively, through sexual promiscuity, drug use or any other compulsive or controlling behaviours.

"Sounds like the marriage got to a point that triggered, through a natural increase in intimacy, deep safety issues, a level of aversion toward her own repressed emotional pain she painted onto another person, you, in order to cope with it. She probably does not even know she is doing that.

"I bet she just wants to "forget about" anything that went on between you that involved aggression or intense episodes. And she is likely very interested in supporting any "sacred story" or explanation that involves you being the "bad guy", on top of which she seeks to avoid, and you being the "bad guy" serves to help her avoid her own accountability for her behaviour, compulsively aggressive or victim-like behaviour that ultimately stems from something awful she had once had to endure as a child - not from you.

"I don't mean to suggest this ties everything up in a nice little bow.

"Whatever it turns out to be, the personal story and experience of discovery is necessary. It's about all of us. There probably isn't a person alive who has never had to deal with a totally unreasonable person we were "trapped with" whether it be a boss, a spouse or a parent.

"I love it all. If I am even nearly right, perhaps there is some understanding we could share there. If not, the truth sounds like it is becoming clear, and that is all one could ask.

"The story itself has a kind of genius to it, not to mention your willingness to get out there and date or even think about dating is quite remarkable considering, as well as write about your experiences in a multifaceted plot that brings the reader right into your own creative process, sliding back and forth around a timeline just aching to be grist for the proverbial mill going on in every person's head alive.

"For my part, I have free eBook on my experiences with alcoholic-type people on my website at lulu.com/rayn. Feel free to download it as a reference; it is broken up into quite a few chapters."

Rare would be the occasion in our respective societies to find a single family without a history of psychotic behaviour.

I have met many throughout my Life. It is because I have met so many psychotics that I have made a personal study of it for my own safety and that of others. However, I do not wish to cultivate even more psychotic aggression. The only way I have known I was on the right track was because my discoveries (mostly in the form of observations of "what" which I suggest, when thorough and honest enough, also tell us why) led to a greater more compassionate understanding of the nature and prevalence of psychosis in our World and in our families.

Why is there so much psychosis? So much so, that many people reading this now will realize they have not even noticed it, on the one hand, and have noticed it acutely on the other, accepting it for lack of any ready means to understand or fathom it, much less respond to it in any way that does not promote more of the same. As such, psychosis has many names. In my work I link it with alcoholism. Any study of the one is a study of the other.

In one small town where I lived for several years, I encountered 10 confessed and unconfessed psychotics working in the health and wellness industry alone, including doctors, chiropractors, bank managers, Naturopaths (most of whom, I have found, are woefully under trained and not nearly as "holistic" as they claim – what we really want is "Holistic Integrative Doctors", who now exist and are growing in numbers - imagine someone "muscle testing" you - a widely scientifically refuted technique - in order find out how many different "natural drugs" you need, drugs they are selling - now that's a selling technique on the order of any cult) and healers of all kinds. I couldn't imagine the families some of these people had come from, and most of these people would be called "well to do" in our society. In case you are wondering, my conclusions about these people were based on first-hand experience, confessions from the psychotic themselves, and details related to me by people, sometimes relatives, close to them over the course of lengthy acquaintance. When I later talk about one such person committing sexual harassment upon a friend of mind, I am not just going from her accounts and visible distress, though that was ample. She was a single mom afraid for her job. If there was a young woman in this married owner's life, his arm was around them. And as someone who has had close acquaintance with sexually deviant people (they are hurting, yes, in their way), I know the difference in attitude of someone who has a mature and immature set of boundaries with the opposite sex, though perhaps it does not sound very convincing to some people if I say that I was not surprised. This man also had a serious drug addiction and likely alcoholism (he and his wife would routinely spend weekends drinking with their children when they were in town from university). One of his daughters was a known prostitute abroad, something he had confided to my friend.

And this same man ran a popular health food store, a "pillar of the community". It was not uncommon for him to fly off into a rage while minding the store. He clearly had no idea how to manage his desires and emotions while taking a consistently appropriate interest in the needs and feelings of others. He reported very stressful conditions to me in his Life as a child and young adult, from which he would escape to Mexico where he could indulge his love of drugs and drink. He was and is a psychotic. And so was and is his wife. And I can't imagine this is easy on either of them, let alone their employees, many of whom, including my friend, were also psychotics.

When I say bank manager, I am not just drawing upon my own firsthand experience, which is considerable. I am also going on similar experiences related to me by other people whom I know in the community, people whose concerns I brought to this bank manager, one involving a well known businesswoman withdrawing all her accounts from the bank based on what can only be called psychotic behaviour bordering on persecution, to which the manager had no response whatsoever, not even an apology. What is just as considerable in all the situations I have and could recount is that the psychotic involved is usually in all other respects a paragon of affability and professionalism. They usually do not mean to harm anyone. What is rather psychotic, however, is their total lack of sympathetic concern upon learning that they have hurt anyone or lost accounts from the bank and so on and so on, all of which is usually "somebody else's problem".

Every family has psychosis. To explain why it is so prevalent is to describe the actual versus idealized effects of the conditions of our conception, birth, development and career through the mental and physical atmosphere of the World today and over the course of the last several thousands years, which will also come to explain why we idealize and accept these conditions while remaining so willfully ignorant of their Life-changing and even deadly effects to all our lives, our children, our children's children, and all Life on Earth; we get into the nature of our own minds with respect to where they are, the actual effects of our behaviours, and the pristine history of conditions in which humans need not and did not suffer at all, distance from and amnesia of which is perhaps the most causative trauma of all and one we all make choices today about that either address this cause or agitate it.

This latter factor would still be completely beyond my ken, as vital as it is, were it not for the masterful works of Russian author, Vladimir Megré, portals into the very conditions we most need to increase the joy of all human existence, those created by a truly holy being known as Anastasia. These books are, to me, the most and hopefully, for our own sake and that of all Life, will likely be known as the most valuable of the 21st century. I kid you not.

According to one Master Doctor I have known, his response to the prevalence of psychotic behaviour in our society was this: "It's normal now."

That is pretty clear.

To conflate his countless years of experience and research (his work has been consulted by the United Nations), the human immune system is the most challenged organ of the human energy system and faces the greatest threats to our continued existence today, facing a total full-spectrum chronic (from conception) assault all our lives, an assault in the realm of every dimension of human existence.

Personally, I treat psychosis and alcoholism (which are the same thing) as an auto-immune disorder. What is an auto-immune disorder? When the body determines that something, anything, is a foreign invader and is unable to process it properly, it creates inflammation of various kinds (around the heart, the joints, the organs, the gums, the skin, the kidneys, the lungs) in order to create conditions to help deal with the invader, like a mosquito bite. The question of an auto-immune disorder is one, I feel, of degree. In this case, the invader is so prevalent and so difficult to deal with (perhaps a constant onslaught of, say, milk or animal fat – 60 percent of people cannot digest milk properly beyond infancy) that the inflammation is such as the body is sending out a request for help, it is creating so severe degrees of inflammation it is as though the immune system is attacking itself and anyone else it can find, usually those, I have found, that are in the best or strongest position, on some level, to be of some assistance, much to the shock of most people attacked by a psychotic of any kind.

What the chronic inflammation, which is considerable (say, to alcohol, sugar or milk) is aiming to do is send out signals to help create or get your help in creating conditions safe, restricted and gentle enough to start to make new and better choices with respect to our diet, environment, our relationships, and our lives. In other words, the immune system is so inundated with invaders, according to one's own individual emotional and physical makeup, that it cannot “just deal with it by itself”; the immune system needs our help, it needs us to take a look at the situation and gather the right information about what the body is saying to make new decisions about our body, our environment and our lives; and the immune system or auto-immune disorder is doing this by creating such high degrees of inflammation in our body and in our lives so as to force us to help create the right conditions to address the actual cause. This is not and never just an individual issue. As with any major disease, this is a family issue and a social issue. It certainly occurs in all families I have ever known.

The immune system does this so much or so well, for the invasion is of such a magnitude of danger, that it looks like the immune system is attacking itself and anyone else. What we have to ask ourselves in this situation is, What is so vitally important to our health (and that of all the Earth) that it is requiring our own immune-system to create so much inflammation that it looks as though we are attacking ourselves? – which in some way, we are! The immune system has triggered an auto-immune disorder level of inflammation because we are hurting ourselves on a chronic basis, and the body needs to alert us and has created conditions, therefore, that serve to alert us to this for a level of enjoyment of Life greater than ever, to address a probably much more Life-threatening habit we cannot even notice and have not even noticed otherwise; we have accepted something as normal or as a normal condition that is not and should not be considered normal for our own highest enjoyment of all that Life is.

The immune system is trying to save our lives in every sense. Such a person does attack others. However, the situation is so uncomfortable and dangerous that the immune system is also reaching out to these same people it attacks (telling us they are attacking themselves and their own emotional being, that which is essential to gain necessary greater self and health awareness for the sake of one's self and everyone else, so vital and powerful is human health (and Happiness) to all Life!), reaching out to their immune systems for help in addressing the core social, emotional and physical issues, for obviously the host body and community environment does not have the correct understanding about the appropriate conditions for the body or how to determine or create conditions whereby one can determine those conditions for one's self. Life, as with the immune system, is a vastly cooperative dynamic.

As such, having been attacked by so many psychotic and alcoholic-type people over the course of my life, my immune system has gone to work to help identify what is being said and what is going on, along with all the immune systems and spirits of all the people around me. This is why this book is here today, because of a vast system of cellular communication that underlies the health of our bodies, our families and the World.

A prominent example of mass social psychosis, made up of all the little psychotic things we do each day, is war. Who is really in command of war? How many people, choices and resources are necessary for war, and commanded by whom? A military commander? The president, you say? And who commands them, perhaps, Henry Kissinger? The head of the Committee on Foreign Relations? The Trilateral Commission? And who commands them, the United Nations' Secretary-General? Have you ever wondered why the de facto head of Canada, for instance, is called a Governor-General? And who commands them? Do we even know? Do they?

To quote from Vladimir Megré's Space of Love, Book Three of the Anastasia series,

"Anastasia's gone. She's gone deep into the taiga. She couldn't help leaving. If you try to go after her, you might get killed. You're not suited to the taiga. Besides, you've got to write some more. To fulfil your promise to her.'

"In order to write more, I've got to hear her answers to the many questions from my readers. Questions about children, about different religions...'

"Nobody'll find her now.'

"Why do you keep parroting: 'She can't be found! She can't be found!' I know where her glade is, I'll find her.'

"I tell you, you won't. Anastasia can't help but realise that there are people out to hunt her down.'

"What do you mean, they're out to hunt her down? Is somebody bribing the local hunters? Just like they pay you and Yegorych?'

"Me and Yegorych? No way! We try to persuade people not to interfere with her, not to alarm her. And if that doesn't work, we take them and let them off on the opposite shore. The local hunters can't be bribed; they've got laws and values of their own. They knew about Anastasia long before you came along. They've always treated her with great respect. They've been careful even when speaking about her amongst themselves. They don't like it when strangers show up in the taiga, and they're pretty good shots.'

"Then who could possibly hunt her down?'

"I think: whoever has led us into the condition we find ourselves in at this moment. And is still leading us.'

"Can you be more specific?'

"Each one of us has to work that out more specifically on their own.'

"But still, who do you have in mind? Someone like Boris Moiseevich?'

"He's just a tool. There's something we can't see that's playing with us. And Boris Moiseevich is starting to realise that now. And maybe the one who hired him has realised it, too."

Anastasia, Book Three, The Space of Love, Chapter Ten, "Work out your own happiness", by Vladimir Megré

One of the things that is so breathtakingly hard about dealing with psychotic people or family groups is that their behaviour can be so wildly inconsistent and show such extraordinary variation in extremes.

To start with, our cultural programming tells us to just be polite, to not say anything or to put a positive face on it - whatever else, don't tell anyone because you might be seen to be "judgemental" or "intolerant".

If there were a bomb inside a building, we would not think of abdicating our responsibility to warn others about the bomb in the building. But if a psychotic mentality is brooding behind closed doors, we are scared to tell anyone for fear of looking intolerant, or even "mad".

Because the behaviour of psychotic families is so widely varying. I have personally known store owners of a Health Food Store no less who presented a tremendously kind community-oriented capacity - all of it quite sincere I am sure. These same people had serious drug and alcohol issues. Their children were into drugs and prostitution and the husband, who ran the store, was sexually assaulting a girlfriend of mine, a single mom no less who could not afford to lose her job.

The sheer variance in psychotic behaviour in families tends to culturally protect them from public discovery. That had and have run that business, and run it well, for almost twenty years I believe.

We need to dispel the myth that alcoholism or psychosis is only a problem among under-functioning adults; it is just more visible among those who do not possess the means or money to hide cover it up as well.

However, psychosis and alcoholism, I would argue, exists in equal proportion among all areas of every society and has through the ages.

And such people, who emotionally always begin as victims, will almost always seem at first glance and play at and feel like the victims of any response to the negative anti-social manner with which they seek safety primarily from their own emotional aversions projected onto other persons upon whom that unleash their aggression, emotional and often sexual abuse. They are not seeking safety from their victim (who, albeit, may react badly to being mistreated and are responsible for their own degree of violence) so much as safety from their own emotional trauma, that which their brain has never learned to process as a developmental disorder caused by the same chronic trauma and thus which developmental disorder their entire mind and personality and brain as "made normal" until they get triggered, at which point it is as though the trigger (or intimacy, safety or person) is the original traumatic violator, whom they feel absolutely justified in treating with utmost fear, prejudice and aggression, using distorted lies and story telling to make it look like their victim is performing or under-performing in such a way as to justify their "retaliation" and "protection", in this way cultivating a host of social patsies to support and lend credence and force to the sacred story of violation of an innocent who is often so shocked and confused that, like most of us, they feel as though they are responsible in some way, on top of which the real psychotic will flip-flop and aim, as part of their constant pathological and developmental need to be "in control" and "in power" (many healers are psychotics), to "take full responsibility for everything", which means nothing more than a passing whim to them, as though the warm winds of sanity were passing through their brain now and then just to make things even more confusing.

And let us not forget that women emotionally and sexually abuse men as much, at least, as men emotionally and sexually abuse women; it is only that men report it far less. Statistics for Health Canada supports this.

An alcoholic-type personality will do anything, beyond your wildest comprehension, in order to deflect, flip around inside out and backwards, and redirect and displace accountability because their brains just cannot process the emotions necessary to form socially appropriate accountability for the most grossly inappropriate behaviour, that with which they are usually protecting themselves or others they are loyal to from socially appropriate accountability. Instead, they have huge physical and emotional tension as from an "outside threat". They, in fact, are their own greatest victims, that of their own psychotic delusion.

In fact, before their traumatized brains can even nearly form or even stand to come near any information or feedback that may lead them (or groups sympathetic to their "story", lie or state of mind) to nearly form any meaningfully reasonable comprehension of the enormous suffering they have caused or are routinely causing others by their pathological failure to take or even take any interest in any reasonable or reasonably consistent and socially appropriate interest in the feelings, words, safety or needs of others, their whole nervous system will send them signals to the effect that they are being or about to be monstrously attacked and threatened. This is a commando level of aggression and deflection. As such, such people are more than likely, the more harm they do to others as individuals or often as biopsychical groups, to accuse and create patsies to help them accuse their victims of the very things they themselves are doing, of the very same kinds of states of mind, from "bully" to "crazy", from "violent person" to "alcoholic" they themselves are demonstrating, to make others "pay the piper" for the original trauma to their brains and minds, other people they may even feel sorry for in other states of mind but whose often long term injuries they cannot and will not be able to connect to their own behaviour or attitudes or those of those around them.

Because their brains cannot process the emotions necessary to form a reasonable comprehension of the effects of their own violent behaviour, much less any accountability, the alcoholic-type (or psychotic) must try to create some kind of explanation in their own minds. These explanations take the form of stories and lies they tell others who become their patsies because most people would never guess what is really going on and because the alcoholic-type is usually genuinely distressed by the effects they have created in (what they call the "problems with") other people. Whole family traditions and unspoken rules can and do evolve to protect and nurture such lies above and beyond any particular family member. And anyone in any strata or profession of society can be an active part of this.

One of the things that is hard for people to believe (which is why so many pathologically lying alcoholic-type personalities are believed) is how a disease or type of behaviour so profoundly disturbing and harmful to all society could be practiced by otherwise seemingly healthy and high functioning people in similar percentages among every strata of society, even many people in the health care and education fields, people often attracted to "helping" fields where they need to come into contact with vulnerable people so they can feel "in control" around vulnerability, a physical tension they carry around which justifies all manner of little and big abuses. Such people are all about power and control and may even think this state of mind makes them not only healed but capable and even expert at healing others upon whom they project their own problems, often enough.

This is my experience of most all healers I have ever been to, from mainstream medicine to the so called "new age" and alternative realm - since there is often nothing terribly new about it, people taking woefully incomplete visions of Life and Man as a whole and forming incorrect theories based on a level of understanding of the total functionality of the visible and invisible human energy system (with all its infinite cosmic dynamics) that amounts to a weekend seminar compared to what could and should be known before presuming to make pronouncements about the health and well being of others, much less make invasive forays into their often vulnerable energy systems and chakras. Most of the results, I believe, are placebo effects created by the need to have someone, anyone, tell us about our own bodies and minds. Most people are well meaning. They are just mainly under qualified with a very low standard for what qualification there is at this particular stage in Man's history, that of, I feel, a truly new age. As such, many could not meet a higher qualification (which should take many years if not a lifetime) but are themselves looking for a quick fix / new belief system to compulsively impose upon others for their own selfish interests. They often have over aggressive and terror-stricken (though normalized) brains, causing a lack of true restfulness in their lives, a lack they fill or even feel they have resolved by "being a healer", with all the compulsive control and power over others this confers upon them. Also, this same brain-terror normalized into their brain and personality development causes them to make, more often than not, potentially dangerous erroneous assumptions and diagnoses due to their compulsive magical thinking (that of any abused child), a level of magical thinking only encouraged and rewarded by the fantasy, though not entirely useless, realm of "new age" self-help.

One healer told me so in so many words that "he would go out of his mind if he could not be a healer". This, I am sorry to say, is the norm in my experience with the whole range of alternative and mainstream healing, a level of compulsive aggression (among other compulsive and addiction disorders in their lives) and lack of true interest in others that rather disqualifies the "healer" for the role with which they most and most have to identify themselves - as psychotics need roles to play; they are the incompetent caretakers so aptly portrayed throughout the work of Charles Dickens, unable to engage and truly keep safe the true feeling intelligence of a child of every age, the besmirching of which is what most people are suffering from in the first place! As such, these same personality types tend to as aggressively avoid any feedback that may force them to undergo self-assessment involving emotions their brains cannot process without feeling overly threatened - a symptom they will tend to project onto their unsuspecting clients. This is the victimized aggressor. Charles Dickens covers this whole dynamic and character type extremely well, as this is not a new social illness by any stretch of the imagination and perhaps one of the most telling and invasive illnesses in our society, one I place under the subject of alcoholism.

Surprising what professional healers say quite often (and I have many, many stories), one life coach I met once was adamant about the fact as she saw it that there was nothing original to say in the world. She was speaking to myself and a close friend of mine, a philosopher and writer, telling him as he fed on a few small morsels of chocolate (he was hooked up to a respirator that was keeping him alive - he could barely swallow food) that he should think about the place in him "that he was really trying to fill". I couldn't make this stuff up if I tried. My friend was a real healer - he listened to people and joyed in their existence, in life. He even made this "life coach" feel good. He had that effect on everyone around him. He was just very, very kind. And, yes, he said some very profound things before he passed away peacefully, things he gave new life, a new opportunity to live and grow in the hearts of others - for wisdom to him, as it is to me, a living thing that is always new, for its own sake and that of all Life, when it does more than sit on a shelf or in a book - when it lives and is given an opportunity to live in us and our children beyond any bounds of our or their physical existence. Nothing new indeed.

Some may find it hard to believe. But anyone who has ever been around an alcoholic-type personality or family will know this very well. There is nothing you can do about it. It is beyond the capacity of the conscious mind to respond to. Typical responses are anger, confusion, sadness and despair, victimization, isolation and terror.

Often a liar or confidence trickster is so good at convincing others because they themselves are so convinced by their own trauma-based "magical thinking", a soft form of Schizophrenia where, instead of hearing voices, per se, they compulsively need to associate their stories and lies, really, with an outside or divine source whose authority they do not question or think anyone else will or even should question, either, a form of aggression (lying) that extends the trauma they themselves endured as a child, stunting brain growth.

This does not necessarily say anything about the validity of psychic abilities or "channeling", only that it could easily be presented as just such magical thinking and, ultimately, compulsive aggression.

They need not mean any harm, though they are themselves woefully deluded. As an experiment, I ordered a special device designed by two engineers in Arizona. This device, which had no moving parts, was supposed to create what they called "structured water" from regular chlorinated city water, using a special "vortex action" found in Nature.

The device had a money-back guarantee. So I ordered it and installed it under my sink. Since I have an allergic reaction to chlorine, it was clear to me right away that the device was not taking chlorine out of the water, nor, as they suggested, preventing chlorine from interacting with my body.

I called them. They were very friendly and agreed to refund my money in full. They were still utterly convinced in their device and stated that most people do not ask for a refund, which I believe. They did suggest, rather, that the only reason the device did not work for me was that "I did not believe it would work". In fact, I had been very interested in getting a clean source of water and didn't really believe that two engineers could be that mistaken about their own device. They went on to tell me that chlorine may indeed still be in the "treated" water, only that molecules of water created by the device were supposed to quarantine the "bad molecules" with the structured water molecule thus created by the device, showing its only positive effect when actually inside the body. Therefore, their theory could, interestingly enough, not be tested by objective means. Apparently, it only worked while the water was inside your body, though they said they were saving up to buy an electron microscope to study its effects further.

This is a good example of the magical thinking of which I speak. A confidence trickster (or alcoholic/psychotic) may likely be the most deluded victim of their own trauma-based magical thinking, those they compulsively prey on (much as a paedophile genuinely wants to "care for a child" and would "never hurt them") being perhaps just as much victims of their own tendencies to magical thinking either going into the "magical contract" or coming away from it in order to cope with the incomprehensible levels of aggression involved, aggression being as much a measure of the capacity of the mind to deceive itself and others (and to resist any information contradictory to that deception) as that of any overt intent to harm. In fact, I would argue that all confidence tricksters and alcoholics/psychotic aggressive types are themselves victims of that type of personality, since it is usually I believe a developmental adaptation to survive such aggressive psychological conditions in one's own childhood, conditions we do not have to look hard to find in society at large and ones which, in fact, inhibit the natural and healthy development of the human mind. So for many psychics, healers and other potential psychotics, these kinds of aggressive delusions are part of a compulsive coping mechanism and magical thinking to deal with their own thusly created physical and mental tension and trauma, that of brains prevented from developing the capacity to process enough emotion to gain a healthier sense of either their own needs and feelings or the needs and feelings of others in a socially appropriate and reasonably sound and ethical fashion, evidence of which they will very aggressively resist by projecting things onto others as though said others are "not OK" in some way, any way to deflect accountability, not because they are "bad" (though their actions may be extremely harmful and unethical) but because they are so mad.

It is my personal belief that this abnormal and extremely harmful though understandable coping mechanism/psychosis is one of the most virulent on Earth and goes far beyond the bounds of what is normally considered "alcoholism" and "drug addiction".

I have had psychics say things to me like, "you experienced some kind of fear around your birth" as do almost all children given our modern means of childbirth, terrifying agony is what most children go through, making them very docile to deal with thereafter for the most part.

I have had psychics say things like, "you have something you need to say" as though this does not apply to every single human being on Earth. This is like saying, "you have some sadness or anger".

I have had psychics say things like, "you are disconnected from spirit" and then tell me about how connected they are to spirit. If anyone was disconnected from the spiritual essence of Life, they would cease to exist, for spirit is existence. I should think that people can feel as though they are disconnected from spirit, which is a valid emotional experience, I should think anyone truly in a state of mind capable of taking a reasonable interest in the feelings of others (as suggested by one being a "spiritual healer" with all kinds of "special abilities" on their brochure) would wish to alleviate rather than insinuate such an impossible disconnectedness. However, I have found that such "spiritual healers", who themselves are absolutely convinced that they are gifted in the psychic arts, do not believe they even have to make any effort to demonstrate that they are, in fact, even sane enough let alone gifted and trained enough to deal with the spiritual trust of others, and certainly the unquestioning trust of their clients does nothing to dissuade them of this potentially very dangerous belief.

That I had clearly express some reluctance to contract to pay this particular psychic for her services until, as I said to her, "I was mindful that she had the particular skills I required", clearly played some role in her complimentary "psychic reading" about "spiritual disconnectedness", a form of normal threat-response anti-social aggression that is pathological to psychotics of the alcoholic-type, so invested are they with the roles they feel they need to play to manage their physical tension, tension created by the brain's trauma-based inability to process emotions necessary to demonstrate consistent socially-appropriate interest in the feelings and needs of others. To wit, the importance of her role to her was more important and, more to the point, "more spiritual" than my reasonable need to assess not whether she was psychic or not (that is only something I questioned very seriously after our very disturbing encounter) but whether her particular abilities fit with my particular needs. In her mind, her interests could not co-exist with my own. In fact, strangely enough, my interests seemed to conflict with her role and even provoked an aggressive threat-response from her.

When your aggressor plays the victim of you, what do you do?

Take a step back and educate yourself. Ask yourself, "What I am actually observing here?" forgetting why. The why will soon appear.

Always remember, you are not just surviving it. You are also making a vital contribution to our understanding of this and much else besides for the sake of all Life on Earth. For the ways the brains of psychotic alcoholic-type human beings treat other psychotic or non-psychotic human beings is analogous to how all Mankind treats the Goddess of Mother Earth, the way what I call the culture of an alien Mother Ship treats Man and Man's pristine culture of the Earth and the Birth and Future of all Mankind. For this reason, if She were to undermine all artificial energy systems, this would not be to punish or harm Man but to protect Herself, Her own Body, Heart and Soul and that of the whole inheritance, health and Life of all Mankind.

In fact, let's look at the striking similarities between a psychotic's behaviour toward others and Man's generalized behaviour towards Man and all Life on Earth:

- 1) Deceptive storytelling that aids in the trauma-based evasion of any information or education that might lead to reasonable accountability for
- 2) As though threat-based compulsive need for unreasonable and often unprovoked aggression and violence toward all Mankind and all creatures and living systems on Earth, even those upon which Man's very existence is utterly dependant and
- 3) An as though inherited diminished capacity to demonstrate a reasonably consistent socially-appropriate interest in the needs, feelings, and voices of all Life on Earth, including the Soul of Mother Earth Herself and those of our very own children.
- 4) Enhanced tendency and capacity to escalate aggression, aggressive disinterest in and deceptive storytelling about the feelings and needs of others when confronted with the feelings and/or concerns stimulated by that very compulsive aggression (and aggressive disinterest and deceptive storytelling) used to pathologically avoid a socially appropriate interest in one's own ultimately growth-enhancing emotions and the emotions of others.

The key being that a psychotic-type is unable or has a significantly reduced capacity to form a reasonable apprehension of key social situations and conflicts because it would be necessary for their brains to process certain emotions to form such a reasonable and meaningful apprehension of key social situations and conflicts - and their brains cannot process and their whole lives are lived, body, mind and personality, to avoid processing such emotions as though an invasive threat to their entire existence. This results in the type of chronic tension and compulsive behaviour that can include but need not nearly always include drug and alcohol addiction and other risk-taking behaviour "for fun". On top of which, it need be mentioned that no healthy socially-appropriate trust can be formed or maintained with such a family member or friend unless you yourself are psychotic or adopt some kind of psychotic belief system or sympathies. Such a person may say, "you're my wife" or "you're my brother" or "you're my daughter" but have no working skills as to maintaining any healthy trust in such a relationship, acting threatened and thus aggressive, even moralizing about their consequent lack of connection or intimacy.

Such brains have reduced development and blood flow due to childhood trauma, usually from parents with just this psychology, and therefore reduced cognitive function. Their communication skills can be reduced as well, which has often been a tell tale sign to me, even though such a reduction may seem only quirky at first.

Such a brain, one that cannot process emotions enough to form a reasonable apprehension of a consistent range of social situations and conflicts, is aggressive by nature and will likely form relationships where aggression of this nature is a key and even defining component, precipitating rather more than less of the very social situations and conflicts one would most need to form a meaningful and reasonable apprehension of for one's own sake and that of one's own children, the very situations they are most unable to form a meaningful and reasonable apprehension of because this would mean they would have to process emotions necessary to form such a meaningful and reasonable apprehension as may assign adult accountability to themselves and others, which they cannot.

Magical thinking and deceptive stories (such as everything and everyone is good and filled with love and light or "they are really a good sort" or "they love children", which they probably do) will be used to mask their disability, their minds offering rationalizations that minimize the reasonable accountability of everyone involved and mask the lack of ability to process emotions in their brains (and the subsequent tension and trauma) with often euphoric spiritual generalizations, what stand for "love" in their minds (which other people can pick up as provoking an enormous sense of dis-ease with the levels of exaggeration - i.e. one such mother told me, after I spent a few hours with her and her son, that I would be a "perfect father" and went on and on about how I was like "the perfect father type" - we had only spent a few hours together, ever, in total. Perhaps you will get the tone in which these declarations were made when I add that in the same breath she notified me that there were spaceships coming to save the Earth, she could see the "lights of the Arcturians" and that all one had to do was "Love everyone unconditionally". She had, in fact, as many psychotics do, a very sublime view of God and Nature which I still rather like and agree with. I suggested that this was perfect, as well as, if presented with a visible sign of abuse, as she was presented with multiple signs of abuse with respect to her niece and nephew (those of her traumatized and psychotic sister), then sometimes that meant that you had to actually do something about it more than just "sending Love", like call social services. She ignored me utterly, having no idea why that would be any of her business, much less any of mine, and instead rationalized why the abuse wasn't that bad or even really existent - she had told me more than she expected to - her body's way of trying to gain access to immense emotional content and, ultimately, healing and development of herself and, by extension, all the world that she was not prepared for.)

I have witness just such deflections (often they will provoke other conflicts to deflect from the core issue) result in visible signs of euphoria on the part of the aggressor or alcoholic-type: this can be anyone from the classic "new age hippie-child" (the "new age", like the "hippie era" was and is replete with psychotic magical thinking to which so many self-proclaimed educated adults seem quite prone, such is the occult psychotic conditioning of our "modern society", that in marked continuity with the so called "Dark Ages") to the "smooth predator". This same woman recently sent me an email telling me that a man that had sexually harassed her sister, a single mother, repeatedly in her place of work was really "a very kind man" and felt "so bad" for ever thinking or speaking otherwise (even as she had had very reasonable feelings on the matter), since that was "her sister's issues". Her brain, since it cannot process the emotions necessary to discern in a reasonable adult fashion, is unable to resolve her spiritual ideals (and magical thinking) with the facts, that a man can be very kind (most people are) and also have compulsions to sexually harass women and engage in drug and alcohol abuse, that love also means being realistic about the kinds of negative effects of the behaviour of others and whether or not one can play a socially-appropriate and ethically-appropriate role in that situation or not - in which case it may be best to remove one's self (or "close one's self off" as she put it, something that has marked the most powerful form of behaviour modification, social isolation, in societies the world over for thousands of years), and that these are all things that normal human emotions make people have to consider and not shrug off their moral obligation to consider in the name of "loving everyone without restriction" (true love without bounds has boundaries, it is integrated with the bounds of physical and social existence and joyfully so) as though there need be no concern about how their behaviour might hurt others because that just makes them, the witness, too uncomfortable - which is really quite narcissistic in the end - you end up living as though no one need have any other emotion but pure love all the time (most of us are not Realized Masters) as a whole spiritual belief system, which turns spirituality itself and spiritual ideals into a form of aggression that attempts to compulsively "convert" others to this more "euphoric" existence (the entire opposite of what spirituality is for and about!), perhaps feeling quite disturbed when others do not embrace it as they might expect and simply thus, "sending them love" as a form of magical thinking, again, to avoid having to process emotions necessary to form a more reasonable apprehension of what is really going on and the kinds of responses they are getting from more lucid adults. The only thing more shocking than a brain that cannot process emotions without severe levels of avoidance techniques and magical thinking is to what degree the same brain will go to avoid any feedback about its own pathological nature. Again, I give you, The World.

Such a psychotic family would habitually suggest to a member that is concerned about the harmful effects of negative behaviour within the family that they should not speak about it as it is "negative" to the family, since no one else needs or wants to enter into such a discussion, much less sees any constructive purpose for such a discussion as may likely provoke and in fact utterly depend upon the capacity for all the brains involved to process emotions needed to form a more realistic and even more ethical apprehension of the conflict or violence in question, leading to actual real human growth replaced with the "false growth" of "don't talk about anything" as a "moral tradition". In such a family, abuse is morally acceptable (even imperative) and any attempt to bring it to anyone's attention is not morally acceptable, a threat even to the "alien culture" that has taken over the family like a brain virus - which is what it is, making the immune system of the entire family fight off emotions necessary for true human growth and development as though self-respect and emotions were an invasive disease in themselves, rather rewarding those most comfortable with this dynamic and least interested in the feelings of others in any consistent socially-appropriate fashion (those most psychotic whose brains have most successfully "normalized" the coordinates of family psychosis) with greater prestige in terms of their "roles", people that often go on to help other dependents or clients to be "relieved of their emotions" in order to "deal with their emotions". Such people often go on to be "healers" and "leaders" in various occupations throughout all strata of our respective societies.

I am not making this up. Again, this is mirrored in many respects with Man's relationship with Man (through the medical system, the political apparatus, education, science, religion and whole cultures of drugs and socially-accepted sedatives) and the entire Goddess of Mother Earth.

Take a step back and educate yourself. Ask yourself, "What I am actually observing here?" forgetting why. The why will soon appear.

And hopefully there is some good literature on the subject, which is why I wanted to offer Family Alcoholism: A Life Story as a guide at lulu.com/rayn. The eBook is a totally free download.

One of the more obvious, confusing and even terrifying qualities of a psychotic (a common well-known example might be the fraudulent but utterly convinced "psychic" or "new age healer") is that their ideals and beliefs, while extremely religious or spiritually oriented toward the good and the great, may be so dramatically and shockingly out of accord with how these same often "professional" people actually act and behave. On top of which, they will do or say anything to avoid accountability for or to minimize their own harmful or unethical behaviour - or that of other psychotics. Such people will lie as easily as they breathe (and believe their lies to be the truth), and I will explain why very shortly.

This habit, of minimizing the harmful behaviour of others, deserves a mention in itself, for quite often people with as much magical thinking as any psychotic but who don't seem to exhibit the same socially deviant behaviour and contradictions in words and aims versus actions and behaviours (nor do they seem to have any overt drug addictions) will show, however, a dangerous degree of acceptance (in the name of ideals like being Loving and "Not Judging Others"), of the harmful, dangerous or discordant behaviour of psychotics or alcoholic-types in their lives. This can be very hurtful, as a "soft quality" of psychoticism, to those around them, especially to their children. Such people's brains, and I will explain why in a moment, cannot make an accurate distinction between "being loving" and being mindful that a person in society may need to address harmful behaviour which they will likely repeat no matter how much you love or accept them and their harmful behaviour (in this regard they are also exhibiting a delusion of grandeur, that they are, in effect, a "more loving person" for this reason, even though it is actually for selfish reasons - it makes them feel better, as Love should, while aiding their often criminal ambivalence - a known quality of alcoholic-type families - to potentially dangerous anti-social behaviour - as Love should not, Love being an increased not decreased ethical and emotional intelligence that is to aid Life, not to hurt Life). This is so because it is hard for anyone but especially for victims of trauma in families to hold both the stated ideals of the person and their shockingly discordant behaviour in the mind at the same time. As a result, the discordant behaviour is compulsively minimized to repress the emotions that their brains cannot process, emotions necessary to gain a higher perspective as to a truly ethical response, such as removing one's self or one's children from that person's company until they can demonstrate that they will not harm anyone emotionally or physically. They don't want to "close themselves off" from harmful people, but rather wish for their own purposes (as I will explain) to refashion that person into a "saint", for keeping harmful people in our lives, in order to be "more socially deferential" is really just a sickness related to alcoholism, a very common one we have probably all used at one time or another, usually to our own shock and horror eventually - though for some people this shock and horror does not come, so good are they at protecting their brains from the truth (which is what true Love illuminates for the sake of a truly conscious and ethical response fair and socially appropriate to everyone involved), that these people are good and are capable of great harm to others at the same time.

Here is an explanation. To start off with, when a child's brain is exposed to chronic terror or acute trauma (which have the same result) without proper consideration and understanding provided by competent parents, their brains cannot process the "adult-sized" emotions involved. This is a biological impossibility. On top of being stored in the body and mind (for release and thus disease later in life or life situations, possibility related to unfulfilled desires in past lives), the brain will adapt to these hostile conditions by developing as though these conditions, internally and externally, are "normal" and thus "safe". This effectively changes their internal thermostat of what is normal perhaps for the rest of their lives. But it cannot do this without also inhibiting severely the way the brain and personality develop, so as not to and to not be able to process emotions properly or in many cases even at all, any suggestion of which will bring up physical and subconscious signals that alert, through physical tension, to the original mind-altering trauma and shock, that of total annihilation by the all-powerful representatives of the God of their once upon a time best feelings and sense of their commanding place in all Life on Earth as in the womb of their birth.

And so it begins.

Not every child will respond the same way. In fact, when we consider the cause, it is not so much a wonder that we have so many psychotics or alcoholic-types in society, but that we do not have more!

Because of trauma, the blood flow and development of the brain can be permanently changed. Although by this time (such as at around 5 years of age) the abstract and more imaginative aspects of the brain may function very well (as this is a good escape), other parts of the brain, like those to do with ethical reasoning, may be severely under nourished. This is what causes the magical thinking of psychotic adults, that which leads to such harm and to such acceptance, among psychotic social groups (and there are many), of the harmful behaviour of psychotics to others and to children "because you can't judge", and the removal of one's self or getting them to address their harmful behaviour to self, others or children is not an option the "soft or hard psychopathic psychotic/alcoholic" is able to consider, due to restricted blood flow as well as terror of the emotions needed to consider a response not limited to "I either Love them or I don't", "I am either a good boy or girl or I am not, in which case I may be annihilated or punished by God" and so on (if being born into psychotic family is not hell, I don't know what is). Every kind of psychotic is great at minimizing the behaviour of themselves and others. You will hear them speak of people with known social deviance or sexism as "such a wonderful person" and "people just don't understand them" or "people are just not accepting enough of people who are different" or "they just really like women".

These kinds of phrases alert me to psychotic issues in people. Sure enough, they usually come from alcoholic or psychotic families.

Again, this is all because their brains cannot process emotions without a level of physical and subconscious tension that is on the level of a mind-altering trauma as of annihilation by the all-powerful representatives of the God of their once upon a time best feelings and sense of their commanding place in all Life on Earth as in the womb of their birth.

And so we have an extraordinary and shocking difference between the stated aims, intentions and ideas of a psychotic aggressor and their actual behaviour and ethics. We have shockingly anti-social behaviour and shocking acceptance in the name of nice sounding ideals about Love and "being a good person" of shockingly anti-social behaviour for which they show much less if any social anxiety than would be experienced by most of us. (This is often mistaken for confidence). Finally, we have a vehemence and capacity to deflect through whatever manner of provocation or deception, projection or reversal (i.e. "there is something wrong with you, you are damaged, you are socially inept, you are in fear, you are being just too hard, you aren't forgiving and accepting enough, you are insane, you are traumatized") any information regarding the harmful or shocking effects or injuries created by either their psychotic behaviour or those protected by their equal need to carry on a "sacred story" that effectively exonerates them or those close to them from any accountability, often making those presenting information about unethical and harmful effects of said behaviour as themselves the "real culprits" in a total reversal of cause and effect.

In my family, long-standing injuries to my person requiring reconstructive surgery were because I had a "mental illness" that made me need to provide them with information about the extent of my injuries in order to give them an opportunity to take an interest in my injuries as well as consider their behaviour and attitudes in the light of such injuries. For them, the only real problem was "my mental illness" and not the long standing injuries from their violent behaviour. This level of unethical and socially deviant story telling and self-talk (for which they are not socially anxious that they will "be discovered") is pathological. And I will explain why.

All three qualities, 1) the ideals that do not match, and shockingly do not match, the actual behaviour and integrity, 2) the harmful and callous behaviour to others that does not take a socially-appropriate interest in the feelings of others (like Sylvia Browne telling parents their child is dead when their child is still alive and not caring how that mistake might have impacted them or her reputation - because there are always traumatized children in our society ready to pledge their loyalty to the magical thinking of a psychopathic alcoholic-type who has so much charisma and confidence, having no anxiety about anti-social behaviour and being the most utterly convinced, primarily, in their own deception, magical thinking and role playing in a profession, like being a psychic, for which there is, not coincidentally, no professional standards of assessment and conduct) and 3) the shocking levels of evasion and minimization of all accountability to anyone - All three corresponding qualities have a singular driving purpose - to protect their brain from having to process or even attempt to process emotions on the order of the trauma of annihilation by the all-powerful representatives of the God of their once upon a time best feelings and sense of their commanding place in all Life on Earth as in the womb of their birth.

Well known psychic (latest reports indicate that she charges 800 dollars U.S. for a 20 minute phone consultation with a roughly two year waiting period, the majority of which 20 minute session, according to dissatisfied customers, is spent regaling them with stories of their numerous "Guardian Angels" and very little useful information about their lives), Sylvia Browne, says that she feels held to unreasonable standards when compared to those of doctors and other professions. (She acts as though victimized by complaints about her mistakes, even though none of her numerous shocking mistakes have prevented her, though perhaps they should, from plying her "trade".) She feels held to unreasonable standards simply "because she is as psychic", as compared to a doctor or a lawyer, or other professions. But doctors don't tell people their children are dead when they are alive, or that their children were shot when they were not. In other words, as with a psychotic's magical rationalization (and victimized aggressive mindset), Browne is demonstrating (rather converse to her stated aim) that psychics need have absolutely no standards at all - as indeed they are held to absolutely no standards.

This does not mean that all psychics are frauds or even that Sylvia Browne need always be wrong. It only means that that she demonstrates below average integrity and accountability for the perverse mistakes she makes, much less below average interest, if at all, in the distress her mistakes can cause and have caused grieving parents. This is not a mistake. This is a crime. She has clearly made her career on being an expert psychic whose predictions can and should be trusted, her gross errors at which she deftly sidesteps all accountability for, in classic psychotic fashion, by claiming she herself is being victimized.

To use her own analogy, if a doctor committed a mistake on the order of telling a bereaved wife that her husband was drowned on the day of 9/11 (her husband was a firefighter who died in the collapse), that doctor would be relieved of his or her profession.

In a general sense, psychotics have trouble dealing with stress even as, to the outsider, they seem to pride themselves on creating (and controlling and dominating) the enormous stress effects around them through generations of families. Like most disease, this is a family disease. This does not mean that if you have trouble dealing with stress (which is most of us) that you are a psychotic. It only means that a psychotic or psychotic family has enormous trouble dealing with stress. This is one way to look at it. They have so much trouble, they have to avoid much of it, thereby avoiding any chance of addressing their stress-causing habits of behaviour and coping. Their coping mechanisms are exactly the same mechanisms as the disease of alcoholism. They are the same mechanisms.

However, the main thing here is that the brain cannot process many of the emotions involved in any suggestion of accountability. Under extreme stress and brain terror as children, not only was brain development affected, along with blood flow to key areas of the brain responsible with linking abstract thought with ethics (and you will never know how key it is to have some great sense of discernment in social situations until you have to deal with someone, an alcoholic-type or one of their alcoholic-patsies, who has no such ethical discernment and no means to gain such discernment, a primary objective, even, of avoiding any prompting whatsoever to gain such discernment, for which they would need to, yes you guessed, it process new emotions in their brain); Under extreme stress and brain terror as children, not only was brain development affected, along with blood flow to key areas of the brain responsible with linking abstract thought with ethics, the immune system is also lowered in some of its functionality. Stress always lowered immune function. Imagine what shocking stress to a child does. Let's see. (As an aside, getting into this core and virulent social disease, I hope it can alert us all to the solution God created and gave us at the beginning of Life itself, our God-bestowed capacity to provide, after His example in Nature, living and eating conditions consistently and perpetually sufficient for an angelic child of the creator of the entire Universe, a child whose whole brain development (for which I tell children of alcoholics or psychotics they need to Betray their family and their society, to some great degree, in order to be true to themselves and their first purest feelings in Life, those true to the Life of all peoples forever), as every teenager knows instinctively, is for the most observably vital sake of all Life and the entire future of Life on Earth.)

The immune system has many visible and invisible functions. The most visible function is to deal with infection and disease. A more invisible function is to have an "open and discerning heart". The immune system of a psychotic child of trauma is, however, developed in an a very exotic way:

The goal of such a person's immune system (as with the unspoken culture of their diseased family of origin for generations often) becomes to protect the brain, as a primal priority, from their own traumatic emotions, pretty much any and all emotions. It is easy to see then that the whole personality, the extremely ideal ideals, the harmful and deceitful storytelling and behaviour, and the religiously passionate avoidance of accountability (through often criminal ambivalence to others harmed specifically by this disease or its "sacred story") are all in service to the main purpose of this distorted immune function, to the protect their brains from emotions.

This is why, to a psychotic, their whole personality and immune system (even their whole family tradition or even religion, though an albeit heretical version of religion) needs fend off any suggestion, even from potential or actual victims of their magical thinking and the like, of wrongdoing as though it were a disease! A threat to their immune system.

This is why a psychotic will often accuse their most ardent critics of all the same kinds of social, emotional and ethical disease and delusion they themselves possess as what is for them and what has to be for them a "normal" level and even a "standard" for "spiritual development".

Their immune system is primarily attacking themselves and projecting this attack onto the people and world around them.

The vigour and even hatred with which they do this is beyond all comprehension, which is a big reason as to how psychopathic and less extreme psychotic behaviour and alcoholism is spread in our society, mainly through children.

It may be that psychotic behaviour is an auto-immune disorder related to the adverse conditions and shocking contradictions of our entire technocratic way of life with respect to the feelings of a child and the truly sufficient conditions for the development of the human emotional and physical body and brain, a way of life most of us are in deep denial about as part of our own coping mechanism and "alien culture".

After all, don't our education and religious systems teach that this is the only and best way of life we can expect?

According to one Master Doctor I have known, his response to the prevalence of psychotic behaviour in our society was this: "It's normal now."

That is pretty clear.

To conflate his countless years of experience and research (his work has been consulted by the United Nations), the human immune system is the most challenged organ of the human energy system and faces the greatest threats to our continued existence today, facing a total full-spectrum chronic (from conception) assault all our lives, an assault in the realm of every dimension of human existence.

Personally, I treat psychosis and alcoholism (which are the same thing) as an auto-immune disorder. What is an auto-immune disorder? When the body determines that something, anything, is a foreign invader and is unable to process it properly, it creates inflammation of various kinds (around the heart, the joints, the organs, the gums, the skin, the kidneys, the lungs) in order to create conditions to help deal with the invader, like a mosquito bite. The question of an auto-immune disorder is one, I feel, of degree. In this case, the invader is so prevalent and so difficult to deal with (perhaps a constant onslaught of, say, milk or animal fat – 60 percent of people cannot digest milk properly beyond infancy) that the inflammation is such as the body is sending out a request for help, it is creating so severe degrees of inflammation it is as though the immune system is attacking itself and anyone else it can find, usually those, I have found, that are in the best or strongest position, on some level, to be of some assistance, much to the shock of most people attacked by a psychotic of any kind.

What the chronic inflammation, which is considerable, say, to alcohol or milk, is aiming to do is send out signals to help create or get your help in creating conditions safe, restricted and gentle enough to start to make new and better choices with respect to our diet, environment, our relationships. and our lives. In other words, the immune system is so inundated with invaders, according to one's own individual emotional and physical makeup, that it cannot "just deal with it by itself"; the immune system needs our help, it needs us to take a look at the situation and gather the right information about what the body is saying to make new decisions about our body, our environment and our lives; and the immune system or auto-immune disorder is doing this by creating such high degrees of inflammation in our body and in our lives so as to force us to help create the right conditions to address the actual cause.

It does this so much, for the invasion is of such a magnitude of danger, that it looks like the immune system is attacking itself and anyone else. What we have to ask ourselves in this situation is, What is so vitally important to our health that it is requiring our own immune-system to create so much inflammation that it looks as though we are attacking ourselves? – which in some way, we are! The immune system has triggered an auto-immune disorder level of inflammation because we are hurting ourselves on a chronic basis and the body needs to alert us and created conditions that serve to alert us to this for a level of enjoyment of life greater than ever, to address a probably much more life-threatening habit we cannot even notice otherwise.

The immune system is trying to save our lives in every sense. Such a person does attack others. However, the situation is so uncomfortable and dangerous that the immune system is also reaching out to these same people it attacks (telling us they are attacking themselves and their own emotional being, that which is essential to gain necessary greater self and health awareness), reaching out to their immune systems for help in addressing the core social, emotional and physical issues, for obviously the host body and community environment does not have the correct understanding about the appropriate conditions for the body or how to determine or create conditions whereby one can determine those conditions for one's self.

As such, having been attacked by so many psychotic and alcoholic-type people over the course of my life, my immune system has gone to work to help identify what is being said and what is going on, along with all the immune systems and spirits of all the people around me. This is why this book is here today, because of a vast system of cellular communication that underlies the health of our bodies, our families and the World.

One last mystery. Now that we have seen the level of compulsion with which a psychotic or alcoholic type will evade accountability, perhaps it will be understandable that much of what alerted me to this profound social disease was meeting people I was certain were the same personality as alcoholics in my own family who did not drink or have indeed any visible addiction at all. This is because the compulsive evasion of accountability, along with storytelling and abstract idealism (they can be some of the most inspired idealists) of psychotic children of every age (that which is not balanced in a reasonable adult manner with real-world harm and potential social dangers, especially to their children, because their brains would have to process emotions their whole lives have developed to protect their brains from) is itself an addiction, the purpose of which, like any addiction, is to help release the chronic tension they experience due to not being able process emotions in their brain and gain thereby a more restful and healthful perspective on life and their role in life.

Alcoholic-types like control. So much so that they may often say that they "know" how people feel. Psychotic psychics and new age healers of course do this all the time. However, when we "know how people feel" we mean that we take an avid interest in how other people might be feel; we mean we can anticipate and see it as our responsibility to anticipate as best we can how others might feel. But when a psychotic says that they "know how you feel", they do not mean they are interested (or if they do mean they are interested they are not pathologically capable of taking a reasonably consistent socially-appropriate interest) in your feelings, either what they might be or what they actually are.

For a psychotic, this "knowing your feelings" is all about control. And they have no social anxiety about this control. To them, this is normal. They think everyone is this way. Again, this control is part of what I call their auto-immune disorder, the control of and protection from and even attack of their own emotions and thus all emotionality in and around them in the world. They "know how you feel" because they have the most dangerous kind of interest in your feelings; they want to control and ultimately protect themselves, their brains and the entire family from how you feel, and they may even see this as the purpose of "love" or "healing"; they may even see this as their "role" as a parent or even as a healer, teacher, boss or doctor, even a doctor of psychology, as psychotics aspire to just these roles with great prevalence in my experience (some of them are my psychotic siblings). How does that all feel? I don't know about you, but I have always found that terrifying and confusing to similar degrees.

Even if they aim to heal the emotions of others, because they love to be in healing positions, control positions that involve the vulnerability and trust of others (not of themselves - and besides, they believe their disorder has made them truly healed, for it or its control mechanism and compulsion saves them from the tension of emotionally-informed ethics and attitudes, "being a healer" being one of many roles they identify with (and viciously defend from every kind of threat or question) as part of their disorder, thus they love situations that allow them to use their control disease, for getting to use it helps them feel better - it helps relieve chronic tension in their body and mind from the perpetual trauma of not being able process and doing everything in their lives and minds to protect themselves from any prompting to process emotions in their brains - people's normal social anxieties and trust is their drug, whatever other drugs they do or do not use habitually); thus, even if they aim to heal the emotions of others, they cannot actually perform healing modalities (should they even be effective beyond the magical thinking fantasy world of new age self-help) with any consistent interest in the feelings of others and are more disposed than not to believe something is "working" when it is doing nothing at all, on top of which they themselves are so sick they should not be involved with anything to do with the subtle energies of other people and will evade all accountability for any ethical breaches. They are dangerous people, and so are the people, in some measure, that go along with this.

Having said that, it is easy to want to go along with the ideal delusion and proclamations of many an alcoholic. In most cases they are expert at painting a picture of a situation that seems to account for everything and relieve tension, as though they "have it all in hand". And they are often so charmingly bereft of any normal social anxieties with respect to ethics. This could not be farther from the truth, but it is part of why they find it so easy to accumulate patsies, thousands of people, even, they can claim they have "helped". Such people may often have lowered inhibitions about driving without insurance or without a licence, sexual promiscuity, or any other kind of unethical or risk-taking behaviour. One woman I know has been driving around for months with a stolen vehicle, unbeknownst to many people close to her in her life. She is totally confident in this behaviour and does not demonstrate normal social anxieties about discovery of her anti-social habits, habits she is compulsive about for all the reasons discussed. They likely keep her "sane". In her own words, they may her feel young and alive. This person is not a close associate. But I have kept tabs on her. She is a mother of two and, guess what, "a professional healer".

And no one close to them would ever and perhaps especially those closest to them would never guess that their projections of wrongdoing or social disease onto "others" is actually all about the Jeckyl in their personal Mr. or Mrs. Hyde. Read that again, please, in case you didn't catch what I just said.

This is why psychotic alcoholic-type behaviour can be likened to many other common mental disorders, from personality disorder to paranoid schizophrenia. They may not "hear voices", but the inner prompting of their magical thinking has the authority of God to them. After all, it protects them from the mind-altering and development-inhibiting brain terror and trauma of annihilation by the all-powerful representatives of the God of their once upon a time best feelings and sense of their commanding place in all Life on Earth as in the womb of their birth or the shockingly terrifying contradictions between such feelings and the psychological environment of their parent's minds to a child's brain, parents who were themselves psychotically incapable of properly considering and anticipating the needs and feelings of a child as a child, let alone an adult of any age, interpreting any promptings from their child as such as a actual threat to their distorted immune systems and minds, easily adopted as such the medical system's suggestion as to what is most profitably "wrong" with their child - and major child psychologists have spoken up about child psychologists and doctors going along with this! No wonder this behaviour is so prevalent - it is the primary and in many cases the only protection afforded its most vulnerable target, a child. They adopt it to "survive in the World". And those that adapt to it well (flattering their parents) are considered "healthy" and often "successful". Those that have problems adapting to this psychosis, "problem children" needing "special help", special help that usually means even more invasion into their body and mind through pharmaceuticals and numerous suggestions that they are not "smart enough" or "strong enough", all of which are sick, sick, sick.

One thing is for sure, psychotic alcoholic-types are compulsive liars and magical thinkers.

In any situation where anything might reveal that the delusion they are most themselves the victims and "beneficiaries" of is just that, a delusion, their mind or subconscious will provide some reason that will relieve them of that otherwise certain prospect. They are just so often so sincere about their delusion it fools many people.

And what also fools many people is that this psychosis or alcoholism (which need not be about alcohol or any visible addiction) is so prevalent across every strata and profession of our respective societies.

In one film, the self-proclaimed expert at mental powers was able to "turn the pages of a phone book" without touching them. However, when someone placed Styrofoam chips all around the phone book so as to detect any sudden breath of air, the same expert suddenly looked confounded and said that he could not perform his mental feat because "static electricity from the Styrofoam is holding the pages down". He mind had to invent an excuse to protect the brain from the truth and especially from emotional messengers of the truth or the more logical conclusion - that he did not have "special mental powers".

Uri Geller, a well known "psychic", when he appeared on the Johnny Carson show (and the articles of his tricks had been heavily guarded from all tampering on the suggestion of the same observer), was unable to perform his feats because "he did not feel right" and he "didn't like the energy of Johnny" "asking him to do things".

Some people might call this lying. It is. But it is also magical thinking. The mind, in service to the distorted immune system (using the whole personality and behaviour), is simply offering up a kind of logic to protect the brain from traumatic emotions that would normally be "tripped" by anti-social behaviour, as they are for most of us. The most important point here is, if they are willing to lie to cover up their magical thinking, what else would they and are they willing to do? In my experience, they are willing to do anything. It is life or death for them.

When your aggressor plays the victim of you, what do you do?

Take a step back and educate yourself. Ask yourself, "What I am actually observing here?" forgetting why. The why will soon appear.

Always remember, you are not just surviving it. You are also making a vital contribution to our understanding of this and much else besides for the sake of all Life on Earth. For the ways the brains of psychotic alcoholic-type human beings treat other psychotic or non-psychotic human beings is analogous to how all Mankind treats the Goddess of Mother Earth, the way what I call the culture of an alien Mother Ship treats Man and Man's pristine culture of the Earth and the Birth and Future of all Mankind. For this reason, if She were to undermine all artificial energy systems, this would not be to punish or harm Man but to protect Herself, Her own Body, Heart and Soul and that of the whole inheritance, health and Life of all Mankind.

Take a step back and educate yourself. Ask yourself, "What I am actually observing here?" forgetting why. The why will soon appear.

And hopefully there is some good literature on the subject, which is why I wanted to offer Family Alcoholism: A Life Story as a guide at lulu.com/rayn. The eBook is a totally free download.

As an aside, Muscle Testing or "applied kinesiology" (such as in the popular "new age" Psych K) has been shown with repeated blind tests to be absolutely unreliable, though it is often used in the "new age" world - I even had a Naturopath (an alcoholic-type, whose husband was a confessed alcoholic, not in any treatment) who used it religiously, and dangerously incorrectly as corroborated by repeated medical testing. At best, it demonstrates the capacity (and aggressive desire and magical thinking) of the tester to transfer the result to the subject, what could be emotional anxieties everyone possesses on some level if they are honest with themselves. I was first shown it by an alcoholic-type (with many confessed alcoholic associates in the "new age community" I once lived in, several of whom sexually harassed me and then went on to accuse me of "just not being flexible enough" and "needing their unconditional Love" - one of them the senior instructor in a major healing modality I will not mention - the usual quasi-spiritual psychotic and dangerously anti-social nonsense - and when I informed this "instructor" that if she could not satisfy my concerns with her behaviour, I would have to talk to her superior, she suggested that would be "unethical" and "uncool" on my part, as though she were the "real victim". In fact, she was not the only female alcoholic I had met in that community, to whom I expressed serious concerns of harassment, who routinely informed me that I was "making too much out of it" or that "it was my own fault" or was just "scared of women", both of whom had been sexually assaulted as children! Can you imagine if the situation were reversed, and they were men saying this to a female victim of sexual assault that it was "her fault" and that she was "making too much out of it"?) Now I notice that all "professionals" using this technique of selling and "healing" (Psych K) alternately have problems with control and aggression, as I have determined through personal experience repeatedly. When it comes to psychotic behavioural elements, there is nothing new about the "new age", though we are emerging into a truly new age that is bringing many of these things to light for the sake of the joy of all Life on Earth.

And let us not forget that women emotionally and sexually abuse men as much, at least, as men emotionally and sexually abuse women; it is only that men report it far less. Statistics for Health Canada supports this.

PART TWO

Violence: Men and Women: Jews and Gentiles

Kindness is the Sun
Kindness is the flower
Kindness is the sum
Of knowledge and its power.

As human beings or as pure consciousness, our ability to adapt to our social conditions is truly out of this world.

Women are as or, in certain frames of consideration, more abusive even sexually abusive than men.

Now I can see that if you have been abused by a man, then men must be more abusive than women. Men are the Germany of the gender world, that have been given a very bad rap whilst other countries killed many times more people than they did. In fact, most people do not know that around 10 Million Chinese were killed in World War II, not by Germans alone, and many of the people Germans are blamed with killing died of illness due to bugs and poor to no water quality rather co-created by the Allied Bombing of key transport routes the Germans were actually using to maintain basic living conditions for their prisoners. You may wonder why. Well, because mass infections on the part of their prisoners meant that Germans were just as in danger of mass infection. It is only logical. This is why they were burying the dead in now highly publicized mass graves. At the close of World World II, in fact, it is documented by military correspondence that a Psychological Military operation began in its place, targeting the Germans for blame for war crimes, an operation complete with bogus shrunken heads Germans were forced to view en masse, heads they were told were those of Jews killed by the Germans in chambers that were not equipped

(this was complimented by press releases to the same effect in North America and Europe), by all known physical evidence, to do so. In fact, most of the official court records or writing entered into record at the Nuremberg war crime Trials post-war were actually fictional writings, including reference to 6 Million Jews, written before the war even began. The lawyers for the defence did not even object. Hey, Jews do bad things. Germans do bad things. Americans do bad things. Christians do bad things. But I do not hate any of them. But Israel was not created to help Jewish people and it has nothing to do with the Promised Land. It was created as a terrorist state to control oil and conflict in the Middle East and beyond. My interest here is simply my own sanity. Very wealthy heretical Jewish and American families funded Hitler as the only means to remove their wealth from Germany, allowing them to claim refugee status. This also allowed several families, not all of them heretical Jews, to make a lot of money from both sides of the war, the representatives of which, even Churchill, were paid employees, I fear, who had conflicting loyalties at best. Churchill is also a known bigot when it comes to the Muslim World, having to referred to Muslims as "no better than dogs". This is the kind of racism that is rampant around heretical Judaism as every other religion that some very bad people use to hide behind. All religions are for the good and for the truth. But not all humans are, depending on their state of mind and levels of indoctrination and victimization by the dark forces in Nature, forces used by unscrupulous high priests who are able to use them to weaken and then use the human mind like a trained animal. This was, I fear, the purpose Moses (who was indeed I believe a priest with great magical abilities) had in mind by leading the then Jewish people through their ritual torture in the Sinai desert and why, in fact, Jesus set up his ministry, to heal them and that tendency in all human minds, those that believe in the sadist "God" of the Old Testament and the utter illogic of the fear of punishment from such a God or banishment from Paradise. Life was not sending plagues in order to help the Jews go from slavery but to prevent the Jews from being led into years of intense mind control and torture. The Bible depicts nothing less than a duel of imagery vying for rule of the Jews or Semitic peoples of the time. To this day, imagery and priests duel for our allegiance (9/11 and the so called "War on Terror" is one such mechanism). What kind of image do we wish to live by?

My contention is that the Old Testament of the Bible depicts a version of God (intermingled with divine truth shining through) that is actually a psychotic cabal of human thought that has managed to raise, through distortion of texts and human brains (though the texts, like any distortion of soulful truth, must contain enough truth to remain attractive to the brain, like any corporate advertising today that often belittles the human soul, again, inviting, as do the drug cartels run by a psychotic but very advanced level of human thought that has managed to reduce and get us to help reduce our own thought, making us much easier to control (see Health Food Fads), to remain attractive while, like occult and new age metaphysics, belittling the human mind and gaining its admiration for larger than life personalities, figureheads and even alien species in the fantasy of new age self help which has nothing to do with the truth of the self, that has managed to raise its psychotic cabal of thought to God-like status. The Bible itself is a vying between psychotic and reasonable human thought, a war for our minds (subjecting them to so much contradiction as to get us to seek sedation and acquiescence) not between angels (that is part of the ancient fantasy) but between human beings in terms of the forces of nature (angels of emotion and elementals) the human mind (and particularly human Happiness) is meant to command, not take commands from.

The God of the Old Testament wants us to rule our lives according to energies on the order of that of the family dog. Ironic? These psychotic priesthoods are in control of ancient lore and magic relating to the human brain and hormonal system, which is why sexual liberation and sexual inhibition is pushed so much by pop culture (the Islamic World is right to be wary of it, as they maintain a much more crime free value system than does the West), as well as with sugar, caffeine (which is a drug, however naturally it is occurring after cooking and roasting cocoa and coffee beans) and other drug additives in our food and water, to challenge the pineal gland. In fact, the human soul is faced with a daily onslaught, visible and mostly invisible, like that of any war zone, truth be known, though I rather choose to believe that the innocence of a child is rather a match for it, or I would not be here today. This is why the Ten Commandments includes a prohibition on the creation of images. Ever wonder why that was there? Because humans at the time still conveyed much living wisdom through symbols and images, today used by occult subliminal advertising to stimulate our structural memories of Paradise as they transcend time and space. This commandment was in fact outlawing the art of the time, not of the God without or any God without but of the God and the truth within. In fact, one of the major successes of the occult (which bleeds into what many believe to be the "good" occult of today, such as in the new age) is to bend our concept of God and to limit our use of even a full ancient alphabet and set of idioms to depict the real God of Life and Love as it relates to a level of imagery and science from which all science today is born and is much inferior to, a science with which Man can and did create sufficient conditions for a child of the creator of the entire Universe.

The Bible is a record of the greatest living wisdom on Earth. That is why it is one of the greatest books ever written. It contains the wisdom all peoples live, that of the greatest values of all our lives the World over. This is true. But the Bible also contains (and this can help illuminate the real truth) occult forms of high powered thought (that far in advance of most of ours today), that of human beings who, through this thought mingling with that of the living wisdom of our souls, have entrained our thought to their own psychotic thoughts (thoughts such as "sexual liberation", which is an oxymoron, since no human being has ever attained to any higher functioning (and quite a bit less, rather) through any shape or form of anal or genital copulation (however joyful it is proposed to be) in the history of the World - at least, if there is any peer reviewed research I would like to see it, while the Hippies who were charged with pioneering this "advancement" in human evolution relied heavily and still do upon a medically proven carcinogen and developmental toxin known as marijuana as though, in so small indication of their level of "liberation", it were no more significant an herb than that of oregano or chamomile), so that we still today pledge much of our loyalty and bow down to these thoughts that still float invisibly throughout our cultures. Lies, really in our cultures and in our religions, all of which can only be resolved by seeking ye first the kingdom of our Happiness or Heaven within, finding the truth that can only move through kindness, kindness which will always be its very sum as it lives and breathes and speaks through no dusty or maniacal tome but through the words of God in Nature and a mother's womb, through the grace of God in Man and in every Woman (who is the pristine original Universe of our ancestors).

Now back to men and women.

Yes. If a woman has been beaten or sexually assaulted by a man in any way, then men are going to look worse. However, women abuse and are violent to men as much or more than men are abusive to women. It is only that women go about things in a different manner, and men are less likely to openly complain to others, due to the cultural prejudice of being a "real man". (There is no such thing) They, women, may not be as physically abusive. But they may be even more abusive emotionally and psychologically. And they may do this for the same reasons men are physically and psychologically abusive, to feel in control of their own considerable trauma (through emotional if not physical violence and control), thereby reducing their capacity to take an interest in the needs, feelings or response of others.

In fact, Health Canada has published its statistics that women sexually assault young boys as much or more than men sexually assault young girls, on top of which young boys, due to cultural embarrassment, are much less likely to report being sexually assaulted by a woman.

Now, no woman is going to want to suggest that men are more violated than women, given all that women have had to endure. And I agree that amidst all racism against the human race since before Biblical times, women have been targeted the most, next to all children (boys and girls) and their relationship to their mother.

And yet many women will not wish to think that women are more violent than men. But you can't have it both ways. If we agree that those most violated are prone to violate more, then it makes sense that if women are the most violated then they are more likely to violate.

This is only compassionate. Here lay understanding.

How many men who abuse women have themselves been abused by women or even their own mothers?

And how many women who abuse men have been abused by their fathers or other men?

Of course, I have my own experience to go on. Which tends to validate this thesis.

I read one local female author write, "Men rape." End of story.

Men do rape. So do women.

And perhaps we can cultivate more compassion for both genders by accepting this rather logical possibility.

I do not advocate cross gender animosity. With the whole story, I have always hoped to bring more sanity to the whole issue of violence and domestic assault.

In the end, it is pointless to compare. If you have been sexually or emotionally assaulted (which includes a man or woman being unable to reasonably consider the feelings and needs of another human being, let alone their own child), then that is the worst thing you can imagine.

We need to deal with this issue as a whole, men and women alike.

For putting forth one gender as disproportionately free from abusive behaviour of their own while at the same time emphasizing their victimization, this only increases, like the Holocaust propaganda (yes there was a Holocaust) of World World II, the pain and, ultimately, the chances of further violence to women or Jews, and violence by women and Jews and anybody we care to include in the capacity to be violent.

Violence leads to imbalances in thought and behaviour. And imbalances in thought and behaviour leads to violence.

This is the effect of military grade propaganda, such as with 9/11 and World War II and Israel, and this is the effect of staking out one gender as the gender of victimization.

Yes. Women have been targeted, as with the Jews, for especially cruel treatment beyond words. But is not the point that everyone is negatively effected by this, not just women and Jews?

Yes. Jews were targeted by Hitler and others in World War II and in many other times. Heretical Jewish humans of very imbalanced minds also forced Stalin to help kill over 20 million people, of many faiths.

People who are victimized are bound to victimize others.

Was Stalin a monster? Who knows. The characters of history are just that, characters. Al Qaeda is not even a real terrorist organization as we understand the term. It is a data base of mercenaries created by the CIA with the help of Osama Bin Laden in order to fight the Russians invading Afghanistan and now to create a menace against whom the U.S. can fight an endless war on Terror while escalating the true terrorism toward all Arab states it wishes to conquer and subjugate to its religion and bank of choice, this with a military grade mass media that reports that the Syrian government defending itself from the unprovoked attack of paid mercenaries (the media calls freedom fighters and rebel forces) as "attacking the people" and not a reasonable defense from the unprovoked attacks, adding its own NATO "freedom forces" bombing of whomever they like on either side.

The point is we have to stop just thinking that one gender or race is the "enemy".

"Anger is the enemy of the Earth", says Lord Krishna in the Bhagavad Gita.

And what is anger?

Anger is a natural and reasonable response to being hurt or having your loved ones hurt by others. It is there to inspire a restoration of the mind from the profound sadness and lack of understanding that comes with any loss of one's comfort, one's way of being, one's health or one's life or loved ones. To gain such an understanding alone can compensate for sadness, one needs all one's emotions, including anger.

Who can't understand that?

But anger directed at others is pure poison and violence. Anger takes over the mind and reduces blood flow to key areas of the brain responsible for ethical and moral reasoning, for helping us to consider the feelings of others for the sake of our own feelings and safety.

Anger is here to help restore. But it can also tear apart families and countries.

Anger needs to be observed and allowed to pass in order for saner minds to prevail, minds perhaps even higher functioning than they were before, minds made aware of more than they have perhaps ever realized before.

Anger is a demon in nature, a force. When anger is present, it is time to make that demon serve you or serve the demon.

Watch your anger. It is amazing. A mighty storm of every sensory system you associate with yourself. Say, "Wow. Look how angry I am."

Then get the benefit.

There is perspective in life. Gaining that perspective after being violated is unthinkable. How is that possible? And yet this is just what many of us are forced to do. If you have been violated, this is your challenge. And there is, somehow, a love in that in which we would all do well to be included, learning about a love beyond all the bounds of physical existence.

Jewish Heresy or Heretical Christianity or Islam runs back (it uses any religion or history it can and inserts authorship where it may to introduce the rudiments of its own metaphysics, that much about reducing human moral inhibitions as the only way to true power) to the Old Testament or to that period during which there was an abundance of metaphysical and supernatural Semitic language, aphorism and punning around magic mushrooms and mind altering substances used to gain control of the human mind, along with corporal punishment and the countless absolutely ridiculous laws (statutes) introduced in the Biblical Deuteronomy as both a total fiction (that scholars have shown had no practical purpose in those cultures) and as a truth of elements of distortion in the human mind.

The Bible is an accurate record of history.

These drug and sex cults (cults really of every kind of ritual removal of all sexual and moral inhibitions for the sake of creating biological robots instrumental in the occult structure of the Earth, managers of the masses of just as ritually confused and weakened and under educated or falsely educated (through the ironically named, "news" and other forms of "education") people whose energy is religiously given to the very system that aims to destroy all their God-bestowed feelings and families. Just look around you.

These drug and sex cults have their own history. Part of it inserts itself into history taught in Universities today as the Aryans that "came out of the Caucus Mountains". I believe they have also given themselves the mythical name of the Hyperboreans. They started off in Egypt and made their way to Babylon (king Herod converted to this heretical cult before he killed all the first born children looking for Jesus), forming heretical versions of Babylonian religion now researched by David Icke quite prominently, though he incorrectly assumes that the adaptation or forced adaptation of early Christianity, Babylonian heretical metaphysics, Indian religion and the paganism (what used to be high Vedic World wide culture, that which works with the fullness of Natural and infinite cosmic intelligence in terms of nurturing high purity and speed of human thought and feeling) (or what became through the occult influence solar and lunar worship) of the day (an integration or disintegration the pagans resisted for a long time, making it necessary to reduce many religious philosophies to pagan terms and pagan or ancient astrotheology, much of which was distorted and co-opted by the ancient mushroom drug cults documented by John Allegro, though he was much ridiculed by his peers) means that the prominent figures of all religions are all fictional, a mistake that rather serves the very forces that Mr. Icke is attempting to illuminate.

The Bible, as such, is replete with supernatural Semitic idioms and puns relating to the cultivation and effects of magic mushrooms (and these in turn adapted to the language of the day), allowing high priests to manage the linguistics to a degree and promote prestigious secrecy among their sycophantic sects, some of which were persecuted for good reason (they promoted paedophilia and still do today in massive crime rings exposed by David Icke and others - this I believe is the source of the prohibition on homosexuality in the Bible, a conscious mistranslation of pederasty or paedophilia). The resultant capacity to undermine religious belief in Jesus or Krishna (they are "just the sun" - and true, Jesus was likely not born on December 25, nor Krishna) is a resulting occult power, having the same effect as undermining political leaders who must vie for conscious awareness between the threats from their occult managers and their disaffected constituents - which is why we should send them our kindness rather than seeking to rob what little thought they have left to themselves. Their racism to all Mankind, though they themselves only ever hide behind any convenient race or creed, is without parallel in the history of the World, having targeted gays, women, people of every colour, and children. The machine of civilization they created is a monster our children sense that eats our children and we call their digestion getting them "ready for the World", abdicating shamelessly our divine power and obligation to make a World sufficient for a child who is born expecting, correctly, a World that will always be made for a child of God instead of one in which they will be forced, for "their own good" to be "fit for such a World as this."

Many children believe there is a monster under their bed.

The World is (in part) a monster that we would all do well slay for the sake of all children by communicating to nurture speeds of thought beyond the (mechanical) monster of the systems of government/military/financial/corporate/occult/psychological control and aggression (though not systems themselves or control itself, which are neither good nor bad except how they are implemented, by whom and to what ends), beyond the so called conveniences to whose "price" we are "enslaved".

But we, unfortunately or not, will not be cajoled to change. Rather, through some kind of superconscious grace we are gifted some infinite opportunity to consider the best possible paths to Happiness among all available options, bending all systems to that Paradise whence our every sense, desire and true eternal inheritance in the Light and endless Happiness of which every child is born in a World we must all make fit, forever, for a child.

For every child is our child. And every child is raised, ultimately (I feel), by the culture of kindness and understanding (or not) we create for them.

Having said that, I have no idea the agony faced by so many of my brothers and sisters except that we have been lulled into a kind of complacent belief that it will never happen to us.

I have always believed that what happens to one child in a family happens to all, though this fact is often covered up by the fantasy world entered into by children of trauma. So with the World.

It is absolutely sickening what is going on to the Tibetan people and people all over the world. A society or culture whose thought is capable of no more than complacency or acceptance is just as unacceptable - and just as victimized.

Through courageous communications such as yours and so many may others besides we claim the power of our birthright and our thought which so many religious and governmental/corporate institutes claim to possess and that our place in so splendid creation is to "negotiate" or "re-negotiate" the purity and value of our spiritual being with "them" via mind-numbing mercenary beliefs and customs that have and have never had any place in a free society, as seemingly innocuous as such beliefs may be whilst they secretly generate such agitation in Man and in Nature as unavoidably leads to all manner of war and natural disaster.

There is nothing to fear from our true power and God-bestowed invincible rightness with all Life and Nature. Rather the fear of abdicating, however politely, such a power (that of all kindness and understanding, of reasoning and feeling alike, of all true science and spirituality, which never truly disagree when they are credible) is absolutely vital. Such a fear tells us we need to do something better.

However, the Occult "masters of the monster of the World" paid scribes to alter many holy texts. Though you cannot cover up the truth to the Soul it speaks to as from within. In fact, altering it can make the truth that much more evident to a reasonably sane human being.

Look at the Medici and Pico families of Italy in the Renaissance, for instance.

Look to the House of Lorraine, of Windsor, of Rothschild. Who were the original pirates and why are these murderers celebrated by Robert Louis Stevenson and Hollywood, the branch of which was always used in occult heretical ceremonial mind control and magic? Why is the Jack the Pirate featured on certain labels of hard alcohol? Why do so many corporations use so many ancient sacred syllables and colours as part of their logos and names, like Windows, Google, IBM, CIBC, Pepsi (and ancient name for the devil), Coca-Cola, General Mills, which places into mass circulation a grain-related bacterial culture (ergot) that greatly inhibits brain function, MGM, FOX, CNN, NBC, Columbia (a Sumerian goddess, the torch of whom is Nimrod or Tammuz, said to be the ancestral "king" of the heretical bloodlines, a torch of whom is placed as memorial to 9/11 as well as being lit every Olympic games, the flame in goddess womb being of the first letter in Semitic scripts, that of a U with flame in it, that likely a corruption of the high culture of the Vedas after the human brain lobotomized itself through a combination of impure thought and alliance with the desire of certain nature intelligences, some of which are nearly as intelligent as God Himself, seeking to destroy and build Nature or the World back up in its own image (that of death, since no one will ever figure out how God created a physical plane with endless capacities for regeneration without any need for maintenance - which is why science, a branch of the occult, plays down any notion of thought or intelligence in Nature, rather proposing Nature is as dumb as Man has become and that thus Man's survival rather than abject peril rests upon advancing his thought over and above that in Nature (or really the thought of some men over all Mankind) - thoughts entirely for the benefit of Man in his right mind) and combined with cyclical ages of increased challenges for the sake of advancing human thought to that of God Himself or, conversely, helping to purify the thought of Man for another chance at true evolution and movement forward in thought (which has been stopped for centuries), that capable of reaching creativity to heights transporting Man in Love to other stars without any need for explosive technology. This is the new Vedic age, suggests Anastasia, a 990,000 year period of maximum grace, that accepting Man-made technology and living thoughts of Man's truly rightful place in a cosmic Nature of all conceivable Happiness so as to give Man a limitless chance to expand his own capacity for choice and observation as the destructive result of technocracy, bending our minds back to the sweetness of the land of all our dreams come true set up before all human action to live upon the radiant boundless grace of all human action (that of all the seasons of all the feelings would e'er be born within our twinkling hearts), that capable in terms of the bliss that courses through all Life as it would through the brain of Man, under which bliss Man is meant to determine, on an individual basis, the function of every living system - and this is what the School of the Living Universe is all about.

Such fullness is what makes the brain function at its best (the purpose of all ancient culture and education in the living Universe of Life, that whose dome is the clouds and planets and stars and whose pillars are the trees, whose illumination is that born within our very hearts, those of every child's purest feelings and dreams), giving greater power and range to one's thought (that in terms and for the sake of all the Happiness of Man in infinite eternities - have you not noticed?), that which deigns to hide both the total obsolescence and fullness of all social apparatus and technology in the Nature whence grows all the letters of our lives, those of a Universe unfolding with the spelling all our dreams come true.

These drug cults (also Sun and Saturn worshippers) own and run all the alcohol and drug cartels today (and where does alcohol benefit Man? Show me - I recently heard a couple alcoholic women explain to a child that wine was "good for you" according to doctors, a child who could easily see through their vapid rationalization, standing his noble ground as an angelic child of the creator). This is why the CIA is so involved in poppy plants in Afghanistan (the production has gone up ten times since the invasion of U.S. forces). This is why Vietnam was so important, to get the drug trade moving into the United States more. This is also the main reason for the Hippie movement. Technocracy can only produce the appearance of being for the benefit of Man while aping all Man's emotional and physical energy. The only reason our society is still alive is because of the power of the human spirit, the only truth spelled out in words in the weeks and years following 9/11.

This is also the reason for the new age and DMT and drug culture as the "way to awareness" that gives the mind much but takes, like any "deal with the Devil" even more away, contact with the feelings of the Soul most necessary to radiate the light of truth, the truth of Happiness and Paradise. Freedom through drugs is an oxymoron. Only a mind deformed by the albeit charming effects of drug use can accept such a premise and even aim to "fight" for it. Why do you think drugs are illegal? And yet no books are produced, at least that are ever marketed, that talk about the medically proven harmful effects of drugs? They want you to use them! And more of a profit from having you hurt yourself, saving them the trouble, allowing them to get free labour from the wanton incarceration of the human Soul physically or psychologically or both. Think about it for yourself.

This is why so many forms of hard liquor contain hidden references, in their very names, to the Sun or to God. Liquor advertising even boasts of its criminal past, as though including the consumer in the heretical intoxication that a "real man or woman" needs to break the law in order to be free, the so called dark hero or vigilante so aptly portrayed in Apocalypse Now, the Man free from all moral constraint whose prime religious act is to prove his "freedom" through abject cruelty to his fellow Man. This is what I mean by heretical, involving the core belief that the real God of the Universe is the enemy of this the only "real freedom" that comes down to Man. Such minds are bent beyond all recognition.

This is why so many corporate logos contain a visual reference to the rings of Saturn, the god that eats his children. This is what your college or high school graduation "cap" represents. We know this thanks to the research of Jordan Maxwell. Makes you wonder just who is in charge of your education and just what education really means, doesn't it?

The Jews did survive and have survived some of the greatest trials in the history of Man. Jewish people are so gentle and intelligent, dedicated often to moral discernment and goodness. I came from an alcoholic family. It disposes me and my siblings to great kindness and understanding. But at times it can make some people the most viciously unsympathetic to the suffering of others by no fault of their own. The Bible is clear about that. It is also clear that Jewish peoples of that time sustained enormous mental torture greatly effecting their behaviour and values, orienting them to those of a sadistic value system, complete with routines of child sexual immolation that I do believe stimulate the brain to higher levels of operation early in life but also stand to greatly limit whole brain function, much as does our culture at large in practice if not by intent by the well meaning souls who generally keep this all going in the manner of the infinite forces of light and the cosmic purpose of evolution, the expansion Happiness.

Jesus Himself deals with this in the New Testament. He is not speaking to all Jews. He is speaking to all people and especially to some Jews of His day who were greatly victimized and were victimizing others, such as through the first money exchanges that have led to the global finance cartels of today.

Having said that, nothing is more powerful than kindness. Kindness of a child rules the World. It always has. It always will.

And I wish you that kind of peace and influence upon the Earth, for the sake and joy of all life forever.

According to the wisdom of our ancestors, Only Happiness leads to Happiness, only Happiness as an Absolute and Eternal Boundless Life Principle the very force of our minds and of all Life can lead to that understanding from whence all sorrow, over time, may be assuaged.

PART THREE

An Alien Mother Ship

The boundless fullness of Life advances every change in our lives for the sake of the endless expansion and realization of the boundless fullness of Life, our "Love dissolved in Space for one can touch the hearts of many. So that close to a loved one there will always be a Space of Love. This is the essence of Love, this is its designated purpose." (Anastasia, The Space of Love, by Vladimir Megré)

Always remember, you are not just surviving it. You are also making a vital contribution to our understanding of this and much else besides for the sake of all Life on Earth. For the ways the brains of psychotic alcoholic-type human beings treat other psychotic or non-psychotic human beings is analogous to how all Mankind treats the Goddess of Mother Earth, the way what I call the culture of an alien Mother Ship treats Man and Man's pristine culture of the Earth and the Birth and Future of all Mankind. For this reason, if She were to undermine all artificial energy systems, this would not be to punish or harm Man but to protect Herself, Her own Body, Heart and Soul and that of the whole inheritance, health and Life of all Mankind.

Take a step back and educate yourself. Ask yourself, "What I am actually observing here?" forgetting why. The why will soon appear.

And hopefully there is some good literature on the subject, which is why I wanted to offer the following reference guide:

Appendix XVI: "The Victimized Aggressor", Family Alcoholism: A Life Story at lulu.com/rayn

It is absolutely fascinating to me, a never ending source of awe and wonder how many hundreds and thousands of people in all walks of life from the lowest to the highest levels of cultural and political authority, how many families, how many conscious choices of how many families, men and women, how many choices need to be made, affecting so many families for so many generations causing untold social and personal illness undermining every social and life support system on Earth, how much highly coordinated human labour, thought and emotion, how many ecological and societal resources need to be mobilized requiring how much coordination and cooperation of how many companies, people and institutes (and countless more decisions) in order to drop bombs on, launch missiles at from land, air and sea, and fire automatic weapons upon innocent men, women and children en masse (by the hundreds of thousands) in foreign lands, how much profit is made from selling those countries weapons presumably for their own safety and protection, and then how much more profit is made by the same companies selling people on attacking them, making them out to be dire threats to our own safety, security, health and prosperity and, finally, how long this pattern has continued to be accepted by how many millions of presumably educated people in the most presumably informed and advanced few centuries of the last several millennia?

"Anastasia, please explain what you mean by someone's "spirit". What does it consist of?"

"It consists of all the unseen elements in a Man, including certain passions and sensations acquired during the period of existence in the flesh."

"Does the spirit possess an energy, analogous to any of the energies we know of?"

"That is correct. It is an energy complex, consisting of a multitude of different energies. After the end of a human individual's fleshly existence, certain of these complexes break up into separate energies, which are subsequently used in plant and animal aggregates, as well as in essential natural phenomena."

"What kind of power do they have? What is the energy potential of unbroken complexes?"

"They vary from individual to individual. The weakest ones cannot even overcome gravitational energy - they will later fall apart, no matter what."

"Gravitational, you say? The weakest ones? Is it possible to see their presence in anything at all? To touch it? Feel it?"

"Of course. In a tornado, for example."

"A tornado? You mean a tornado which rips trees up by the roots and overturns things? Then what kind of energy do the strongest ones have?"

"The strongest? Well, that would be Him. I cannot fully fathom the strength of His energy."

"Then, let's say, somewhere in between, something average?"

"The energy complex of many average spirits already contains a released mental energy."

"What would be the strength or energy potential of an average complex like this?"

"I already told you: it contains released mental energy."

"What does that mean? What can it be compared to? How would you define it?"

"To what can it be compared? A definition? Tell me, what is the most powerful energy that your mind, your thought or consciousness can imagine?"

"The energy of a nuclear explosion. No, rather, the energy of the reactions taking place at the Sun's core."

"Everything you have named is equivalent to but a tiny fraction of released mental energy. As for definitions, those are things you think up yourselves to use in verbal communication with each other. Not a single definition you have ever thought of is applicable here. You can use the ones you are familiar with if you multiply them to the power of infinity."

Anastasia, Chapter Five, "The spirit of a foremother", Book3, The Space of Love, by Vladimir Megré

"What are the forces of Light?"

"These," Anastasia replied, "are all the bright thoughts ever produced by people. All space is filled with them."

"Can you freely communicate with them? Can you see them?"

"Yes, I can."

"Can you answer any question confronting science today?"

"Many of them, perhaps. But every scientist - indeed, every Man - can find the answers. Everything depends upon the purity of one's thoughts, and the motive for asking."

"Could you explain certain phenomena of science?"

"If the answer does not come to you, it means your thoughts are not sufficiently pure. Such is the law of the Creator. I will not go against it, if I feel it is not right to tell you."

"Is there something higher than the bright thoughts produced by Man?"

"There is. But they are just as significant."

"What is it? How can you define it?"

"In a way you are capable of relating to.'

"Are you able to talk with Him?'

"Yes. At least sometimes. As far as I know, I talk directly with Him.'

"Is there some kind of energy that exists in the Universe that we don't know about on the Earth?'

"The greatest energy in the Universe is on the Earth. We need only to understand it.'

"Can you, Anastasia, give me at least an approximate description of this energy? Is it like a nuclear reaction? A vacuum phenomenon?'

"The most powerful energy in the Universe is the energy of Pure Love.'

"I'm talking about visible, tangible energy, capable of influencing technical progress, of producing heat and light. And, if you like, an explosion.'

"And I am talking about the same thing. All your humanly established installations, taken together, are not able to supply light to the Earth for any length of time. But the energy of Love can.'

"There you go talking allegorically again. In some other, metaphorical sense.'

"I am talking in a literal sense, as you understand it.'

"But love is a feeling! It's not something visible - it can't be applied, or even seen.'

"Love is energy. It is reflected. It is possible to see it.'

"Where is it reflected? How is it possible to see it?'

"The Sun, the stars, the visible planets - they are all but reflectors of this energy. The light of the Sun, which gives life to everything on Earth, is created by human love. In the whole Universe the energy of Love is reproduced only in the soul of Man. It takes upward flight, becomes filtered and reflected, and pours itself forth from the planets of the Universe as beneficial light upon the Earth.'

"Do not combusive, chemical reactions take place on the Sun on their own?'

"You have only to do a little reasoning to realise the falsity of such a conclusion. It is like, as you put it, "two-plus-two".

"Can Man control this energy?'

"Not to any significant degree, at least for the time being.'

"But do you know how to do it?"

"Myself, I do not know. If I knew, my beloved would already love me."

"You say you can communicate with Him - a Being higher than the forces of Light? Does He always answer you? I mean, willingly?"

"Always. And He always answers very gently. Because He could not do otherwise."

"Could you ask Him how to control the energy of Love?"

"I did ask."

"And?"

"To comprehend certain answers of His, one needs to have a certain level of conscious awareness and purity, which I myself do not have. I do not understand all His answers."

"But you will attempt to do something to obtain this required love?"

"Of course I shall do something."

"What will you do?"

"I shall think. Help me. I need to ask all the women out there who have ever loved, all who have or have not been loved. They will think, analyse and produce thoughts which will appear in the dimension of the forces of Light. I shall see them. I shall understand and then I shall help everyone. Thoughts in the dimension of Light are always comprehensible."

Chapter Six, "Forces of Light", Ibid.

"Vladimir then did something that might seem incredible. In three months he managed to change the attitude of the local residents toward the dolmens. They began bringing flowers. The women ethnographers of the Gelendzhik museum set up a public association, which they called "Anastasia" in my honour. This association opened a school for tour-guides in order to get the right message out to tourists about the dolmens, so they would preserve and take care of the dolmens instead of destroying them. In addition, they began organising new tours, which they called "Excursions into reason".

"The tour-guides at Gelendzhik began telling everyone about the significance of our pristine origins and about the works of the Grand Creator - about Nature."

Chapter Four, "Chords of the Universe", Ibid.

"Yes,' Anastasia replied calmly, and right away added: 'Everything I know I am ready to share with all people, if they find it interesting, but only with all people. Science is not something that is available to everybody at once. Its achievements are used first only by localised groups, often for their selfish, personal interests. The vast majority get to know about only what the localised groups are disposed to reveal.'

"What do you represent? Is it not a particular localised group? I cannot go with you. I need to raise a Man, I need to raise my son. That can only be done properly where a Space of Love has been created. This Space has been created and perfected by my forebears, near and distant. It is still small, but it is what ties me to the whole substance of the Universe. Every Man must create around himself his own Space of Love, and offer it to his child. Bearing children without preparing a Space of Love for them is criminal. Every Man must create around himself a small Space of Love. And if everyone understood this and acted upon it, then the whole Earth would become the brightest focus of Love in the Universe. This is the way He wanted it, and this is Man's purpose. For only Man is capable of creating such a Space.'

Chapter Seven, "Assault!", Ibid.

[Anastasia referring to their newborn son] "'He doesn't need any material goods in your sense of the term. He will have everything he needs right from the start. You have the desire to give our baby some sort of senseless trinkets, which he doesn't need at all. You are the one who needs them for your own self-satisfaction, so you can say: 'Look at how good and attentive I am!'

"Why on Earth would she say something like that - "He doesn't need any material goods"? Come on, now! What can a parent give his newborn child, then? Especially a father? It's still too early to start raising a breast-feeding infant in a fatherly way. How then can I express my relationship to him? How can I show him I care for him? A mother can breast-feed her baby, it's easier for her, she's already doing something, but what can a father do? In civilised circumstances he can help around the house, fix things up, take financial care of his family.

But Anastasia doesn't need anything like that. All she has is her glade in the taiga. Her 'household' takes care of itself and waits on her hand and foot, which means the boy will get the same treatment once he's been seen as coming from her.

"I wonder how much it would cost to buy that kind of service? Sure, one can purchase or get a long-term lease on a few hectares of land easy enough, but what price can you put on the love and loyalty of a she-wolf, a she-bear, bugs and an eagle? Maybe Anastasia doesn't need any of the accomplishments of our civilisation, but why should the child have to suffer for his mother's crazy world-view? The child can't even have normal toys! She sees everything her own way. "The child doesn't need senseless trinkets, they'll only do him harm, distract him from the the truth," she says.

Chapter One, "Just another pilgrim", Ibid.

"Man has always intuitively felt the true beauty and perfection of the eternal, and that is why even a king surrounded by luxury and personal palaces has always needed a garden. This is a truth that has remained unshakeable for millions of years of Man's life on the Earth.

"True delight and peace is attainable only in one's own family domain.

"When a Man takes his morning walk through his family domain, every blade of grass is delighted and reacts to him. And, far from decaying, his garden grows with every passing moment of blessed living.

"The Man understands that the programme he has set out - trees, bushes and fruit-bearers planted by his own hand - will not decay but live on through the ages. They will live for ever, provided the Man does not change his mind.

"When the Man takes his morning walk through his family domain, he breathes its air, and with each breath takes in thousands of invisible particles - plant pollen. The air is saturated with them. Quite alive, they enter the Man, dissolving within him without a trace, nourishing his body with everything he needs. And the air of one's family domain nourishes not only the human body, but feeds the spirit with ethers and accelerates thought."

[...]"In the second century [...]the last book still written in Runic characters [...] told about Man's Divine way of life. It talked, too, about the possibility of mastering the Universe through the harmonious mastery first of a plot of one's family land and then the planet called Earth as a whole."

Anastasia's Grandfather

Anastasia, Book 7, The Energy of Life, by Vladimir Megré

"You have a concept known as Shambala, or Motherland. The meaning of these words is becoming more and more abstract. Motherland - that is literally MOTHER-LAND. Mother! In anticipation of their child's appearance into the world, parents ought to create a Space for him. An environment of kindness and love. And to give him a piece of the Motherland, which, like a mother's womb, both preserves the body and caresses the soul. It imparts the wisdom of creation and assists in obtaining the truth."

Anastasia, Book 2, The Ringing Cedars of Russia, by Vladimir Megré 1996, Chapter Twenty-Seven, "Anomaly", translated into English by Leonid Sharaskin 2005-2008, Ringing Cedars Press

There is a Fullness of all Life (the Fullness that is Life Itself on its own eternal plane of Absolute Being along with the levels of all the relative orders of its endless expression and expansion) that sustains every change of all our lives as the endless expansion and realization of Itself. It is all our Happiness and all our Happiness is It. It is the most abstract and yet substantial aspect of all that exists (it is existence Itself), all our dreams and feelings come true - in this the land of our dreams and of God's Dream of all creation in terms of the Birth of Man and all Man's own purest feelings of inspired creation - as they send out their invisible rays and grace (the rays and information of and for the Fullness of every order of Life!) in correspondence with that of the Universal Sun of an almighty feminine almighty masculine God of Pure Love Intelligence to all creatures and living systems on Earth (all the desire and force of the human mind, that which illuminates every Happiness of every path of an infinity of Happiness of Man, that upon which all Life depends, that in which all its roots are immersed and in that service, alone, sending forth all its shoots), rays of a power beyond all description reflected down by all the planets, the Sun and the Moon and stars, the birth of such an Happiness and Fullness of Life with which Man is meant to observe every shade and plane of every leaf and cloud of these the living reaches of the depths of eternity and the whole unfolding of eternity from within himself, from within herself, both girls and boys born from the same boundless Universe of the Fullness of all gentleness, love and kindness, goodness, happiness and peace flowing through time forever with the unchanging Fullness (and all our feelings filled with the boundless reaches permeating the individual reality, language and perceptions of all peoples everywhere), flowing through time forever with the unchanging Fullness, that of our own Soul with the invincible dawn of the Fullness and Happiness of all Souls (of the whole World) each in terms of their image of their lives and of themselves, flowing through time forever with the boundless unchanging Fullness of a "Once Upon A Time..." and "In The Beginning..." as "In Our Mother..."

And this Fullness is our own individual Being.

It is my understanding that ages that "return to God" or original science of Life and Nature return to a focus on the mind as divine, as well as that of the profound intelligence of emotional and personal experience.

To suggest that God is "all in the mind" does not take anything away from the believer in God if God is really all in the mind, even the very force and entire cosmic (all embracing, all sustaining) intelligence of the mind and matter and all their linkages as the fullness of an endless expression and expansion of the boundless fullness of an Absolute Life Principle or Being, God. This is the 5000+ year wisdom of the Upanishads and the Bhagavad-Gita, the Indian Vedas like unto Celtic & Pagan thought.

The world happens, I feel, according to our mind and the mind happens according to the world because there is a similar substance and force behind both our mind and the world or mind and matter, a field of intelligence or fullness of being that gives rise to mind and matter (the force of mind and matter, of all Life), along with all their unfathomable linkage for the sake of the endless expansion and realization of the most abstract yet most substantial absolute fullness of all that exists.

"Scientists in many countries of the world are trying to capture the extraordinary sounds of the Universe with their costly specialised equipment. These sounds are out there. They are known to science. Maybe not all of them, just a few for the time being. Maybe just a billionth part of the whole. What devices do you use to capture them, Anastasia? What equipment will allow us to select the sounds that can exert an effective influence on the human mind?"

"The equipment one needs has existed for a long time already. It is called the human soul. The attitude and purity of the soul will accept or reject sounds from the Universe."

"Okay, fine. Okay. Let's assume. Let's assume you've managed to... to find and select from the billions of sounds the best that the Universe has to offer, and then recombine them in the right way. But sound can only be reproduced with the help of a device or a particular musical instrument. What's the point of a book, then? After all, it can't make sounds."

"You are right, a book does not make sounds. But it can serve as a score, like a musical score. The reader will involuntarily utter within himself any sounds he reads. Thus the hidden combinations in the text will resonate in the reader's soul in their pristine form, with no distortion. They are bearers of Truth and healing. And they will fill the soul with inspiration. No artificial instrument is capable of reproducing what resonates in the soul."

Anastasia, Chapter Four, "Chords of the Universe", Book 3, The Space of Love, by Vladimir Megré

Ancient Pagan/Celtic wisdom (that of surviving Vedic wisdom) speaks of a "blue god" or "Dian-y-glas". I believe long before Man bowed down to "other Worlds" Man himself had already become an alien to the Earth. Before, Man spoke to God. Man lived in the presence of God as depicted in the Anastasia books.

The "new age" talks about "ships from other Worlds" and "new DNA". But I think our purpose is to be fully human just as always, to access a more enjoyable, more satisfying, more truly ecological and truly naturally religious combination of our existing (whole in itself right from the start) DNA, along with the sublime Universal notes and codes for the fullness of every unfolding of eternal Life and Happiness within our souls. So much of the "new age" is about "getting what we want" and rarely is it about living according to original design; rarely does the "new age" ever indict humanity for the filth we have created in lieu of our natural divine inheritance, as forgiving and boundlessly loving as it and Mother Earth are together.

Sure, the "new age" can suggest we already "have everything" or that we are "one with nature", but what does that really mean if we have forgotten how to live priceless lives fair to all ecology? What will it matter if we should "be in the now" and "have all we want" if we should destroy ourselves in the end?

Incomplete though well meaning visions of Life upon which theories about human potential are based are just that, incomplete visions.

Under the pristine conditions of inner and outer human Happiness, the human spirit is properly coordinated with the body and thus with the Universe of Nature and all Life. According to ancient wisdom and Anastasia, this can only be created in a Space of Love or true Motherland, the subject of my book, My Motherland My Child: A Book of Kin at lulu.com/rayn, a part of my interest in taking full responsibility to educate or provide the appropriate conditions for my child to educate themselves about the World as it really is unopposed to the World we have imagined to be opposed to or be opposed by everything truly good in Life.

What is this Motherland?

"You have a concept known as Shambala, or Motherland. The meaning of these words is becoming more and more abstract. Motherland - that is literally MOTHER-LAND. Mother! In anticipation of their child's appearance into the world, parents ought to create a Space for him. An environment of kindness and love. And to give him a piece of the Motherland, which, like a mother's womb, both preserves the body and caresses the soul. It imparts the wisdom of creation and assists in obtaining the truth."

Anastasia, Book 2, The Ringing Cedars of Russia, by Vladimir Megré 1996, Chapter Twenty-Seven, "Anomaly", translated into English by Leonid Sharaskin 2005-2008, Ringing Cedars Press

Under the pristine conditions of inner and outer human Happiness, the human spirit is properly coordinated with the body. When we turned away from those conditions, we lost those conditions provisionally. In a book called The Space of Love, a Russian student is shown a vision of a living hell, one in which he and several other guards who have recently attempted to abduct the main character of the book, Anastasia (a woman who still lives according to these pristine conditions and who manifests extraordinary feats of wisdom therefore) are forced, their minds separated from their bodies, to watch their bodies engage in numerous lustful and painful acts, the pain of which they are forced to feel without any control of their transparent bodies, turning a once pristine pool into a cesspool and destroying the surrounding nature in order to build crude structures and then fight over their possession, babies are conceived in lust, bodies decay rapidly and take new birth as these babies, repeating the cycle over and over again at an accelerated rate.

The student, Alexander, has related this to the author, Vladimir:

"You know, you said we 'went through an experience'. But, you see... It may seem hard to believe, but the thing is, I'm not completely out of it. I think those who were in our group, too, haven't fully come out of it."

"What do you mean, 'haven't fully'? Here you are, sitting calmly beside me, poking the ashes in the fire..."

"Yeah, sure I'm sitting here poking the ashes, but that acute awareness of something terrible has stayed with me. It still frightens me. This terrible thing is not just in the past - it is still going with us today, right now. With all of us."

"Maybe something's happening with you, but everything's okay with me and everyone else.'

"But doesn't it seem to you, Vladimir, that the situation we were in is an exact copy of what mankind is doing today? What we were shown in a microcosm and at an accelerated speed only reflects what's going on today in the world.'

"It doesn't seem that way to me, since our skin is not transparent and our bodies obey our commands.'

"Maybe someone's just taking pity on us, not letting us become fully aware of what we have done and are continuing to do. After all, if we were aware of it, if we could see our lives from an external viewpoint, we'd see them exposed, along with all the false teachings which we've used through the ages to justify what we are doing. We wouldn't last, we'd go out of our minds!

"We try to put on a decent front, we try to justify the evil we do by our own so-called 'insurmountable weaknesses'. We couldn't resist temptation: we started smoking and drinking, committed murder, then we started going to war to defend some sort of ideals. We started setting off bombs.'

"We are weak. That's the way we see ourselves today. We say there are higher powers - they can do everything, they decide everything. But as for us? We hide behind dogmas like that and feel we can get away with any kind of filth we like.'

"And let's face it, what we do is filth. We all do it, every one of us, only we justify it to ourselves in different ways. But now it is absolutely clear that, as long as my consciousness has not lost its control over my body, I and I alone must take personal responsibility for all its actions. And Anastasia is right when she says 'As long as Man is in the flesh...'"

"We would never have been able to come out of it all on our own. It was something we were to go on reliving forever. At least that was the impression each of us had.'

"Anastasia appeared amidst our decomposing and still active bodies. Her skin wasn't transparent. She was still wearing her old cardigan and long skirt. She tried speaking to our bodies, but they wouldn't listen. They seemed to be preprogrammed to die and be born again, repeating their actions over and over with only a change of roles.'

"At that point Anastasia starting quickly picking up the garbage near one of the structures our bodies had built. She quickly gathered the scattered stones and brush into a pile with her hands, loosened the earth a little with a stick, touched and fluffed up the grass where we had trampled it, and the little green blades began popping up again - not all, but those that still could. Anastasia carefully straightened the broken trunk of a small tree, about a metre tall: she mashed up some earth in her hands to soften it and then daubed it on the broken part of the tree. She squeezed the tree between her hands, and held it tight for a while. Then, when she carefully took her hands away, the tree remained upright.'

"Anastasia nimbly went on doing what she had to do. She created a small 'oasis' on the ground our bodies had trampled, which had been left almost devoid of vegetation. Boris Moiseevich's body ran over to it, leapt onto the grass and rolled around on it, then jumped up and ran off. A little while later it returned with the body of one of the guards. Together they uprooted the small tree and began dragging stones and sticks to the 'oasis', where they attempted to put together yet another ugly-looking plain structure.'

"Anastasia threw up her hands in frustration. She tried talking to them but, as she met no response, she apparently abandoned her efforts at persuasion. After standing for a while in a dither about what to do next, she dropped to her knees, covered her face with her hands, and you could see the hair trembling on her shoulders. Anastasia was crying - crying just like a baby.'

"And almost immediately the bluish glow reappeared, at first barely noticeable. It drove the brownish smoke of our hell into the ground and reunited our bodies and our minds. Only we still weren't able to move about - but this time it wasn't from horror, but from a sweet and pleasant languor emanating from the blue glow. The fiery sphere was again circling overhead.'

"Anastasia stretched out her hands toward it. The sphere instantly changed location to within a metre of her face. She began talking with it, and this time I could distinguish words. Anastasia told the sphere:'

"Thank you. You are kind. Thank you for your mercy and your love. The people will understand, they will most certainly understand everything, they will understand it in their hearts. Do not ever take your beautiful blue light from the Earth, your light of love.'

"Anastasia smiled, and a tiny tear rolled down her cheek. From the sphere's pale-blue membrane hull fiery lightening bolts flew into her face. Carefully and dexterously they picked up the tear on her cheek, glistening in the sun, and ever so delicately, as though it were a priceless gem, held the tear on their fiery tips as they placed it inside the sphere. The sphere gave a shudder, executed a circle around Anastasia, landed momentarily at her feet, then swept upward and dissolved into the blue sky above, leaving everything on the ground the way it was before.'

"And there we were, standing where we had been before. The sun was shining, the river was flowing as it had always done, the forest could be seen rising in the distance, and there was Anastasia standing in front of us, right where she had been earlier. We stood there silently taking in everything around us. I was overjoyed by what I saw, and I think the others were, too. Only we weren't talking - perhaps because of what we had experienced and the natural surroundings which had suddenly become so beautiful to our gaze.'

"Alexander fell silent, as though he had quite withdrawn into himself.

"Anyway, what difference does it make what happened to us. There's something more important than that. I'm not the same person I was before - I don't know how to live now, what I should be studying, or where. After I got home, I burnt a lot of my books written by different so-called sages, 'wise men', teachers from various parts of the world. I had quite a decent-sized personal library.'

"What d'you go and do that for? You should have sold them, if you no longer needed them.'

"I couldn't sell them. I didn't even think of selling them. Now I have some accounts to settle with those teachers and sages.'

"And what do you think, Alexander - is it dangerous to communicate with Anastasia? Maybe she really is some kind of anomaly? After all some of the letters I've got say that she represents another civilisation. If that's true, then it'd be dangerous to communicate with her, because you never know what this other civilisation might have in mind.'

"I think just the opposite is true,' Alexander replied. 'She has such a feeling and love for the Earth, for everything living and growing on it, that, compared to Anastasia, we look pretty much like vagrant aliens.'

"Then who is she? Can scientists say for sure, once and for all? How did she manage to acquire such a huge mass of information? Where does she have room to store it in her head? Where did she get her mystifying abilities? What about her ray?'

"I think we simply have to go by her words here - she said: 'I am Man, I am a woman'. As for all that information, I don't think she stores any of it in her head. I think, rather, that the purity of her thoughts allows her access to the database of the entire Universe. And that her talents derive from this total access to information.'

"The Universe loves her, but is wary of us, and that's why it won't open itself to us completely. Our thoughts - the thoughts of any Man raised in today's society - are blocked by stereotypes and conventions, in contrast to her thought, which is completely open and free. That's why it's hard for us to explain her mysterious abilities simply by her assertion that she is Man."

Chapter Eight, "What hell is", Book Three, The Space of Love, by Vladimir Megré

* * *

According to one Master Doctor I have known, his response to the prevalence of psychotic behaviour in our society was this: "It's normal now."

That is pretty clear.

To conflate his countless years of experience and research (his work has been consulted by the United Nations), the human immune system is the most challenged organ of the human energy system and faces the greatest threats to our continued existence today, facing a total full-spectrum chronic (from conception) assault all our lives, an assault in the realm of every dimension of human existence.

A prominent example of mass social psychosis, made up of all the little psychotic things we do each day, is war. Who is really in command of war? How many people, choices and resources are necessary for war, and commanded by whom? A military commander? The president, you say? And who commands them, perhaps, Henry Kissinger? The head of the Committee on Foreign Relations? The Trilateral Commission? And who commands them, the United Nations' Secretary-General? Have you ever wondered why the de facto head of Canada, for instance, is called a Governor-General? And who commands them? Do we even know? Do they?

To quote from Vladimir Megre's Space of Love, Book Three of the Anastasia series,

"Anastasia's gone. She's gone deep into the taiga. She couldn't help leaving. If you try to go after her, you might get killed. You're not suited to the taiga. Besides, you've got to write some more. To fulfil your promise to her.'

"In order to write more, I've got to hear her answers to the many questions from my readers. Questions about children, about different religions...'

"Nobody'll find her now.'

"Why do you keep parroting: 'She can't be found! She can't be found!' I know where her glade is, I'll find her.'

"I tell you, you won't. Anastasia can't help but realise that there are people out to hunt her down.'

"What do you mean, they're out to hunt her down? Is somebody bribing the local hunters? Just like they pay you and Yegorych?'

"Me and Yegorych? No way! We try to persuade people not to interfere with her, not to alarm her. And if that doesn't work, we take them and let them off on the opposite shore. The local hunters can't be bribed; they've got laws and values of their own. They knew about Anastasia long before you came along. They've always treated her with great respect. They've been careful even when speaking about her amongst themselves. They don't like it when strangers show up in the taiga, and they're pretty good shots.'

"Then who could possibly hunt her down?'

"I think: whoever has led us into the condition we find ourselves in at this moment. And is still leading us.'

"Can you be more specific?'

"Each one of us has to work that out more specifically on their own.'

"But still, who do you have in mind? Someone like Boris Moiseevich?'

"He's just a tool. There's something we can't see that's playing with us. And Boris Moiseevich is starting to realise that now. And maybe the one who hired him has realised it, too."

Anastasia, Book Three, The Space of Love, Chapter Ten, "Work out your own happiness",
by Vladimir Megré

Most people would think it quite fantastical so suggest that we effectively, though not entirely, live upon or within the cultural conditions of an as though alien Mother Ship that, since our birth, advances and immerses us in training for and limited to conditions that are in fact completely separate or aim to be from the values of any ancient pristine culture of the Earth or of the Birth of Man.

Of course, we are not speaking of a physically evident alien Mother Ship. That would be absurd. However, just like we understand and internalize a physical map of our country or the World, we learn as we grow up conditions with respect to coordinates in space, time, history and existence, coordinates with which we perceive and act with various kinds of actual effects and actualities with respect to different levels of our minds and our perceptions as they correspond with the innumerable forces of Life and the World.

Therefore, we do not live on a physical alien Mother Ship, but we do live in invisible impressively developmentally psychological and even religious conditions that are in fact alien to those which support Life, that of an alien Mother Ship at a level of actuality in terms of the more evident and brutal contradictions in how we live with respect to the health of all Life on Earth, with respect to who we are.

To wit, we are or have been killing Mother Earth, the real Mother Ship, even though we have adopted conditions that the alien Mother Ship tells us are normal and that even suggest that any perceived failing of Mother Nature is only further evidence of the supremacy of human thought over Nature, that of a truly alien Life in place of Life.

An example. Whenever I have suggested to well educated people that there is a lot to be learned from the whole idea of living on the land, of growing all our own food, this is always treated as an anachronism at best and, at worst, tremendously naive, as though if that were a sufficient way to maintain any truly healthy culture "we would be doing it already". In other words, if that were realistic, the alien Mother Ship would have said so. We are taught to believe that we "stopped growing our own food" because it was not effective and that our true pristine history was far more perilous than the World today. Is that true? Think about it for yourself.

We routinely send our children away to wars to die. This logically implies that there is something more important than the Life of our children. Is this true?

Now it could be conceived that a level of cultural activity could exist that truly promotes and maintains peace and health for all beings on Earth - that being the case, perhaps it might be worth giving one's Life or the Life of one's child to maintain and protect such a truly healthy cultural set of conditions for life and conduct, but we don't live in that culture. Therefore, our children are not necessarily living in such a truly peaceful culture.

Therefore, we are not sending our children away to die "for peace". At best we and our children can hope to create or return to a true set of peaceful cultural habits and fashions of thought, perception, cognition and behaviour. However, it is, in this light, quite illogical to think that we could create those conditions, since they do not evidently already exist, by dying for them and sending our children to die for them and kill other children for them in violent conflict.

Instead, our children are and have mostly always been sent away (there are exceptions, though not in our recorded history) to die for the values of the alien Mother Ship (to protect and expand the values of our own ill health and social disease, and our mass social sedation as such), values that our training in our respective alien hive lands have trained us well enough to believe they are normal and even exemplary for the health of all beings everywhere, fighting against people in foreign lands who have not had quite the same benefit of such an "education" and "acculturation" and so are, in fact, fighting for survival from the very things we or the political apparatus of our respective countries are sending our children to die for, or to kill other men, women and children for. And, make no mistake, the West has instigated and provoked every major military invasion of the last fifty years, from Vietnam to Panama and from the Persian Gulf to Afghanistan.

This perhaps explains the cruel ironies that beset all historical to modern "wars for freedom".

And so we can suppose, or it might be constructive for some people to suppose that we are born into an alien Mother Ship that greatly restricts our development in the name of "normal development" for the "modern World", one that treats ancient values of the land as themselves "underdeveloped".

Even so, Man is good. Man everywhere aims to make the World a better place for all. I would suggest that, despite the training of the alien Mother Ship (whose purpose is to separate Man from any suggestion of his and her culture of the Earth and of the Birth of Man), that Man's basic urges are animalistic and must be "repressed" in order to function "properly" in "normal society" (a training that goes back hundreds of years), that Man's actual urges are very pure, those of a culture of the Birth of Man, and those that everywhere assert themselves through the culture of the alien Mother Ship that seeks to colonialize all newborns and their families, people who have been everywhere indoctrinated to think that peace itself can only be obtained in terms of the conditions of the alien Mother Ship (militaristic conditions), those of both an vastly underdeveloped child and adult World.

Therefore, I would suggest, in this context, that all art, literature and science aims to resolve the profoundly disturbing contradictions between how we live and who we are (or were in terms of ancient cultures of the Earth and of the Birth of Man), that our primary deepest urges involve information and feelings from the purity of our Birth, those containing information about our true place and orientation to Life and the Universe in continuity with the best to which all Mankind has ever or could ever aspire to.

The whole purpose, I believe, of all literature and art is to deal with the vastly disturbing contradictions (ones every newborn faces, whether we know it or not) between how we live and who we really are.

In terms of the global or "reduced global" education of the consequentially under nourished (in every way) human brain, no one in the realm of money and career is ever able to reach their full potential; the criteria of even "full potential" are just too narrow and makes much of what is true human genius anachronistic at best if not totally "naive". For this reason, don't ever let anyone or any idea make you think you are less than vital to all Life on Earth. The fact that we only recognize the genius of an infinitesimal portion of our respective societies (that which, though greatly imbalanced in itself, serves the conditions of the alien Mother Ship) is absolutely arcane and even barbaric.

It is just that the alien Mother Ship, and the culture of its conditioning, has no place for much of the genius of Man, all of which must operate in terms of the alien Mother Ship if it wants to "be anything" at all. Just so, parents often give their children the message that they need to "be someone" when they grow up, as though they are not already the angelic solution (provided by God to the Birth of Man and the Birth of Man to the fullness of all Life forever) to all problems on Earth, would we but prepare appropriate food and living conditions for children of the creator of the entire Universe. However, this value is not taught by the alien Mother Ship (there are no movies about it), which teaches us instead to get our children ready for the World instead of the World ready for our children. This is child abuse and violence to the human Soul, that which expects to be caressed by God's almighty Dream of Birth.

This means that no one in any "paid" field can ever reach the height of their craft. There is just no means provided for them to do so. And yet we compare ourselves to "giants of human culture" as though comparison benefits either them or ourselves. It does not benefit anyone. It never has. In fact, comparison is the source of much human suffering.

To understand what I generally think about celebrities of every order, it is necessary to understand what I think of celebrity itself, which is that, today, celebrity or notoriety confers familiarity with the character of those whose character we, in fact, know and likely will never know anything about. And so celebrity by nature involves magical thinking at best and deception at worst, a magical thinking on the order of every compulsive behaviour with which Man has ever attempted to contend. And celebrities themselves have openly spoken of the magical thinking involved in the "culture of celebrity" to which they often confine themselves as some kind of relief from the anxieties conferred upon them by their chosen fields in an industry, like an alien Mother Culture, that is only ever secondarily about the people at best, though it may and does attempt to give quite a different appearance of being the greatest possible benefit to Man - that for which Man is invited to die and give Birth to children whose role may be to die for the underdeveloped and contradictory and harmful values of the the alien Mother Ship, values we are taught are normal, the negative effects to other cultures and all other Life on Earth being perceived (as we are taught to perceive) as part of the hateful jealousy or lack of development of other cultures (who fight, as many people do unknowingly, for survival from the same cultural values of "peace and freedom" that others are routinely teaching and sending their children to die for) or systems in nature respectively, that we will "develop something better than nature", nature which cannot handle the "development of Man" (really the alien Mother Ship culture that is, in essence, racist to all Mankind). And really we have not developed very much at all according to historical standards of levels of thought for thousands of years. From the perspective of our ancient forebears, I believe our thought has virtually stopped and our imagination (to say nothing of our character, as well as our conscious and ethical capacity) been almost entirely atrophied.

Just so, movies are often about watching underdeveloped children deal in an heroic fashion with an underdeveloped adult World, leaving the children just as underdeveloped (as characters and people) as when they began, or about watching underdeveloped adults use heroic means to expand or, alternatively, survive the conditions of the alien Mother Ship. That we pay the same amount of money and gain the same level of enjoyment from watching a movie character survive or fight for the conditions of human enslavement is some testament, I would argue, for the actuality to some degree of the alien Mother Ship, despite it being invisible to the eye.

And so the culture of celebrity is a very poor lens with which to apprehend the character of anyone. The culture of the Earth and of the Birth of Man is all about genuine character. The conditions of the alien Mother Ship are all about celebrity, about people, even you or I, acting on behalf of the alien Mother Ship with a "when in Rome" mentality with which we live in a society as every bit as colonial in its operation as the Roman Empire ever was. Some of our "celebrity leaders" are even blood-related to Caesar. The motto of our technocratic culture seems to be that if it can get your attention it must be worth your attention.

Some people are able to write some art that actually speaks to the underdevelopment of the alien Mother Ship in a way that takes what I feel is an appropriate measure of the enormity of the task at hand. One such author was Charles Dickens. Other books would be Holy Scriptures, the Anastasia book series, some Thomas Hardy, J.R.R. Tolkien and Beatrix Potter.

Other authors like John Grisham and Stephen King, I wonder what they are really leaving their children (and I have seen the writing of one of Stephen King's children - it's horrifying - and children are reading it), or if they have been able to truly flush out their clear genius within the confines of profit, of "what sells".

I can say I like Charles Dickens because I like the writing of Dickens. No one would think that I know the character of Dickens. No one would ever expect that I even could have met Charles Dickens but through his work. However, the level of familiarity conferred upon modern celebrities (and, whether you know it or not, the presumed familiarity of corporate agendas with YOU) creates a very different association with their name, image and person, that of a level of familiarity that could not possibly be accurate - and they in their own words feel this acutely - both their anxieties and of those tasked to "live the image of society they represent" are being used for profit not to Man but to the conditions of the alien Mother Ship "hive mind", that which suggests it is "natural" when it is carefully removed from any meaningful or even logical connection with the intelligence and culture of the Earth and of the Birth of Man.

Celebrity enforces familiarity with those (as those are familiar with us) whom we know absolutely nothing about. No one or very few from history is ever true to their "image". Do we think that even contemporary celebrities are true to their "image"? And, if not, how does that image effect our own image of Life, that with which we live our lives in accordance with both the hive mind and whatever of our own pristine urges from our Birth we attempt to repress where they find no evident means of expression or even value by the "modern" and "advanced" society that is killing the Earth and sending children to be killed to fight those who are only, like most of us, attempting to survive the very conditions "of peace" we claim are worth the lives of our children, when in fact our culture knows no such "peace" in the first place.

One very serious University student, when asked what she felt about our troops killing innocent children in other countries (less acculturated to the conditions of our alien Mother Ship - "enemies of our freedom" are always trying to survive the conditions of our "freedom"), replied very tersely and confidently that it was a matter of foreign policy, and that was the end of it. "It wasn't a fair question."

If we follow this logic (or lack of logic), that means that the same society that aims to do everything, even kill innocent children, in order to protect the safety of our children (the conditions best for the alien Mother Ship), that same society's foreign policy could at any time be more important than the life and safety of a child anywhere, especially if that child's life conflicts in any way with our foreign policy, what is really the sacred story of war as it corresponds with though trumps the story of "domestic freedom and security".

Now to be fair to this University student, she does live in very malicious conditions with respect to the whole development of the human brain as it was nourished in past cultures of the Earth and of the Birth of Man. Let us suppose that there could conceivably be a culture whose actions preserve peace and well being for all peoples on the main, this might conceivably be worth killing a few children (I don't think so, but let's just give her the benefit of the doubt for a moment). However, we do not live in such a culture, a culture that lives according to peace, and nor will killing any children anywhere create such a culture anytime soon - in fact, I would say that any effort to create such a peaceful and truly secure culture anywhere by killing children as per "foreign policy" or any reason that is no reason at all (according to all natural logic) faces an infinite probability of failure. Yes. I think we can be quite certain of that.

Having given that example, the idea of an alien Mother Ship does not seem so absurd compared with how people are trained to "reason" about the untold deaths of innocents in the name of whose freedom, were they educated enough by our local colleges, we are killing them.

Whence the aggression of our educated youth or anyone in this matter? Because the high priests of our society understand psychology very well. Every child subjected to the brutal conditions for training and "fitting into the World" provided so graciously by the local representatives, including their own parents, of the alien Mother Ship can often only survive such conditions (what may then become, one day, thriving) by taking them on as their own values (and brain development or lack of development as the case may be, brains that cannot process emotions, due to such trauma, as are necessary for the development of whole higher brain function, leaving the child compulsively driven and overly aggressive, condemned to all manner of social illness if not within the fairly aggressive norms of the alien culture then certainly from the perspective of fundamentally Life-enhancing and Life-preserving human values and human intelligence potential), values of the standard for normal and even exemplary behaviour in our alien society and that from which, I am convinced, all children eventually die.

Aggression or indeed any lack of reasonable and reasonably consistent socially appropriate interest in the reasonable needs and feelings of others comes from a lack of brain development; where there is one, there is always the other.

This student is just doing the best she can, for there is no rest for anyone in the alien Mother Ship; we are either working to survive or working to thrive; either way, we are working, working not in the sense of our actions being entirely fruitful and enjoyable for Life but certainly fruitful, as a priority, to the alien Mother Ship and only secondarily, if at all, to actual human needs for health, wealth and enjoyment of Life through the creation of a truly vital home for the Soul of one's child in terms of the grand whole place of Man and the birth of Man in the living cosmos of Nature.

Personality traits suit particular political ideologies, but political ideologies fit the whole range of most human personality traits, so that one way or the other people's energy and religious emotional input and "desire for security" can be used to feed and help expand the entire story and culture of War against the whole human race, what all foreign policy (as it corresponds with yet trumps so called domestic policy) is really about, racism against all Mankind, that for which our ancient Vedic and Celtic ancestors the World over fought and died "babies in one hand and swords in the other, with the poetry of our gardens and our hearts, unleashing God-inspired thoughts in space that shall never die, vital ideas coursing through our veins even today, ideas and feelings coursing through the leaves and rivers and streams of the Earth even as we speak, saying "We shall never die. We shall never die. We shall never die. Legions, give up your dark torment and your sword, for ye shall never win."

Speaking of which, the entire purpose of the institution of marriage is to create conditions (in the name of social acceptance and recognition) from which the Energy of Love must flee, to break down the union between any two people and their children.

The whole purpose of State-sanctioned marriage or Church-sanctioned marriage and the Occult ritual of being pronounced "Married" by an agent or representative of a State or a Religion, the whole purpose of the Institution of Marriage is to create conditions from which the Energy of Love will flee as quickly as possible because, in fact, the purpose of the rituals set up within the hive mind of the alien Mother Ship are to make sure that Man stays low and as animalistic as possible, deriving the least possible benefit from the forces of Love or Nature by giving such a limited range of social choices for the expression of Love or angelic Genius as to guarantee he and she will take on roles or act in accord with Occult social agencies that will not be in the benefit of Man or the Earth and thus not receive the benefit of any force of cosmic development in Life or Nature at the same time or in the same breath that Man celebrates and vaunts his modern level of development as the most normal and best level of development and the only means, in fact, to truly further peace, security and development on Earth forever (any failures of which seem, through the many lenses this psychotic train of thought, as just cause to double all efforts in this regard), no matter how catastrophic it is to those who are, alternately, attempting to survive them (the conditions imposed by the alien Mother Ship and all of its patsies), those people who have always been the real enemy of the alien Mother Ship, whether they are called Commies or Terrorists, Savages or Muslims.

The institution of marriage is a good example of the Occult ritual set up by the alien Mother Ship. For the idea that God or Love is presiding over an Occult ritual whose entire purpose is to break down the union between a mother, a father, and their children, is to contract with them to be actors and representatives on behalf of the State-sanctioned Institution of Marriage whose entire purpose is to break down the actual marriage between two people is grotesquely absurd. God has never and will never preside over such an Occult union a distortion and besmirching of the true union of true minds, those in the presence of one another (perhaps also their children) and the grand Energy of Love (of God), that exists between a Man and Woman or any two people in Love. The Institute of Marriage's entire purpose is to break down a marriage. The wonder is not that so many couples get a divorce, but is that so many couples last as long as they do. In fact, married couples that I know that have been married for fifty years usually sleep in different beds and resent each other and themselves immensely.

When you go to bed with your husband or wife the very night that you are married, the reason why they are already not the Man or Woman you married is because the entire Occult marriage ritual is designed to turn them into an agent for the Institute of Marriage, an agent whose role, power and privilege precede that of the feelings with which they aimed to enter into a true Love relationship, the Occult ritual has brought forth to be acted out as a psychological and social role, through each person, a representative, a trained representative since birth of the Married State, of the agencies and conditions of the culture or Occulture of an alien Mother Ship whose entire purpose runs counter to that of the Energy of Love and of the most purest urges and feelings within the Soul and within the birth and any surviving culture of the Birth of Man (and truly High Romance); it runs counter to the very feelings of Love and of eternity that brought you together in the first place!

And yet nothing could be more troubling to me than how we as parents treat the experience we rather arbitrarily confine to that of "being a teenager".

Our medical and "expert" social culture tells us that our teenager is acting like a "different person" and "hateful toward us" because it is just a phase for them to "individuate". "It will pass", as it often does.

This is like telling a brain as sensitive if not more than a newborn baby (medical science supports this, see the work of Joseph Chilton Pearce) that is undergoing one last surge from their divine natural inheritance in order to develop that level of whole brain function upon which all the Earth most evidently depends for its very existence that it is "just a phase". The power and hormones surging through them are divine and a divine reflection of the possibility of developing beyond the cruel conditions to which we as parents routinely expose them more for our own edification than for anything resembling their "own good".

Around teenage rebellion we are getting to be around perhaps the most powerful and powerfully positive example of divine healing and energy we will ever know, and yet we treat it, according to the dictates (in the name of medical experts) of the alien Mother Ship, as though it is a mild hormonal disorder.

And of course the urge to get through the tremendous sense of betrayal by one's own parents (and reps of God) is immense.

Some children don't even rebel. Those are the one's like my little brother, who get brain tumors and prostate cancer at 35 and 40 (his was at 15 years!), because this is a biological rebellion that we should not lose our entire lives, even as so many "rebels" (angelic human rebel geniuses, Man!) finally settle down into one of the few jobs available to them in the technocratic and entirely unnatural hive mind.

At lot depends on how we perceive genres of "truth" in our society, much of which has little evident interest in our own private sense of what is true in terms of our divine invisible energies, those with which so much correspondence takes place with our own environment than could ever be even nearly analyzed physically, especially when accelerated by the grand Energy of Love.

However, this does not stop science from engaging in levels of mythological storytelling that would rival any primitive tribe, not to put down so called "primitive" story telling. We clearly need much more of its divine wisdom in our lives, that of the pristine and Natural technology of living wisdom minus the arcane apparatus of fictional and non-fictional devices of human consent generally limited to the value of primarily regulating the monetary profit of production, distribution and control of the poorest quality of foods and medicines in the entire history of planet Earth. But I digress.

I recently saw a lecture by a University professor, a PhD. in behavioural psychology. This lecture was sold for around three hundred dollars and came as a series of 15 to 20 twenty minute lectures on DVD. I am going to talk quite extensively about what I saw on this DVD or about things I believe pertain to it.

What became clear to me throughout his lectures was that he was citing scientific mythology as a "robust" certainty that has actually been out of date for nearly twenty years. He was citing research and studies and following these words, "research" and "studies" with conclusions from which the student could not hope to escape, conclusions that vastly marginalized the role of the conditions of the home or a parent's psychology in the growth of a child but finally saying, "Well, you still have a role in your child's life, you just have no way, due to genetics, of knowing what that role will be."

This is simply false. It is nonsense. Like much of the cultural storytelling of mainstream science (a genre of storytelling in the culture of the alien Mother Ship), it is given as a truth that cannot be questioned and certainly not determined to be congruent with one's own inner sense of what is true, the basis of all ancient wisdom and storytelling, that which, in particular, made sense to a Happiness that any truly advanced culture nurtured among its children; it is either a lie at worst or a mistake at best from a strangely under informed "expert," which makes me wonder if there is some ulterior agenda in the funding and presentation of these various studies showing that "genes are responsible for at least half of a child's growth, no matter what kind of home or parents they have."

Curious.

Because many studies have been shown to be funded by pharmaceutical or medical special interest companies that make sure the studies are presented any way that is most profitable. A study's results can be made, we now know, to look like anything.

A famous example is the studies on the effects of low fat diets, diets for which companies can sell much low fat specialty foods and heart medication (one of the most profitable things on Earth).

The studies were represented so that "numerous studies have shown that" low fat diets lead to a reduction in heart disease. (Really low meat diets lead to a reduction in heart disease).

What was found, however, was that the results were tampered with. In fact, a statistically-significant percentage of people on low fat diets were committing suicide. You need your fat.

Actually, most people are never told that so called "bad cholesterol" is naturally produced more by the body as we age in order to feed the higher functional demands of the brain, which is full of a lot of fatty tissue. For ages, elders were made leaders of their respective communities precisely because the mind acquires a greater conscious capacity for wisdom and perspective as we age. What is not widely known is that cholesterol-lowering medication and supplements can actually increase our chances of Dementia and Alzheimer's disease, taking down our elders just as they are reaching their prime of Life.

Eat lots of vegetables. Reduce meat, animal fat and sugar consumption. Those are the suggestions of heart surgeons who have had heart disease. But drug companies can't make a profit from making you well. That is just a nasty fact of our age.

We now know through published science that genetic variations are but one in many steps of causation that stems from choices made by the invisible energies of the human spirit, that energy the American forefathers assigned "inalienable rights". They were transcendentalists.

Also, there is no such thing as "junk DNA". We know that all DNA, vastly complex as it is, plays a part in every genetic ripple of causation. In other words, so called "behavioural geneticists" have been trying to understand something at a level of complexity, on the physical level, that no mind could ever comprehend, that which only the purest feelings, in infinite correspondence with the endless reaches of every living celestial process in the cosmos (for its own sake), any truly sane culture aims to nurture in its children, feelings and purity of feelings and thoughts that, alone, can arrange and derive the full benefit of otherwise incomprehensible codes of everlasting Life and Happiness, arranging them like words into their purest and most Life-enhancing sequences and not through any other form of destructive analysis, like a poem and not a filthy machine (the reflection of a deeply psychotic state of mind taught that it is "advanced" according to levels of thought that have virtually been stopped, compared to that of our ancestors, for thousands of years) harming all Life in a culture that believes itself born from a "great explosion", a machine whose explosive power so called scientists stand back in awe of, infinitesimal as that power is compared to that of the invisible energies, notes, chords and feelings of the human Soul.

In other words, much scientific jargon, like Evolutionary Theory, is telling stories just as innately mythological (ranging from a "lie" to, at best, something for you to feel whether it is true in terms of your own invisible energies and feelings). The difference with the genre of soothsaying of science today is that scientists are trained (as are most of us by the alien Mother Ship) to present these "stories" as though they are absolute facts regardless of what you think or feel about them.

At the same time, story telling, like the Anastasia book series, that operates through using, as did our pristine culture of the Earth and of the Birth of Man, posey and fancy to stimulate those invisible feelings of Happiness necessary (to our ancestors) to make reasonable determinations about what is true for one's self in terms of one's own place in the living Universe of infinity - these stories are seen by some as purely "fictional" and, as such, utterly false.

They are not necessarily false, though they do often seem quite fictional. It is just that so much can be said with any kind of story telling. This is why I like to write poetry and stories so much. I love the idea of what kinds of considerations might be evoked, quite beyond my ken, in another human being or even just by the Universe at large, what ripples of invisible causation take place through inspired creativity using codes in the Soul far beyond genetics that have so much connection, or so some people sense and thus suggest, to the unfolding and fullness of all Nature and Society, that of the correspondence of the invisible energies of all Mankind. In other words, there are sequences of words or creative energies that can only arrange themselves based on our purity of feeling and thought.

There is a story in Book 3 of the Anastasia series where Anastasia comes upon a young girl an "Auntie Doctor" in a white coat has condemned to a life of pitiful weakness and decrepitude, abandoned by her mother in a shanty village somewhere in Russia. And yet just by uttering a few truthful and compassionate words this child's life changes so much that people cannot even recognize that she is the same girl. Scientists today would say that her "genetics were set" or that her environment and experiences had "set her genetics". If you think about it, this is no different than the Dark Ages superstitions about fate and predestination cloaked in scientific jargon (that non on is supposed to question because it has "robust research") but accomplishing the same purpose, cowing Man to accept his circumstances, however perilous they may be and to abdicate any consideration or indeed any great regard for the causative connections between this thought, his environment and his Life. "Science" will "take care of that for you" (thinking, that is.) Whilst the fact of the matter is that never before in all of human history have we been presented with such an immense global reflection of just how vital it is for us to seek cultural conditions fit to truly nurture higher purity and speed of feeling and thought.

Here is a quote from that story:

“Anastasia changed destiny and the future with her simplicity and sincerity. Just think, the simplest human words can change destiny.’

“I’ve listened to the recording of Anastasia’s conversation with Aniuta [the little girl] many times. I have an idea if anyone else spoke that way to the girl, it would have the same effect. It doesn’t actually take much to speak the way she did. The main thing is not to lie. One need only have the sincere desire to help. And helping doesn’t mean sympathising. You have to be free of doctrines of karma, of predestination or, rather, to rise above them.’

“Of course one can do a lot of talking about karma, the hopelessness of inevitable predestination and what it means for a sick little girl, but Anastasia rose above this sense of inevitability. She simply didn’t pay any attention to it. And any other person could do the same. After all, everything was done with words, simple words we use every day. Only they need to be spoken at the right time and in the right place, and in the proper order. It is quite possible that the purity of thought Anastasia talks about causes these words to automatically fall into place in the right sequence, and that is why they are so powerful.”

Anastasia, Book Three, The Space of Love, Chapter Ten, “Work out your own happiness”, by Vladimir Megré.

There you have it, science with all its so-called power was unable to change a single little girl’s Life. But the right words uttered in the right way were. Something to consider for yourself, especially in a World where no science yet, devoid of the Love of a mother or a father or a child, has been able to create one sufficient garden home for any family alive, one capable of keeping Love itself alive. Makes one wonder at the science of our ancestors and how much of the science of today is actually a broken down and hopelessly confused version of that original science of Love and Life, those of sequences and correspondences of images, words, thoughts and feelings with which all things may be born and determined, with joy, as to their most healthful course, that involving so many variables to the intellect alone as could never be considered by even the greatest supercomputer on Earth – that is, a supercomputer besides that of Man’s place on his and her own Motherland or Space of Love, the lack of provision of which to every child Anastasia calls “criminal”.

What this expert in psychology was entirely missing was the invisible chain of causation of the precise decisions made by the given child with respect to how his or her invisible conditions or how any of their conditions were disposing them to make the best level of contact with and by the invisible energies of the cosmos, that of a true human home to which all human beings spend their whole lives aspiring. This is the foundation of all culture and science, whether we know it or not.

And so, it is fair to suggest that whenever we hear the words, "Science says" or "Latest research shows" or "Much research tells us", then what follows is either a total untruth or a story at best that the genre of science today disposes both scientists and lay people to believe that it is an absolute fact regardless of how they feel, even if it goes against the logic of their own values, that of society at large, or even with science itself!

All genres of myth or truth-telling have a level that could be called a lie. Sometimes this is because those truths that are often most meaningful to human existence transcend and thus may even contradict with purely physically-bound orders of our existence; this is what in better times is called irony - under the right conditions, in both audience and story teller, this can arouse and stimulate a lot of feeling, thought and insight - it can make people feel good and, to our ancestors, those who built temples all over this splendid Earth, feeling good was what, as teachers, allowed them to transmit understanding to those they Loved, us, in terms that provided for our own God-given capacity to decide what is true for ourselves, what any given child is doing even before they are born, thus, as science has conclusively shown, determining with their own feelings and beliefs and telling or commanding different codes of DNA to become active in the cellular complex, codes and feelings (particles of the fullness of and for an Eternal Mind and Life born in Man alone) to connect to a cosmically responsive consciousness, just like their own Soul, in all the living Universe around them! Some of these decisions will be more conscious than others. Some will be derived from unfulfilled desires in other lives. Some to do with spiritual contracts to fulfil certain needs for personal growth, that upon which ever greater levels of endless Happiness can and will be realized according to a logic far beyond that of the physical ego, at the Soul level - hence the power of ancient wisdom, the fullness of which speaks to that beyond though highly and vitally involved in the physical bounds of our existence on Earth, itself beyond all bounds.

Such fullness is what makes the brain function at its best (the purpose of all ancient culture and education in the living Universe of Life, that whose dome is the clouds and planets and stars and whose pillars are the trees, whose illumination is that born within our very hearts, those of every child's purest feelings and dreams), giving greater power and range to one's thought (that in terms and for the sake of all the Happiness of Man in infinite eternities - have you not noticed?), that which deigns to hide both the total obsolescence and fullness of all social apparatus and technology in the Nature whence grows all the letters of our lives, those of a Universe unfolding with the spelling of all our dreams come true, feelings and dreams alone (like our mother's or father's voice) with which precise and supremely kindly sequences of invisible energies and visible words may unfold that truly caress the Soul of all beings on Earth, and are meant to. (My Motherland: My Child, "Life: A Psycho-Celestial School", Page 207)

Even if you look at what codes are "influencing what", it is impossible to isolate any limited range of codes as "causing" any kind of variation in personality or brain development (since there are countless probabilities of effects), and by doing so this only blinds us to environmental correspondencies that may need to be addressed in a Universe that, given what may be, we are challenged to make things better, from bad to good, or from good to best rather than engage in coping mythologies that rather dismiss our ignorance of the profound importance of the visible and invisible conditions of a human child, regardless of the physical state of what DNA we can isolate in an endless chain of causation that begins deep within the volitional capacities of the spirit with respect to the whole unfolding of their physical lives and all Life on Earth. Yes, I believe we and scientists correctly sense there are codes to all Life. By I do not think that genetic coding is anywhere near the threshold of what the codes of Life really are, codes I don't think anyone will ever nearly comprehend and certainly not through physical analysis. At best, we can only comprehend, as we are doing through these letters arranged in endless ways, through feeling the breadth and scope of existence and our place within it. Genetics is simply taking what it thinks of as the "fine print" of human existence and crafting a mytho-religious system of logic like that of any fundamentalist religion. More on this.

One can use and genetics is widely used (as the above University Professor was using, though "soft selling" what is bound to "shock" his "lay flock") to suggest that only the most genetically "fit" people can survive and thrive in a society without "special help", all of which help is "for profit" and never need take any reasonable and reasonably consistent socially appropriate interest (like any psychotic) in the reasonable needs and feelings of others with respect to the emotional effects of their living conditions and in fact of any of our acculturated ideas and concepts of Life, Man, Nature, Science and God, of how we birth and how we live upon this Earth and how we treat our most vital Life support systems. Genetic Mythology or Story Telling suggests that the genetically "less fit" are more likely to get sick, irregardless of the conditions of their lives in particular or society and the environment at large.

This is dangerous. And it is psychotic. Here is a list of four major qualities of individual and collective psychosis and see if you recognize the above "logic":

- 1) Deceptive storytelling that aids in the trauma-based evasion of any information or education that might lead to reasonable accountability for
- 2) As though threat-based compulsive need for unreasonable and often unprovoked aggression and violence toward all Mankind and all creatures and living systems on Earth, even those upon which Man's very existence is utterly dependant and
- 3) An as though inherited diminished capacity to demonstrate a reasonably consistent socially-appropriate interest in the needs, feelings, and voices of all Life on Earth, including the Soul of Mother Earth Herself and those of our very own children.
- 4) Enhanced tendency and capacity to escalate aggression, aggressive disinterest in and deceptive storytelling about the feelings and needs of others when confronted with the feelings and/or concerns stimulated by that very compulsive aggression (and aggressive disinterest and deceptive storytelling) used to pathologically avoid a socially appropriate interest in one's own ultimately growth-enhancing emotions and the emotions of others.

For example, according to this "doctor" of Behavioural Psychology, only children with the right set of genes actually get sad when parents divorce, on top of which, genetics to one side entirely, parents and the home have little to no real effect upon the development of a child - children rather mostly develop based upon how their genes cause their brains to respond to situations outside the conditions of their families (it couldn't be that those situations in and out of the home are harmful to all children, some of which get sick, and some of whom are better able to adapt to and thus adopt a pathological psychosis to "normalize" and "sanitize" such conditions, disposing them, in turn, to an increased aptitude at divorcing reasonable interest in the feelings of people and children from what is considered "normal human competitive development" (that from which I believe most children eventually die)), as well as how genes, in altering how the brain works, effect what kind of results, through their particular personality, they are bound to get from their environment and other people, leading to all variance in childhood development. This is just nonsense. Or, it has some sense lobotomized from the very continuum of spiritual and environmental causation in which it makes any sense at all. You have to get a lobotomy to believe it is an accurate and full picture of human experience, that upon which we can base any truly humane conclusions. And yet all of these examples came after an award-winning Professor of Neuroscience and Psychology began saying "studies show", presuming the audience had no cause to wonder as to the source of the funding for these studies or at much of anything else at all, since feelings would clearly not be needed – and if you are sickened by this, science will probably have a drug to "turn that gene off" for the next generation so they won't have to be "afflicted" by the urge to think and feel for themselves, the absence of which has sent the Earth upon a path of total destruction, war, sickness and untimely death for centuries.

For instance, almost all published papers on pharmaceuticals for mental health are written by ghost writers who work for the pharmaceutical companies, the journals in question being funded by the pharmaceutical companies and the studies, funded by the pharmaceutical companies, are usually only drug trials around 6 weeks long. This means that most people taking drugs for mental health are actually part of the "human trial" as "recommended by their doctor" who in turn knows as little as any drug scientist why any of these drugs work in the first place - as one expert said, there is almost no kind of disease that is not listed as a side effect of these drugs, so much so that actually helping the human mind in any way is itself just one possible side effect.

Again, this "genetic psychologist" suggested that any child who gets sad from a divorce may have "been born with genetic markers" that dispose them to get sad from that. According to this logic of genetic heresy, getting sad from the breakup of the mother and father of a child is now a kind of disease, rather than a normal response, while anyone showing little to no emotional effects from this major Life change are considered "healthier", examples quoted of which are considered joining a military academy to learn how to kill people based on "foreign policy" and occupying political positions we now know to be heavily linked to organized crime, all positions our society considers noble because you need to be aggressive and competitive to occupy such positions, positions usually only given to personality types that are rather less developed than not by the vetting systems set up through the Occult social structures of the alien Mother Ship.

Suggesting, in other words, that one is only sad about reasonably stressful social changes and conditions (like the divorce of one's parents) because one has inherited a set of genes that dispose only some children to be sad about that is nothing less than Social Darwinism, a phrase not often used by Social Darwinists because, well, it is not very flattering, since it is widely understood to mean a reduction of the basic traditional values of human existence to terms through which the most deviant, racist, and anti-social behaviour of human beings is rewarded - in other words, basically, how much of our society, that of the alien Mother Ship, works today.

Social Darwinism is the closest social aphorism for the alien Mother Ship.

You cannot really argue with the mythic logic called "genetics" (which is not just about genes, it is about what genes have to say about human existence) or Social Darwinism. It is like any religion - you cannot argue with a state of mind. You can only try to listen to and appreciate its perspective. The State of Mind is perfectly consistent for itself, a story in which the facts cannot be interpreted any other way by anyone else. Life is consistent in itself. And an artificial system or culture of logic can be consistent in itself and yet be divorced in its very ideals from every condition (and history) most necessary to support and maintain the healthiest Life that Man has ever known. This is the set of conditions that I attribute to an alien Mother Ship, those of a drug that at once disposes, through training from birth, the brain to accept such conditions as normal and even ideal, those of its own depravity, this in the absence of overt social values given appropriate social leave to express and impress themselves upon our children, those of a culture of the Earth and of the Birth of Man.

It is curious that, according to genetic Darwinism, those with the "best genes" are "more fit to survive" or to thrive in an alien culture of Schizophrenic Psychosis in which underdevelopment is rewarded for socially-constructive though developmentally primitive behaviour, and all those "afflicted with" supposed weaknesses and emotional processes that take shape in such a sick culture in order to restore the mind to a level of function, and, by extension, the culture to a level of function that is in keeping with the basic conditions necessary for any Life to truly thrive as a whole system without the most massive distortions and delusions of the human mind (in the name of "helping it") - all symptoms of a deeply psychotic family - are called "weak" or "less fit to survive" and thus "in need of special therapies", judging a fitness and health of behaviour based on a standard that is no healthy standard at all by any measure of how either Man or Nature actually functions normally.

It is curious that those with certain genes are suggested to be more fit to survive when, in fact, quite often it is only those who, for their own survival from the conditions of the alien Mother Ship, have been most successful (a relative term when it comes to trauma, as this "success" - compulsive instinctual pain management - when applied to clients by "healers" - in the name of healing that really serves their compulsive need for control of emotions, theirs and yours - is often felt to be most aggressive and even invasive); in fact, quite often it is only those who have been most successful at normalizing the psychotic factors of the prevalent psychological contradictions of their childhood environment (contradictions between what their feelings in the womb suggested about Man's place in creation versus those of our society and our parents' often underdeveloped and thus overly aggressive even psychotic minds), those of thus their own minds (having adopted those same factors in order to "survive" them) who are "more fit to survive", the relative success of which adaption could be measured through their acculturated perception and the genes signalled to support those perceptions at a cellular level of physiological, hormonal and mental function, a limited set of genes from an veritably endless library in support of the highest possible functioning and correspondence of the feelings and thoughts of Man with respect to the every possible unfolding of the Fullness of Life itself.

One thing I do agree with in the Theory of Evolution is adaptation. Like any creature on Earth, through millions of daily and generational adaptations to unfit living conditions for sufficient child emotional, cognitive and ethical development (that upon which all Life most observably depends), we incrementally lose our capacity to know what normal is. And it is very important to note that Man and Man's Soul is so powerful that this could only ever have happened if we had chosen to adapt to conditions that reduced the speed and purity of our thought, perhaps in the name of "pleasing God" or invisible psychotic thoughts (gods) that had or have interposed themselves as God to Mankind reduced to a superstitious twilight of elevated suggestibility by so called "convenient" conditions and machines for which we pay our very lives. Therefore, the solution becomes quite evident. (Also see "The gods of Commerce" in My Motherland My Child: A Book of Kin at lulu.com/rayn)

It is curious that those with certain genes are suggested to be more fit to survive when, in fact, quite often it is only those who, for their own survival, have been most successful at normalizing the psychotic factors of the alien Mother Ship in their own brains that are then able to survive and even marked as more "fit to survive" in a psychotic culture that calls itself the standard for normal behaviour, whose very sciences and studies are, in fact, geared to perceive in no other terms, such fit persons' levels of aggression being normalized by a psychotic culture and even promoted as the standard and even exemplary in such an aggressive and colonial society, having greater anti-social tendencies (in terms of Man's pristine emotional inheritance and culture, that of the primary aims of all Mankind) such as aggression and competition, those qualities routinely socially accepted and vaunted, in one way or another, as those alone with which a person can thrive in society at large, those qualities symptomatic of a trauma-based development and adaption from which, I am convinced, all children eventually die when their time is up.

In this light, those who may seem most developed or more "fit to survive" may actually be some of the most underdeveloped people - their brains have just managed to more successfully normalize (as every traumatized child aims to do) the abnormal and unfit conditions of a psychotic alien Mother Ship society. In other words, in such a society, the entire range of standards for behaviour has been skewed in favour and social re-enforcement of those that support, expand and protect the conditions of an overly aggressive and inhospitable (to all Life) cultural value system grafted onto that of the most pristine values Man has e'er or will e'er aspire to based upon an entirely artificial set of values and a language, like that in terms of genetics championed as the "fine print of Nature"; our values or concept of the values of Man skewed by an entirely artificial set of norms that promote war, aggression, emotional repression, sedation and competition - and those children more successful at adopting or more adapted to such values (after their "teenage rebellion", symptoms of which, like daydreaming in class, are now categorized as diseases for which they are routinely aggressively medicated for profit with the consent of parents and health care professionals) are called healthier than those unable to, those "less fit" to survive according to a concept of Man's place in Nature espoused by the flagrant racism toward Man of the purportedly "advanced concept" of Social Darwinism.

To wit, these are the values of a military society, those that promote children being ready for active military service either domestically or abroad. And I would closely observe our modern movies and entertainment in this light.

Again, this rather stately doctor of Psychology actually stated that "robust studies" show that children who are sad because their parents get divorced are only sad because they have inherited genes that make them more likely to experience divorce as a sad event, also suggesting in nearly the same breath that parents and the home are of little to no effect upon a child's development when genetics are not taken into account.

This doctor's theories are really no different than any religious propaganda of the last several thousand years.

And need it be said that the social values this promotes are not those conditions that are fit for a child of any age and so it is no great surprise that nor do these Evolutionary and genetic forms of story telling (that does not allow for personal determination of their truth, "absolute facts") make much room to address any of the enormous sickness that results from them and their cultural predecessors.

Genetic fundamentalist religion is not the "fine print" of Nature, I would suggest, though it seems there have always been forces that would like Man to adopt the belief that we can know the codes or "fine print" of Nature in a cultural milieu or genre of history that promotes, strangely enough, the destruction of Man and Nature for the benefit of Man and Nature. Nor it is a surprise, I suppose, that just such a genre of life and research tends to devalue and create conditions for children that forces them to repress their God-bestowed feelings, since feelings, I would argue, are the pristine and direct means to understand our place in Nature and eternity, that of a creative intelligence that itself commands codes of the Fullness of all Life in Man's Life and Soul that are more beneficial than the Sun to all Life as an eternal whole system, that of the endless expansion and realization of the eternal Fullness of all and every Life, that of an absolute bliss and unity that contains (a truly cosmic and thus all-embracing and all-sustaining intelligence that itself never undergoes any change, itself alone, like our Soul Happiness – and all our boundless memories and images of Life and Happiness from which our brains themselves are formed - independently existent, existence itself) all the relative orders of its own endless expression, expansion and purity, supporting only those conditions, ultimately, that aid in that endless expansion and realization, that of the joy of all beings. Such a Life need not be work at all as we commonly understand the term, that which is hard and cumbersome. Such a Life can be both more enjoyable and lead and has led in the past to much more fruitful activity, that which protects, ultimately, the safety and sovereignty of a child for the sake of all Life on Earth.

In fact, the religion of Social Darwinism (or the Theory of Evolution and Behavioural Genetics – only the fittest should survive, a premise that actually contradicts with peer-reviewed science published in the most prestigious journals on Earth - actually the most cooperative survive, which makes sense because, if this were not the case, our cells would not be able to exist in such infinite cooperation, and Life could not exist – in other words, Life could not exist if it functioned with as poor communication and cooperation as our societies do with one another and with the living intelligence of the cosmos, societies some think, in no small indication of the intelligence of our societies, should run according to the logic of a Man, Charles Darwin (a racist whose theory on "favoured races" was not even popular in his own time though later enthusiastically received by Nazi Germany), who observed a few species of birds in an isolated area and generalized that all Life could evolve from a banana, basically, rather than a level of thought in gradations of intelligence in Nature that could include that of and of the interactions and cooperation of all life and living systems, including Man and bananas);

In fact, I would suggest that the religion of Social Darwinism is used by the culture of an alien Mother Ship to create, I believe, conformity of “normal” and “scientific” values of thought and perception among all the social and physical sciences.

This is not a religion that scientists or students sign-up for at their local college campus or in their grade schools.

It is filtered into all sciences and texts as through the kinds of mythological and fantastical social story telling imposed through the science and study of genetics, a science and study whose pronouncements far exceed their physical basis (perhaps owing to human imagination, human conditioning or both) and which borders on the territory of eugenics, the regulation of society through race and gender-specific disease and chemical and increasingly electromagnetic controls.

As an aside, many people are aware by now of biofeedback devices and computers. Some may be aware that these devices can do more than read subtle variations in electrical signals from organ and cell-specific sites and systems; they can also transmit and affect cures by transmitting subtle electrical signals into the body, signals that affect all kinds of metabolic and cellular functions. I will leave you that one to think about, with the caveat that the whole idea of a military complex is to be able to research ways to control any and every theater of military and thus government control without the knowledge of the target populations. Since humans are trained to develop brain function and work according to a society like their brain function, that far from whole and segmented into various specialties, many different academic and scientific professions can be used to forward military-grade research without one even knowing what one is contributing to. Enough said - all the more reason to take full responsibility for our children's development.

Genetics is used as a kind of “fine print” of Nature through which the values of a psychotic alien culture divorced from the values of the Earth and from the values of the Birth of Man (or indeed of any truly peaceful and thus advanced society) can be foisted upon the highly superstitious and highly suggestible state of Man's “modern” mind as values which are the standard for the normal development and progress of a “peaceful society”.

Those deemed by virtue, it seems, of having negative responses to society at home or at large less fit or less able to “normalize” the psychosis or its brain-damaging effects must then rely on drug therapy; the betrayal of the parent's competent interest in your developmental conditions having more to do with your genetic “weaknesses” and “disposition” being summarily relieved (as of everything else but that perhaps fancifully and wistfully related to our actual divine natural mental and emotional inheritance, our deeply repressed pining after which then becomes so profitable to the very people who have led us into these barbaric conditions in the first place) of any notice or accountability, much to the relief of many parents under the influence, since birth, of such occult and mercenary machinations.

This is no different than a child being told that he or she must accept the blood of a murdered saviour in order to experience any quality of life if not in this life then hereafter, that a Loving Non-Psychotic Heavenly Father would kill His own child to make His other children seem more pleasing to Him. That is the belief of a military society of total destruction to its children and to all Life. That is not a religious belief. It is an Occult belief.

Devotion to any aspect of God or a divine Master is awesome and always Life-enhancing. Herein lay perhaps the greatest aid to all Life on Earth.

However, this also makes religious devotion to the Life and teachings of such Masters a target for darker intentions, dark energies which, though they have their place in the total integration of Life in Nature, have been used by impure human minds to cause much fear and suffering for hundreds of years – hence, the importance of taking care of our own minds and thoughts, and those of our children!

When I was a kid in a Christian church, I was shown a video. We were told that a woman shown doing good things to help other people would go to hell because, no matter what, she had not accepted the special blood of a child of God murdered in order to make all children more acceptable to a divine Father. Here I thought He was murdered because the underdeveloped and overly aggressive fearful minds of the people Jesus most aimed to help, giving His Whole Being in an act and Life of mercy that is beyond comprehension, sought relief to their terrible agitation of mind and body and soul (due to brain under development) by killing Him. Instead, I was taught that this murder of an innocent Man was actually necessary to make God Love us again, as though any parent, much less the creator of such an splendid and infinite Universe, could ever cease to Love a child or wish to provide them with a home. Instead, this psychotic teaching and interpretation of the death of a true Man of God is used to continue to kill the Christ that is our child, that fullness in Man upon which all Life on Earth most observably depends and without whose precious feelings, necessary for all whole brain function (and without which, nourished by truly vibrant food and living ethers, all social sickness is created), all human thought effectively stops as does our reasonable perception of that fact, as with any drug addict, our perception in fact, like any drug addict, that such conditioning is actually in any but the most superficial way improving our lives or any Life on Earth more so than harming everything we hold dear.

What I saw in this video presented by well-meaning people saved by the blood if not the teachings of Jesus Christ was the suggestion, by adults who are as gods or representatives of God to an impressionable child, that but for the death of a divine child (as are all children divine to our ancient forebears), our God has no choice but subject His children to eternal torture no matter what, which is itself a form of torture in no small difference to that which all children suffer anyway, many of whom come to believe, as such, that this spiritual "fact" is normal and healthy, in no small indication of the trauma their brains and minds have suffered.

To Love your God is one thing, a great thing from which all blessings may flow. But to subject children to such a threat forces children who so naturally sense and Love a God to accept and assume an Occult device that distorts their minds in the "name of Love".

Such are the psychotic thoughts floating through our World, thoughts that, even in the Holy Bible, dark agents of dark forces sought to set up as the God of the World. And this is part of what Jesus came to resolve by speaking to the truth Man can feel in his and her very Soul, the truth of a supreme Life principle, eternal, absolute and unchanging that sustains all the diversity of that Life and fulfillment of Life's endless unfolding, evolution and expansion for the joy of all, the basis in fact of all ancient science, that which determined the highest functions of the physical Universe in correspondence with those that aimed to nurture, primarily, the Happiness, the Fullness of all Life the very Life of our Souls. Isn't that what all culture aims to do?

But telling children they are born unacceptable to God or unfit to thrive or survive in the World created by God or Man unless they accept its poison is pure and utter nonsense. In truth, our World is unfit for our children. And all parents should be ashamed to look at their children in the face unless they are doing everything they can to make this World fit for the feelings of an angelic child of the Love of God and Man, those which tell a child to expect a World, a Paradise that will always be made for a child of God.

I should say, this is nonsense unless you are of a certain state of mind, especially a state of mind where this story is a fact no matter what you feel on the matter, a "scientific fact", this brand of science or religion being an insult and a mockery of the kind of science or religion which truly enhances any society, none of the truly mature versions of which are ever in any great disagreement.

And both religious belief systems, that of Occult Christianity and Evolutionary Genetics (though "evolutionary" is a stretch in this context) have the same effect - that of reducing the value of connecting and our capacity to connect our living conditions (in space, time and ideas, soul, mind, emotions and body) to our quality of life, thereby separating, as a social imperative (in order to develop at all, or "adapt in a fit manner" that will not be ridiculed or deemed "sickly" or "inferior" to other more aggressive and "successful" children by comparison - the purpose of the school and medical system, that which is only truly fit for the most mongoloid level of human mental or emotional development it encourages as the highest possible historical standard, maintaining the "genetic variance" most important to our high priests, that between the speed of our thoughts and the speed of their thoughts, truth be known); thereby separating, as a social imperative, the feelings in the human soul, powerful invisible energies of a child's good feelings and daydreams as they correspond with the true School of Universal Living Intelligence, that of Heaven and Earth of legend and lore, from the physical and invisible conditions for learning more, as in the womb, about the commanding angelic and even royal place (crowned by all the seasons and the stars as much as by our God-bestowed feelings and dreams of the Fullness of Eternal and Boundless Life just like our mother and father) of Man in Nature and the splendid Dream of God (a God Who can only truly be sensed with our feelings), the true orientation of Man in space, time and ideas, those in this case that live and grow with everlasting regeneration throughout the everlasting spring of every season of Life and Nature, our Life, the Life and the Fullness of the Life of all people and places on Earth forevermore. And this is the power of our own kindness, the power and sum of all knowledge that is as the Sun of all Worlds, the power that the dark forces that have led us and are still leading us into these dangerous and hurtful conditions do not want us to use or even sense. However, neither they nor we fear such kindness and Happiness, as it is infinitely disposed to the best and most fulfilled Life for all in terms of each.

In other words, both religions, Occult Christianity (or heretical Christianity, which has nothing to do with God, really), or Social Darwinism (The Theory of Evolution and Behavioural Genetics - and cybernetics) serve the values not of Man's pristine history or best development (by any stretch of the imagination) but of underdevelopment normalized to the distorted socialized standard of an alien Mother Ship.

Even though most people get sick in some way from the "normal" conditions of society, this according to Social Darwinism (and its absolutely heretical take on (mixed with - it would not have any real charm without, like most advertising, being mixed with) traditional human values of the Earth, of Paradise and of the Birth of Man - a Paradise God never kicked us out of, though socialized and ritualized self-immolation is no way to derive its greatest benefit, though the more we suffer the more I believe the almighty Nature of the Earth aims to help and serve all Mankind, would we but notice - a tree that would shade us from the harsh rays of the noonday sun even as we are cutting it down, now That's Love); even though most people get sick in some way from the "normal" conditions of society, this according to Social Darwinism or Occult Christianity (heretical version of ancient human wisdom) is only because they are not "fit to survive", have unfortunate genetic predispositions to illness, or have not "found Jesus" and are sinners in a "fallen World", as though illness were some kind of punishment and not one of many messages about changing our lives in ways in which we will experience, inevitably, a greater enjoyment of Life here or hereafter than we have perhaps ever realized before on the Soul level - it has nothing to do with a toxic mental, emotional and physical culture, according to Occult heretical insinuations into all societies and religions.

According to them, those prone to get sick from "normal social conditions" just need the "blood of Christ" (as indeed our society and foreign and domestic policies do seem to need and even thirst for the blood of all children of God, in every land) or, alternately, the "drugs of the pharmaceutical Giants".

Of course people in society want it to be peaceful and want society to be a better place; of course, we continually aim to do that. But we often aim to do that, according to our brutal training, in terms of expanding the conditions, through heroic means of surviving and, strangely, continuing the conditions of the alien Mother Ship. And so we figure that peace will come by educating more people into the validity of the conditions of the alien Ship (conditions with which peace cannot exist), or having people have more jobs according to the conditions of the alien Ship or generally extending the conditions (seen as "modern" "progressive" "traditional" and "best" by its colonial technocrats and missionaries - us - social software developers in and of and for the alien Mother Ship).

Really, the only way the Earth is going to develop is as we assert, as they assert through us through physical and social illness, a call to the original and thus most progressive and infinitely developmental conditions of the Earth and of the Birth of Man, those true to enough of the feelings of enough of us to make it worth mentioning.

I talk to people in polite company about "living back on the land". At best, this suggestion is considered fancifully anachronistic and at worst it is considered terribly naive, as in if it were really worth growing your own food, people would have done it already and would still be doing it. In fact, our ancestors fought for generations to maintain their Paradise cultures all over the Earth from the insinuations of the dark Priests of what I am calling the alien Mother Ship, a culture of death instituted by impurities that have naturally arisen within the mind of all Mankind over the course of sequential ages of human mental development, conditions now of the alien Mother Ship that say that these conditions are normal and any peace can only come about based on this thermostat of what is normal.

I once lived on a relatively isolated island on the West coast of Canada. When people get to an island and perhaps particularly on this one, they think that it is a good escape from all the insanity in "the World". Unfortunately, they brought a lot of the same insanity with them, due to acculturation. However, most people seemed to think that, ironically enough, the only criteria for sanity on this little island retreat was that you lived upon it. You can see the havoc that might and did and does ensue from this narcissistic form of logic.

But this is just how we treat the culture of our alien Mother Ship.

As David Icke says, given what people think is sane in this World, it is an insult to be thought of as sane.

The conditions of normal on the alien Mother Ship, divorced as it is, by design, from the divine design of God (the consequences of distorting which we suffer from every day, not as a punishment, as the alien Mother Ship religions suggest, but as a guide to living more enjoyable and easier lives than we could ever imagine!), these conditions are actually abnormal. Even our psychologists are trained to practice in abnormal psychology. And yet we tend to take our lead of what is "normal and sane" from the Alien Mother Ship! We think ourselves sane simply by virtue of being "successful" at surviving, thriving within, expanding or defending the conditions of the Alien Mother Ship, by virtue, like that island, of simply living within it.

Amidst the theater of modern movies and the theater of the World (and in our current state of consciousness, what is the difference?), all kinds of acting and stories are about heroic means used by underdeveloped children to survive or expand the conditions of and commanded, seemingly, by underdeveloped adults. Sometimes heroes are advancing the conditions of the alien Ship; sometimes they are protecting modern conditions from those who themselves are trying to survive the conditions of the alien Mother Ship. The hero could be advancing or surviving the same conditions.

The "enemy" could be advancing or surviving or protecting themselves from the same conditions. There is such a variance (and we pay to see and applaud either), that this rather serves to foster a general acquiescence to the conditions of society at large, those we daily aim to all of us survive, expand and protect in profound mutual contradiction that renders our thought virtually stopped with respect to that of our ancestors, no matter how advanced we think we are in how we attenuate and augment at the same time as we reduce our speed of thought even more - one of the core goals of the alien Mother Ship, for the lower our thought the more powerful the thought of our keepers and real leaders, whose thought itself must face daily degeneration from the conditions they themselves help create along with all the middle technocrats we call teachers, doctors, scientists, artists and politicians, whatever they mean to do beyond that of their core training from the alien Mother Ship as it contradicts, creating inner trauma they are forced to solve by adopting the aggressive colonial values of the alien Mother Ship (as well know the high priests of our society), with the primary urges of the Birth of Man and all the invincible fullness of Life itself, that of all peoples on Earth.

And so movies today do not allow any actor to be the best actor they could be. The alien Mother Ship ensures mediocrity even amongst our most celebrated artists and thinkers, none of whom have anywhere near well nourished whole mind and heart development. What kinds of stories are they given to act in? What range of feelings are they given to express and to what range of effects?

People on Earth today do not grow up on a Mother Ship kind of Motherland. They grow up in an alien Ship. We are born or placed at birth on an alien Mother Ship. And so we grow up in conditions and we learn through trauma-based adaptation to accept as normal conditions for our psychological and personal development - our education in every way - that are grossly incomplete and utterly disconnected from the intelligence of the Earth or the Universe (whose connection we crave), from a culture of the Earth and from the High Cultures of the Birth of Man, which disables us at the feeling level from ever reaching the height of either our respective crafts (which become bent, for profit, upon the rather insanely limited range of perspectives of the alien hive mind) or of that speed of thought upon which not only our own lives but all Life most observably depends as much as any computer upon a computer chip.

Our crafts, our professions, everything that people do in society can never be at the height of that profession, though through, thankfully, the Love of our respective crafts or callings, whatever we may be, we may touch through our own inspired creativity or sympathies that Fullness in Life and Mind which our cultures have ceased to amply reflect to the complete satisfaction of our invisible energies or Souls, those of codes no set of genetic analysis or myth making will ever even nearly comprehend but reduce to the most barbaric terms most useful to a military society bent on its own destruction for the sake of "development", that of a thought that has been virtually stopped for hundreds of years and which great Realized Divine Human Beings like Jesus attempted to stimulate and regenerate for the sake of these purest feelings and codes upon which all of Life's dearest and most enjoyable unfolding clearly depends, that of a Happiness in the Soul that is most helpful to every cellular and social system on Earth and with which, alone, we may truly apprehend the boundless and relative orders of our existence - which is why our feelings are so routinely discounted and undermined, as with the ancient cultures of human Feeling and of the Birth of Man by the dark forces who have led us, with our own help, dangerously astray, restorative counter currents for which are steadily and widely emerging throughout every society on Earth, thank God.

Our crafts, our professions, everything that people do in society can never be at the height of that profession especially based on the system of compensation known as the monetary system, an invention of the dark forces (we fall prey to depending on whether we have an unintelligent attachment to money or not) which is a very powerful Occult system, like many aspects of religion, that plays to those very weaknesses in the human mind that are developed as adaptations due to an incomplete vision of God, Man, Nature and Eternity from which many mercenary theories can be "developed", in turn, those very weaknesses that are created and encouraged by conditions of and protected by the culture and "systems of education" of the alien Mother Ship.

If there is one thing that money has taught us it is that, as a measure of value, whatever value it has mostly flows to the person who owns all the money and, whatever the amount, it can never compensate for what some (not all) of the wealthiest people have to give up to acquire it.

On the other hand, as it relates to those things that are priceless, a good home, good food, clean air and water, and the ability to extend priceless value to others we care about, it is a profound understatement of value.

Madonna I haven't really payed attention to for decades, as any news about her tends to summarily deputize me as one of her public relations patsies, so aggressive and perverse, in its way, is the image that seems to be conjured around a woman who cannot possibly have a normal life by any standard of value for most people, and, like I said, whatever compensations she has received cannot possibly be worth it but to someone who has given up access to their very soul, a biological flesh and blood robot for the dark powers constantly attempt to baffle Man with sexualized crap and nonsense - and to our credit, they seem to have to work pretty hard it (since no one can destroy the Truth and very Life of the human Soul), it being levels of dulling Man's thought from a young age as well as suggestions to get Man to often do things, like kill people in war, that otherwise completely run counter to the divine feelings In Man's soul. At the extreme such bio-robots can be psychotic (like Henry Kissinger, Margaret Thatcher et al), routinely issuing de-humanizing comments about their own human race that rather serve to place in bold relief the extent to which they have devalued their own soul in exchange for the seeming power and charms of social and political programmes of which they become convinced, more than anyone else, are the only path to freedom or social control for Man. Their brains themselves are starved.

And so even the best actors, the best singers can never really be the best singers or the best actors that they can be (though their genius be evident). What about great movies? Most movies are, in all fairness, crap, and even when they are based on books they are based on books that are written almost entirely about survival from the trappings of technocracy as though technocracy (and our purely illusory freedom within or by it) is the only means of getting anywhere at all (even though it is taking us nowhere but to the perception of minds demented by technocracy), even though many of the core sympathies of fictional characters are those of a World whence all truly powerful human values, those of kindness and Love, come from and will always be, to some great degree, continuities for. Hence, the importance of kindness, an energy or aptitude that is, to me, the fit sum of all knowledge, that which reasonably and reasonably consistently considers and even anticipates the feelings and needs of adults and children in a socially appropriate and truly Life-affirming way.

And so actors or characters in movies are one of two kinds: Underdeveloped children by virtue of an underdeveloped adult World (and aggression is always accompanied by underdevelopment, underdevelopment by aggression) trying to survive, reform or ultimate fit into an underdeveloped adult World, since they can only use the means established by the alien Mother Ship to "reform" it or really exhaust their hope in doing so, settling for the delusion of having done so by the augmentation of their beliefs, providing them with social recognition rather than ridicule, espoused by the news, science and known trend makers, drug takers, and "truth leaders" in the mainstream and new age World;

Or characters are from a range of underdeveloped adults (still underdeveloped children) who, through heroic means, attempt to succeed or distinguish themselves in an underdeveloped adult World or to fight in the name of preserving and protecting an underdeveloped adult World from those with less "moral stature" than themselves in a dialectic of moral relativity that sets the standard for moral character at a fairly ubiquitous level either way, making both enemies and heroes both equally entertaining, depending on the dominant theme or message serving the status quo at that time.

Amidst the theater of modern movies and of the World (which are not all that different in origin or import, art imitating artificial values with respect to the aim of all art to reconcile how we live, in an artificial alien Mother Ship, with who we are - unfortunately, often "succeeding" in portraying vastly underdeveloped human beings as cool, funny, sympathetic and "truly human"), through the news (whose main function is to restrict information and not to provide it) and mainstream entertainment, there are heroes hoping to expand and protect the conditions and the apparatus for the conditions of the alien Mother Ship in its various countries, each with their own highly controlled cultural "standards of living", the variance in which allows for a ready grammar for the Story of War, and there are those heroes who are protecting themselves from that apparatus and either one can be positioned as the "hero" of the story (of the entrained mythic and highly fictional history and capacity of the conditions of modern human existence as defined by the alien Mother Ship), the sympathetic character of the story, so that you can get many versions and variations of someone protecting themselves from (retaliating or attacking depending upon whose is reporting their actions and who they are) the conditions of modern human existence (conditions which actually benefit no one and less and less of us less and less all the time, the only counter to which is the growing energies and wisdom of our culture of the Earth, that of the invincible urges of the Birth of Man) and advancing the values of modern existence mixed with the aims of a culture of the Birth of Man that must always assert itself for any story to have any authenticity whatsoever, though this has been turned to a minimum over the last several decades as, at the same time, just such values have become more predominant, supported by cosmic currents fit for our place in eternity, though these are not widely reported.

However, since we see so many variations of genres of story telling that have, in actual fact, such a limited range of stories, that of protecting ourselves from or protecting modern alien values, we are likely to acquiesce to all the stories of Life presented and to position ourselves in roles that avoid too much ridicule and stand to gain as much prestige as possible according to the ever changing highly controlled and easily manipulated currents of "social order" with respect to our acculturated high suggestibility to these mythic social structures, images really within which we live and with which we aim to live our lives (constricting our minds to extremely low speeds of thought and whole brain function), no matter how stressful or no matter how much peril this places us or other people just as concerned for their family's safety in (whether they be the "hero" or the "enemy"), that created by willingly surrendering the God-given power of truly original and higher speeds of thought and feeling of a purity akin to the Birth of Man and to ancient cultures (erased from history and language) of the Birth of Man.

Is John Grisham or Steven King leaving anything for their children or for any children, if their books are any indication? Books examining the heroic measures that underdeveloped children or underdeveloped adults learn to use to help maintain or survive the conditions of an underdeveloped Occult World on the "alien Ship", to achieve some measure of power through aggression or emotional repression in an underdeveloped Occult Technocratic World under conditions of an alien Mother Ship which are actually, as terrifying as this is to most children, considered normal by the parental culture of the alien Ship but utterly contradictory and underdeveloped with respect to a child's purest and most vital feelings for all health in Life or on Earth, those of a culture of the Earth and of the splendid majesty and divine inheritance of the Birth of Man, of themselves and of everyone else.

These are the contradictions that we live in and with, that we adapt to as normal a "just the way the World is" so that even if we attempt to reform any part of human existence, we take as a start many layers of absolutely intolerable conditions and logical inconsistencies as a given in order to "improve" human existence. This is discussed by the noted author on child development, Joseph Chilton Pearce.

This, to me, demonstrates both the patience and compassion of the essential intelligence of both Life and Man. However, based on this intelligence, one does not have to get out of the World to step back from it. In this regard, I could not recommend the Anastasia books by Vladimir Megré more. They are, to me, already the greatest and most powerful literature produced in the 21st century, one of the only truly sane things ever written, and you don't have to change a thing - only enjoy your Life more and more - that is everything. Isn't it? Happier people's minds work better and are thus more helpful to all Life on Earth by virtue of flows of celestial cycles and currents of feeling and information that are a vital part of all Life, those of all Mankind.

All art and literature, even science, is about the profound and profoundly disturbing contradictions (and their hugely destructive effects upon our families and our planet) between how we live and who we are, the destructive effects of that contradiction upon the diseases of the human mind, the diseases of society, the gross deficiencies of our society (whose perfection in all fullness glitters yet across all the candles of the Earth) and the seeming incapacity for humanity to really make any significant enough changes to the core conditions that lead to the negative effects on our health and that of every respective society on Earth (of which the Earth today is the best example) - which changes must depend upon some whole systems image of the fullness of human Life, that of growing our own food and reducing all hindrances to communication between our hearts and our gardens and, thusly, all hindrances in communication amongst all cells in our bodies as amongst all peoples and living systems on Earth - except to write books and movies, all for which people make lots and lots of money, displaying the heroic attempts that underdeveloped human beings (within the technocratic alien context of conditions in which no human being could ever hope to fully or even barely adequately develop emotionally or otherwise) make to maintain, survive, expand or protect (from people in other lands like ours only trying to survive the same exact conditions) these the vastly underdeveloped and harmful conditions of the alien Mother Ship which are considered normal developmental modern conditions on the alien Mother Ship which are really harmful and underdeveloped conditions in terms of the pristine cultures of the Earth and of the Birth of Man, as we all know on some level, an alien culture that says to every Man, Woman and Child, "You are not OK but really the alien Mother Ship is not OK", making everyone feel inadequate and thus "demand" as a "need" the technocratic toys (trading, in every new generation, freedom for new sparkly toys as the only criteria of our freedom) of the mind to restore some semblance of control and power to the traumatized mind, control gifted in some far off realm by conditions like that of the only field of intelligence that is truly interested in every human need more than creating artificial needs that serve to primarily feed the conditions of ever greater human disease and emotional impoverishment (which seeks now power instead of true development as a self-soothing coping system of psychotic compulsion), creating a scarcity of "adequacy" that no more exists in natural reality than any financial scarcity but from the mercenary technologies and systems and ideas of distribution and production that have insinuated themselves into the wisdom of our ancient forebears, into our food supply and into our own homes, families, and minds.

And so there will always be those who feel equipped or called to advance the conditions of society. There are those who are going to want to protect the conditions of society from those who are themselves attempting to do the third thing - survive the same conditions of society, either in the same culture or another one. And so the third category is those of us, or that part in all of us, that accepts we just have to make some kind of heroic attempt to survive, could we ever thrive within, such conditions, depending on the coordinates in space, time and history with which you come to a meaningful apprehension of what it means for human beings to thrive with respect to the safety of all Life and, ultimately, one's self and home.

And so in this third category or alien archetype, we are just going to get sickness in our body and in our society (inoculations are going to just kill children they are used to "protect") because the conditions of our society do not really serve anyone, even though we live as though they serve everyone.

And so amongst these three options, advancing, protecting (ourselves from those who are trying to survive our "advance") and surviving the conditions of the alien Mother Ship according to the apparatus and technocratic technology of the alien Mother Ship in each respective country or region, human beings generally acquiesce to whatever the dominant thread of any given social event happens to be, as all threads are usually always involved in the part alien part ancient mythic or image structure of Man and Universe with which most people live their lives, mixed of course with the ancient wisdom of all holy scriptures, those of the fullness of the Birth of Man.

And so we basically mutually agree or are ritually, through the Occult institutes of religion, education and science, indoctrinated and initiated to agree with these three mutually contradictory brands of role playing in our society in order to "peacefully co-exist", and we call that "normal". It is psychotic.

Therefore, we can suggest that our early training as to our location on a big map of Canada or the United States was but one step in our training in terms of our coordinates in space, history, time and ideas, those that lend some form of actuality at some levels of the existence of an alien Mother Ship or alien culture which effectively denudes our natural inborn connection to a living cosmic intelligence and culture of the Earth and of the Birth of Man.

Again, the purpose of all art and science, if not all human activity today, is to resolve the contradiction, the traumatic contradiction through which we ourselves adopt in order to survive the aggressive psychosis, perceptual field and attitudes of the alien Mother Ship (a purely human intelligence that thrives on the emotions and energy we give it as with an average of one quarter of our annual labour output), the contradiction between how we live and who we are, granting that we become thus culturally and ritually blinded (through trauma-based mind control) to the suffering we cause others as a people, a country or a culture.

And our military news organizations support this blindness. They can in fact "steer" Man in such a state far more easily than you could ever imagine, in a fashion, even, that rewards and promotes as normal levels of repressed emotion, increased aggression and competition that is not normal at all while ridiculing those whose emotions disagree with such a society, whether they like it not - and through the religious mythology of genetics (that like any fundamentalist religion ignores authentic science) even supposes that such people with normal emotional responses to an abnormal society (that sets abnormal conditions in which no human mind can truly develop as the standard for what is normal, especially among those often most hurt by such conditions who show no evident "symptoms" at all but the routine repression and aggression effectively made the standard for Man's behaviour as such, people who get brain tumours and cancer instead) are in fact, weaker and "less fit" for the World.

For our society is not normal. For these are not the values of a healthy society. Our society's main guiding values are that of a schizophrenic psychosis.

I hope you will never think about the power of your purest feeling and thought quite the same again.

As another example, to most educated citizens of the modern World, all they know about a cow's contribution to Life and the entire biosphere is that they go "Moo", produce milk and are a good food source.

That cow, or any animal in all their soulful feeling and beauty, will be often kept in totally cruel conditions from birth, killed, skinned, embalmed (not kidding), packaged and eaten and all most educated people will know or even care to know about that animal's God-given place in all of Nature and human Life (or pristine human culture of the Earth and of the Birth of Man) as designed by God is that they are good for food.

As an analogy (although, it is difficult to find a man-made invention nearly as intelligent as a single bee let alone a cow or chicken, pig or sheep), this is like someone, an educated person, truly believing that the only purpose and even the highest purpose of the entire city of London is to provide them with a place to go to the bathroom, not caring even about the suggestion of any greater or more sublime purpose than that of a place to have a decent bowel movement.

It is that stupefying what constitutes education or whole brain education under the conditions of an alien Mother Ship.

And I hope that at this point you would have found something far more absurd to observe than the rhetorical device I have invented (or illuminated) in order to help us observe the far too dominant and aggressive conditions to which we subject our helpless angelic children from age to age and from generation to generation, children whose "teenage rebellion" is on the order of forces of whole brain development Nature itself will never let Man escape, however we may betray our children and ourselves.

Even though there are many fictional and non-fictional stories of Man fighting the system or exposing the barbaric insinuations of the system, the great and far-ranging prevalence of other combinations of stories in every theater of the human mind (something well understood by the high priests of our society in terms of food additives and drugs we use to sedate the chronic physical tension of being disconnected from our true Motherland (and of traumatized aggressive brains that cannot process emotion), conditions every child has every right to expect, from feelings in the womb, would caress their very Soul with a World that would always be fit for a child rather than one in which they, "born sinners", must be made "fit for the World"), stories of book and stage and screen, stories of bad-good-guy, good-bad-guy, good-good-guy and bad-bad-guy heroic survival (the "DNA" of mass manipulation through global cognitive dissonance, with core cultural insinuations and future-programming) of the conditions, or expansion of the conditions, and protection from or of the conditions of society; these few "illuminating" social events or inequities only serve to lend more credence to Man's total psychological acquiescence to the conditions (imposed from birth as upon the ancient cultures of our forebears who died for something, their children's future) of the alien Mother Ship.

And the high priest of our respective societies know this.

One may wonder, is there hope? Yes.

Yes.

With every new leaf and cloud of every dawning season graced with the birth of each new feeling of kindness born within the human heart, the Fullness of Life springs eternal as with the Fullness of the cultures of Peace on Earth and the Birth of Man reflected by the Sun of each upon all Mankind, the purest feelings ever born from our birth living in every respective land forever, expanding the grand Energy of Love to every child to come, leaves the sounds of Happiness and Fullness at the basis of the entire force of the Universe and of our own minds and lives that can never go away, those of the voices of our mother, our father, our sons and daughters, and God.

There is an ancient idea or value in our society that has been bent and distorted beyond all recognition, and that is the idea or value of honouring one's father and mother, one's parents.

When I look back at my own experiences and around at the World today, I am deeply sensitive of how much the adult World has betrayed and dishonoured, usually from birth, our children of every age.

And so when I pass by them, I like to say quietly to children of every age and especially to teenagers and young adults well into their twenties and thirties (since it takes at least fifty years in our culture to become an adult, I feel, and that is still stretching the term, adult) the following two things, as I say them to you now:

One, I am terribly sorry. You deserved much, much better.

And two... Make us proud.

Paths I hath trod before they brought me home to everywhere
That I had ever wished to be to Dream for all the Earth
Our Anastasia all the sense that might hath filled the air
Had we remain in continuity our Heaven's Universe
The Birth of Man the butterfly, the babble of a brook
The inundations variations every season's fold
That of the feelings all of Man's these living letters of a Book
Of everlasting Life in Nature's womb the human Soul
The kindness of a mother only failed when she gave
A better World whence she was born the fullness of her Life
Her heart so many mercenary measures to create Emancipated the conception endless Paradise
Of Man and Woman spheres of earth and water, air and light Commanded by the birth of such a child pure and bright.

Hands dropped beside a stricken man or woman with the urge
The shadow of the birth of Love the girth of Love bereft
The force a coursing river strength to match that of the earth
That blocks its hallowed chamber with the gravity that yet
Compels the Soul to soar above the matter of this realm
An breadth that were suggested by the body's every change
And vital movement coursing with that image at the helm
The spelling these unfolding fjords so infinite a range

Of places of the distillation feelings in the Soul
The codes of fullness for the fullness everything that lives
The passing of the spirit through this body of the whole
Eternal Dream of Man in Heaven born the radiance of winds
And rain and snow these feelings know the thoughts of He Whose Love Reflected back upon these spans of Life that moves in us.

Appendix: Absolute Life

It has been suggested by great Sages of the last Vedic era that, once the physical sciences discover the unity amidst all diversity and relativity of physical dynamics and living systems, they will then be dealing with the absolute Life principle that is Itself and, at once, all the relative Worlds of Its existence; and that they will then devote themselves to the human mind, to the pure consciousness and inner fullness of all Mankind, determining the purpose and value of all physical matter, energy and living intelligence in terms of That, according to the pristine culture and science of our ancestral forebears, their greatest most knowing feelings alive as ours growing amongst God's own most delicate words amidst the leaves, the trees, the clouds and stars, rays absorbed in the Absolute Sun (of our mother or of the fulfilled Dream of Eternity in God's Happiness for Man and Man's for God) of all the distilled inner pure consciousness of Man as it moves away from our purest inner Being into every sense and all the fundamental laws and elements of Nature, the individual Self of the Absolute Life Principle beyond all change or bounds (a boundless Happiness infinitely translated from and to each individual Life), Its Absolute Fullness unfolding beyond all comprehension but through that of our own deepest purist feelings and dreams amidst a living Divine Dream set up for and to thrive, in fact upon, all the invisible grace and inspired thought that Man may yet conceive of his and her eternity.

For perhaps all we have that transcends all bounds of physical existence is our Love of and for this pure consciousness within one another, each in our own individual grace (that of the Dream of all Life), this absolute Life principle, or God, or kingdom of Heaven within Man at the top of the Government of Nature and at the very reaches of all and whence all Man has ever or could ever aspire to be, to do, to conceive in our thought and to make into our very lives, merging our greatest and purest desires into one great celestial garden everywhere dotted by the most fit homes for our souls o'er this splendid Earth, and cultures that will be revealed to have always had that most romantic and inspired aim, that of the birth not only of a child but conditions fit for a child of God's Love in our own (nurturing our sense of a boundless Dream of Life, of forever), that of God's greatest desire and inspiration, that of a "Dream of birth and joy for all in its contemplation" (Anastasia), information from and about the Absolute Fullness and Fulfillment of whose endless state and unfolding at once is primarily emitted by the purest feelings and dreams most cultured to secrete from the human heart (those of kindness, and friendliness and love), particles of Cosmic Mind (the force of whose infinite waves and memories were the desires of the Fullness of both the absolute cosmic eternal state of Life and all Its relative orders of endless expression and expansion of these the depths and essence of each individual human mind) reflected by the electromagnetic mirrors of all the stars, particles filled with vital information about the inner and outer unfolding of the fullness of every creature and celestial biology (and culture) of an Absolute Living Being blowing like the wind of God's own perfect desires across every plane and Nature of our existence.

We can read in Indian Vedic philosophy (the Science of the Absolute expounded by the Upanishads and the Bhagavad-Gita), for instance, that the creative desire of the universe is the force of our minds and of our own desires, and that goes forever, that desire in fact creates the mind and all matter, setting up the endless links and relationships between us and everything and everyone in the fullness of eternal bliss and being itself both at its own level and that of every relative order of its endless expression and expansion in every sphere of existence here and hereafter.

PART FOUR

Tis The Season: In The Spirit Of War

War began when I was born. Of course it began long before I was born. But it also began the way it has always began when I was born.

Every society likes a good seasonal kick up your heels and War is bigger than Christmas in that regard. Hell, we prepare for Christmas for about 2 maybe 3 months. But we spend all our lives, all year long, through our education, the raising of children, we do everything to prepare for that festive season that never seems to end. The Spirit of Christmas, wonderful as it is, has nothing on the Spirit of War.

You might say that children are born for war; it is That important to our respective societies. No sooner do our parents get a chance to pinch our cheeks and poke our fat cute little bellies than we are prepared to get sent away to the ultimate sacrifice, to the pageantry and wonder of War, War full of costumes and ways of talking and thinking and behaving, full of crazy mad characters and heroes, full of sacrifice. For Christmas we leave cookies and milk for the Saint of Christmas, Saint Nick or Santa Claus. But for the Spirit of War we give our children's flesh and blood. That is the way it was when I was born. War is the biggest celebration of our lives. It is truly amazing.

And I would say a good many more children are eaten by War for Christmas than cookies are eaten by Jolly Ol' Saint Nick, and a greater amount of money spent on War than Christmas by far.

Since before I was born and given to the War Office to be educated properly (prepared, really, for the grand Festival of War that keeps our societies healthy - what would happen without War? I suppose we would all go mad) people were sending our children away to kill the Slant-Eyed Commies over the water (in the past it was the Indians, who were very new to our ways of celebrating War and before that it was the Moors or Muslims who, in turn, called us Infidels). I love the names. They are as good as costumes to me. In Stalinist Russian millions gave their lives to the Patron Saint of War, though I don't think Stalin should take all the credit. It's not like he conducted the ritual sacrifice of 20 million innocent men, women and children all by himself. Hitler put on a good show. He gave good speeches on the then new TV. And our leaders, like Churchill, gave good speeches on ours. Everyone had such a great time. My parents always say, "Those were the days".

To think the money that is spent on War. Again, to compare it to Christmas would not even be fair. You need automatic rifles and all the Spirit of War TV programming, lots of speeches by important people that explain the Sacred Story of the Birth of War; you need tanks and bombs. I mean, a good child sacrifice can't happen without bombs and bullets. I mean we're not animals, after all.

When I went to school (because it takes years to learn about the Birth of War and who's who and all that), my mother would hold my hand all the way there. And there I first entered the Halls of Learning about War. The Pageant of War has kept our species alive for thousands of years. O and all the great characters that have served the wars of ancient times. Bestly looking people that would perform the rapes and murders of men, women and children in the Spirit of War. What I also love is that you get people who speak in the Name of Peace. This is a really great touch, as if Peace could come about in any way but war!

Women clinging to their children. It's amazing the effort that goes into War, the greatest Holiday Season of all time. It is almost like it never really ends, which is part of what makes it so magnificent.

And the really magical part is everyone seems to know their appointed role. It is as if, after thousands of years, we all have it in our blood, the very blood we spill all over the killing fields of War. It just comes naturally to us. We pick it up like the language, or manners of saying hello. They say it is harder to learn a country's War Customs if you are not born there. Even our churches teach about the drinking of the Blood of Sacrifice, that of all these cute and bouncy little babies who are so lucky to have been born into the World that has the Wartime Festivals. The Blood is everything. If God didn't give His Child, after all, we would have been too crude a people to go to Heaven at all! It is the ultimate test of faith for a mother or father to give their child to be killed in the name of God. It pleases God. And then, to top it all off, we call Jesus, who was kind of like the first Saint of War, the "Prince of Peace". This takes a really deep appreciation for the complexity of our culture and for the Festival of War to fully appreciate and understand. It is very common for younger folk to rebel against it because they just don't have the level of maturity and education necessary to appreciate all the glory of War. People that have not been trained properly, perhaps because they did not come from good homes, are somewhat the scourge of our society, but perhaps it is God's will as they put on some of the greatest "Peace" marches, which really add to all the grandeur of War and stir up a lot of anger, which also really helps with the whole Festival of War, I heard, but that involves the really expert priests behind the endless Festival of War, the priests who are, alone, fit to speak on behalf of God, though they say they have the ear of most of our highest leaders. Thank Goodness!

Some people don't seem so good at the Wartime Festivals, like the Palestinians. They seem to lack the real vigour and enthusiasm we have come to expect from the participants. Instead of great speeches and mighty tanks, they seem to be satisfied with letting their sacrificial children wander upon enemy mines and bombs (or fall beneath encroaching Israeli tanks) and thence conduct mournful parades through the streets or lob pathetic bombs and missiles in return - but at least it shows ingenuity and a willingness to take a more active part in the child sacrifice.

This makes for good Television of course. And it would not be in the true Spirit of War to criticize them too much. Israel, on the other hand, keeps much more with the traditional forms of festivity, with their looming tanks and fighter bombers in the "dead of night". We have a special name for when countries are too poor to put on a really good show for the grand Theater of War; we call it G-E-N-O-C-I-D-E. This is where whole rivers run with the "Blood of Innocents" such as with the black peoples in Africa. But you know, as everybody knows, you can't have life without death. Some countries just don't have our level of education and wealth. But we are trying to help them learn. Wealth only comes to countries who are willing to do their part for the Grand Festival of War. Other than that, they always make good "Terrorists" or "Commies" or "filthy animals". What would the Spirit of War be without them?

While I was growing up, the Russians took up their mantle as "enemy" (and we were theirs - it's fun! but it's also a very holy thing as well.) My father stopped calling them Russians one day. Instead they were the trigger-happy filthy Commies. What was neat is that many of our own folk could be filthy commies as well, "threats to peace" and all that. Some thought there would be a nuclear war, but we knew this would never happen. It would have burned up all the sacrificial blood and left too few to carry on the Wartime Traditions that keep Peace and Love alive forever. Some people like to jokingly say, "Peace Not War" but everyone knows the truth - Peace exists Because of the War Festivals.

In my lifetime I have actually got to live through the greatest period of our history of all, that in which we have all become part enemy and part hero of the Spirit of War, so that we can play whatever part we like. Now everyone who goes to the airport is a "suspected terrorist", an invitation to let off whatever bombs they have managed to create for the great never ending celebration we know as War. Some people even say we are in the Golden Age of War. And most of the contemporary Saints work so hard at it that they need whole child sex crime rings to supply them with sacrificial children to rape, kill and drink their blood. They say the blood is best when it is taken from the child while they are still alive. (This goes back to ancient Babylon where killing and raping a child, not necessarily in that order, was learned to be the highest form of moral courage by the high priests of the time and of our time today). But of course, that is only for the really powerful and rich people, the Holy Men of our respective societies. It helps purify their minds for the great responsibilities they have taken on to make sure the War Festivals last forever. For us, we get lots of films and magazines and books that help us to lower our sinful "moral" inhibitions, which in turn helps us produce more and more children fit for the Festival of War.

This is called the Hegelian Dialectic or Problem-Reaction-Solution: Whether the greatest problem undermining a society or the World is too much "morality" or not enough of it, the solution is usually something to do with advancing the Festival of War.

It was so great of our respective governments to create the day of infamy known as 9/11.

We have never had such a memorable day as that ever before! Most of us were so surprised, glued to our TV sets to learn about how the celebrations would be conducted, who was the new enemy and how best to sacrifice our children and where to send them and all that, much of which the media managed to relate to us all within about ten minutes of the attacks. But of course our governments have saved up a lot of our weekly church contributions and clearly spared no expense to use nuclear devices and military-grade nano-thermite to create the most catastrophic social and environmental disaster of the twenty-first century - and this right on the first year of the new millennium! As it turned out, the buildings themselves, the World Trade Center Towers, were built with nuclear explosives beneath their foundations. Now that's planning in the True Spirit of War.

What a celebration it was, in the true Spirit of War. Christmas could never compare, but that is a nice holiday today, a time of "Peace" when the birth of the religious icon of child sacrifice was born so that when he "came of age" the people could learn to drink His blood - and boy does he have enough blood to go around; Jesus has more blood than Santa has presents. The blood of the Spirit of War is not made at the North Pole, they say, but in our very own hearts since we were born, the very stuff that makes our tiny little cheeks so red.

The Festival of War takes so much trouble, it is a wonder anyone has time to do anything else, which is perhaps why our schools help support War so much, as well as our churches. For my parents, there is no greater thing they can do for civilization than to give their children away to the blood sacrifice of War and to helping with the blood sacrifice of other children just like us. Sometimes I wonder what little children did without War?

Now the children are not so much the Slant-Eyed Commies as the Terrorist Scum of the brown folk over in the Middle East. Of course we talk about targeting the Terrorist Scum. But what someone unfamiliar with the customs of War may not understand is that this is just a figure of speech. Nobody needs to be worried about being left out of the great holiday celebrations. Everyone can be sacrificed whether they are the "official" Terrorist Scum or not. Over in this part of the World we call that the "price that has to be paid for freedom". The little brown people were not so good at carrying out their part in the War Festivities, so we starved them to death. It was a G-E-N-O-C-I-D-E of over half a million cute little babies. (Of course, the United Nations War Office could only count the ones under 5 years of age, so busy was everyone with all the other preparations for War that were necessary). Isn't life great? To think, that was just the kick-off to the War on Terrorism, a living or dying monument to the endless War upon which our Peace entirely depends, or so we are told.

So I hope you have enjoyed this little holiday story in this the Greatest Age of War anyone has ever known. And always remember the motto, "To create Life is to create War."

Such advanced concepts are taught out of our Holy Bible and through History and Entertainment.

It takes a lot of money and government help to support such a high level of saturation of education, but that is the kind of World we live in, never happy until the last drop of blood that can squirt out of the guts of our brothers and sisters on the great Battlefield of Life.

Merry War!

And in the Spirit of Wartime, may I recount this Holiday Carol:

O Hey it's the Day of 9/11
When so many good people went to Heaven
Some people, and we know not whom - they could be me, they could be you - went down to live in Hell

It is a time to get in gear
To celebrate Love and Hate and Fear
And send our babies to the Blood Sacrifice throughout the year

It is the Time of Love and War
This is the reason we were born
(Tis The Season of Great War)
So raise your voices to the sounds of Death and War!

Blessings everyone.
And, as we say, May our Children's Blood flow Forever

Saving Our Babies From War

Kindness is the Sun
Kindness is the flower
Kindness is the sum
Of knowledge and its power.

*You know how many days hath gone and must bath gone the scope
The Happiness with which they speed a never ending good Eternal feeling that forever living in the Soul
A Fullness and its whole expansion we hath understood
The rays emitted by our hearts, the stars, the Sun, the Moon
Extending out down through the clouds and settled down the kind
Caress our mother and our father just like in the womb
That spoke in feelings radiate the essence of the mind
Its place amidst the streams and lakes, the flowers and the bees,
The seasons each unfolding of the Universe our place
In all the Nature of the World the Nature of a Dream
The birth of Man and that of every purity and grace
With which the innocence of children understand the Earth
The whole expansion of the Fullness of the Universe.*

When I see a baby and their mother or hear the sound of an infant child crying at night, it breaks my heart in a most glorious way.

Therefore, I am very interested in any possible way to prevent that child from ever joining the military or armed forces, from obtaining any belief that such a venture can actually protect let alone increase the security and safety of any family or community on Earth.

Now, maybe I am mistaken in my beliefs. Perhaps I possess some genetic anomaly that prevents me from understanding how war of any kind for any reason can protect, maintain or even increase the security of any family or community on Earth.

At best, I can relate this belief to a wide array of experiences that I have had with alcoholics who, when confronted by any socially-appropriate prompting to consider their accountability or the accountability of others to the feelings, needs or words of others, tend to, as individuals and groups, engage in stories and insinuations that rather serve to devalue, dehumanize and deflect any socially-appropriate and reasonable interest in the feelings and needs of others (an interest that need only require, under normal conditions, that they be human beings), any conflict between which needs for security and safety and their own taken to be a threat and just cause to escalate their routine pathological individual and group minimization of adult and child needs and feelings that they otherwise vaunt as of the highest value amongst their everyday lives and tribal groups, groups whose safety and security needs they are taught and actually believe are rather served than not by threatening and destroying the lives and safety of others (indeed no small reason for their own beliefs in this regard, that first their own minds were destroyed with just such psychotic conditions in their infancy and youth "for their own good"), a logical impossibility by virtue of the very fabric of Life and Nature, that of the intelligence by which our own billions of cells cooperate within our own bodies, any corresponding disruption of which on this psychotic order we have a name for - it is called cancer.

I have never experienced any violence to my person (and I have experienced much violence from this kind of psychotic delusion, the greatest victim of which is the psychotic) who did not first, during and after feel a compulsive threat-based religious need to paint a portrait of reasonable adult concerns for personal safety, let alone conditions within which, alone, any reasonable socially-appropriate and socially-stable trust can be either formed or maintained, in a highly distorted and highly fictional manner, placing them even further out of touch with the needs and concerns of others as well as from their own true needs and feelings, deserving as much of honest communication and regard but which they evidently protect from what their training seems to tell them is an almost certain violent response from the "target" of their threat-based aggression and diminished ethical sympathies. It is, as such, no great wonder why this is so.

Before I was attacked in my home, my attacker said that my concerns about their routine dismissal of any of my personal concerns for safety were because I was "a drug addict". After I was attacked, they said my concerns were just because I was "mentally unstable". Another attacker, at the same time, dismissed my concerns from their previous abuse as because I was a "criminal" and later referred to me, with my concerns over the then next wave of violence, as "mentally unstable". Other members of their group, when prompted as to my concerns, ignored them, refused to give them any validity or any kind of normal adult interest, and simply stated that I must have had a "particularly hard childhood." Their father, who also committed routine physical abuse of me, went through a series of stories that painted pictures of me as "angry", "violent", "mentally ill" and "socially underdeveloped" - no small projection and indictment of themselves. Since most people are truly shocked and concerned by such accusations, this serves to deflect accountability. Psychotics of this nature or any nature demonstrate no such socially-appropriate anxieties and pride themselves on their stalwart moral confidence in the face and even escalated in the face of any suggestion to the contrary. We do not call this a psychotic delusion for nothing.

Each of them had a story, a shocking lack of interest in either my adult concerns or even in communicating in no uncertain terms that they had no such interest (which is their right to do) and a profound interest in painting my concerns as "crazy" and out of proportion, concerns over long term severe physical injuries requiring years of physiotherapy, thousands of dollars, and even reconstructive surgery. They said they were "over it", suggesting that it was "my problem" and yet were unwilling and unable to carry on the most rudimentary interest in my concerns, as though anyone might find them even remotely constructive or pertinent to any normal human relationship. This is learned behaviour from adapting to psychotic developmental conditions, as I write about extensively and most recently in "The Victimized Aggressor" which deals as well with the larger social implications of human psychosis and alcoholic-type mentalities in Part Three: "An Alien Mother Ship", Page 529.

Years have gone by (these people are members of my family of origin) and the stories persist at my every attempt to gain any interest whatsoever in my long term injuries, not to rub anything in per se (they did not "mean" to hurt me), but to set any basis I am aware of as an adult for the reformation of social trust upon which basis and only upon which basis any stable non-violent relationship can take place. They will not talk about it with me. They will not even so much as tell me that they are uninterested in doing so. And yet show surprise that I will not or cannot engage in any conversation that has minimized, to my way of thinking, such a vital dimension of any stable interaction, for everyone's sake. Stories have gone on to include that I am attempting to "protect myself from nothing" in an infantile fashion (again, the suggestion being I am "underdeveloped" or "irrational" compared to them) or that I am just "traumatized" or under the influence of a mental illness (that I call self-respect) for reasons entirely unconnected to their own attitudes or behaviour, behaviour they have, thanks to their own masterful techniques of avoidance, one and all, successfully escaped any question of, leaving them with a range of lack of understanding to abject incomprehending fear of my own stated interests, interests they treat as obsessive and unhealthy (how their brains and even immune systems (as individuals and groups), as I have said elsewhere in this work, treat their own traumatic emotions their brains have not learned to process, leaving them prone to aggression and obsessive-compulsive aggressive and self-immolating behaviour, controlling behaviour.) They have incorporated a totally perverse value system to reflect the exotically abnormal development of their own brains under the conditions of their family of origin and thus of their own brains and the "reflex intelligence" of the cellular entrainment of this behaviour individually and on a collective or group psychology basis. I have watched such people stalk other people with ruthless non-verbal cooperation, a predatory instinct I refer to as not just psychotic but psychopathic.

These same people, ironically enough, are aware of socially inappropriate aggression, and have even experienced it themselves. One of them, my sister, is even a proponent of measures to decrease bullying in her community though remains totally ignorant over her own profoundly aggressive and narcissistic tendencies, the violent effects of which I have lived with for years, effects that are considered "infantile" and "of no interest" to my sister and other members of our family of origin.

This is a case of two dramatically different and even opposite brain states and functions operating in the same person, like a split personality. Some such people are sometimes referred to as schizophrenic, though not in the strict definition of this term, of hearing voices, rather in the sense that their own acculturated moral promptings are, no matter how anti-social and injurious to others, considered to possess the authority of "Love" or "God" or "country", their being in evident possession of ideals in vast contradiction to either their aggressive behaviour or their pathological incapacity to consider their behaviour or attitudes in the light of its harmful effects upon others that are thus routinely dehumanized under endless guises, from "foreign policy" to demeaning insinuations about country, creed or mental disposition and education, all of which place the criteria for treating their words and feelings as valid out of reach of the simple fact of their being human beings with valid needs as such, and nor is this horrific contradiction with their own stated and often lofty ideals noticeable or even meaningful to them, the mere suggestion of which must arise from someone else's "mental disease".

Again, this is not called a psychotic delusion for nothing, one that is, we must admit, so prevalent throughout our respective societies as to very likely constitute a major cause for an endless array of physical and social ills, even war and, in a very related sense, untimely death from mental conditions routinely vaunted as normal and even exemplary (to the degree any given child manages to successfully (a relative term) adapt to them) by our "modern" yet barbaric and militaristic culture, cultural values mirrored by a "war on drugs" that escalates drug production and distribution (for profit) to increasingly damaging results socially and individually, a "war on illness" that spreads illness (for profit) and serves to justify endless escalation of increasingly life-threatening prescription drug use (ironically enough), and a "war on terrorism" that trains "patriotic heroes" from birth to be socially praised highly trained agents of the most advanced terror apparatus in the history of the World and to ridicule anyone who questions such an apparatus in the light of its deadly mass effect on millions of innocent people "for the sake of our and their safety and security" as families, individuals and communities, despite the constant breakdown and undermining of all the above by the same conditions promoted in the name of "safety and security" for all.

In other words, it is possible, when placed or raised in exotically abnormal psychological conditions, conditions which, for historical reasons we have gained an abnormal standard of measurement of the effectiveness or health of (as I recount through my work), to practice, as individuals and groups, a "sliding-scale" between abnormal and reasonably adult psychology with respect to other groups and individuals, based on the kinds of stories circulated about "them" with respect to our "security and safety" as families and communities.

I am concerned about how our babies may be exposed to any kind of culture of this "sliding-scale" between normal and abnormal psychology and any conditions which may predispose their brains and souls to regard this as normal and even exemplary behaviour. I don't really believe the soul can regard this as normal, hence the prevalence of sedatives circulated throughout the World, those which relieve the bodily organism of its "soul" and thus any emotional promptings to consider any higher or more enjoyable way of Life, even for the sake of all Life. Elsewhere I have referred to this as "relieving ourselves of our emotional Motherland".

To put this in other terms, this is like getting a lobotomy and then acquiring the moral certainty that other people would not be so hostile about lobotomies if they got lobotomies, going so far as to suggest that lobotomies should be mandatory.

As another example, pot smokers often herald the mellow of the pot "high". One pot advocate has suggested, as many do, that no one ever gets aggressive or anti-social from smoking marijuana or weed as it is called. Pot is a sedative and a hallucinogen. As anyone who has ever taken a sedative knows, that, Yes, you do lose interest in certain things - you care less about stressful stimuli.

However, at the same time, having spent years in close contact with dozens of chronic pot users, I can say from experience that regular pot use disposes the human mind to elevated levels of aggression and/or a diminished capacity to take a consistently socially-appropriate interest in the feelings and needs of others. The only difference is, if you are smoking pot, you don't care and you don't notice. It is like the old story of what happens when a regular drinker goes to the bar and decides not to drink any alcohol - they suddenly notice that none of the jokes are all that funny and no one seems that cool. In fact, drunk people seem to talk about nothing really at all.

However, this same pot smoking advocate of pot, suggested that pot should be "mandatory" so that no one would need have any concerns about pot use. This is a typical suggestion from anyone addicted to a sedative. Yes, the sedative works. It feels good. But it reduces the capacity of the mind to function in a consistently socially-appropriate and sympathetic manner AND it disposes one to not either care or notice this fact - to in fact take a rather aggressive threat-based approach to any suggestion that this need by any problem at all.

Now we can extend this analogy from drug-related social and mental illness (called by many pot users elevated social function and spiritual awareness - there's the deceptive storytelling that feels "victimized" by any contradictory information) to proponents of war, always based on "defense of our security". Of course, we could never say that war was a complex psychological program, to which we are cellularly and culturally disposed due to routinely adverse conditions for whole brain emotional and mental development thought "normal" and even "exemplary" by a modern culture with total enforced amnesia in both language and memory, education and occult "mainstream" religion, that "protects us from" any other more refined cultural standards of human development and behaviour (standards that have slowly come to be included in the blanket term "terrorist" and "communist", not coincidentally), and is used to get people to acquire needs for and demand to serve a highly organized initiative to get human beings to do the hardest thing for human beings to do - kill other people on command.

Something to think about.

It is absolutely fascinating to me, a never ending source of awe and wonder how many hundreds and thousands of people in all walks of life from the lowest to the highest levels of cultural and political authority, how many families, how many conscious choices of how many families, men and women, how many choices need to be made, affecting so many families for so many generations causing untold social and personal illness undermining every social and life support system on Earth, how much highly coordinated human labour, thought and emotion, how many ecological and societal resources need to be mobilized requiring how much coordination and cooperation of how many companies, people and institutes (and countless more decisions) in order to drop bombs on, launch missiles at from land, air and sea, and fire automatic weapons upon innocent men, women and children en masse (by the hundreds of thousands) in foreign lands, how much profit is made from selling those countries weapons presumably for their own safety and protection, and then how much more profit is made by the same companies selling people on attacking them, making them out to be dire threats to our own safety, security, health and prosperity and, finally, how long this pattern has continued to be accepted by how many millions of presumably educated people in the most presumably informed and advanced few centuries of the last several millennia?

According to one Master Doctor I have known, his response to the prevalence of psychotic behaviour in our society was this: "It's normal now."

That is pretty clear.

To conflate his countless years of experience and research (his work has been consulted by the United Nations), the human immune system is the most challenged organ of the human energy system and faces the greatest threats to our continued existence today, facing a total full-spectrum chronic (from conception) assault all our lives, an assault in the realm of every dimension of human existence.

A prominent example of mass social psychosis, made up of all the little psychotic things we do each day, is war. Who is really in command of war? How many people, choices and resources are necessary for war, and commanded by whom? A military commander? The president, you say? And who commands them, perhaps, Henry Kissinger? The head of the Committee on Foreign Relations? The Trilateral Commission? And who commands them, the United Nations' Secretary-General? Have you ever wondered why the de facto head of Canada, for instance, is called a Governor-General? And who commands them? Do we even know? Do they?

To quote from Vladimir Megré's Space of Love, Book Three of the Anastasia series,

"Anastasia's gone. She's gone deep into the taiga. She couldn't help leaving. If you try to go after her, you might get killed. You're not suited to the taiga. Besides, you've got to write some more. To fulfil your promise to her."

"In order to write more, I've got to hear her answers to the many questions from my readers. Questions about children, about different religions..."

"Nobody'll find her now.'

"Why do you keep parroting: 'She can't be found! She can't be found!' I know where her glade is, I'll find her.'

"I tell you, you won't. Anastasia can't help but realise that there are people out to hunt her down.'

"What do you mean, they're out to hunt her down? Is somebody bribing the local hunters? Just like they pay you and Yegorych?'

"Me and Yegorych? No way! We try to persuade people not to interfere with her, not to alarm her. And if that doesn't work, we take them and let them off on the opposite shore. The local hunters can't be bribed; they've got laws and values of their own. They knew about Anastasia long before you came along. They've always treated her with great respect. They've been careful even when speaking about her amongst themselves. They don't like it when strangers show up in the taiga, and they're pretty good shots.'

"Then who could possibly hunt her down?'

"I think: whoever has led us into the condition we find ourselves in at this moment. And is still leading us.'

"Can you be more specific?'

"Each one of us has to work that out more specifically on their own.'

"But still, who do you have in mind? Someone like Boris Moiseevich?'

"He's just a tool. There's something we can't see that's playing with us. And Boris Moiseevich is starting to realise that now. And maybe the one who hired him has realised it, too."

That ungodly hour

Sitting beside the lake of all the sadness inherited by my mother and father, and by me, it is a lot to take in. I say a lake; but I might as well say an ocean.

I have always noticed, as such, the sadness inherited by other children, that in which their parents live and breath like some ungodly hour.

And yet there is so much of the greatness of Man in this that it is difficult to separate one from the other, that Happiness to and in which we aim to conceive our lives (and our child) and that deep sadness, alone, which seems to fathom the almighty reaches to which we aim, the fullness of one lived in the other, and the vast inheritance of every child thus undeflected and undisturbed, rather a rising to every challenge with a patience that will brook no refusal of its power that of the human mind, our breathtakingly unique kindness and that of all Life.

Writing to an Old Friend and Masterful Existential* Writer and Poet, Ian Hayden Ferreira, whose work can be viewed here: ianhaydenferreira.blogspot.ca

Your writing is reminiscent of a face in the clouds full of all kinds of celestial modifications to everything we think is honest with respect to what is actually honest and real about being a human being, something much more familiar than our ideals and a good deal less daunting than our own expectations.

It is like a spiritual or naturally religious version of the kinds of stories engineers might share about the hilarious and enlightening differences between how we think things are supposed to work and how they actually do, how wisdom appears when spelled in the hieroglyphs of venerable saints and sages compared to the rather human terms from which they draw their application and even apotheosis in every practical sense of those terms, those without artifice, with rather an arcane sincerity that trumps all the gilt and gaggle with which we occupy our time in place of getting down to the real business of filling ourselves with ourselves.

*“To my understanding, Existentialism suggests that the ultimate meaning of Life or why things happen the way they do in Life is so ineffable as to be virtually incomprehensible to any but the most as vastly private and subjective (or substantial) experience of such meaning or intelligence within ourselves and, barring that, might as well have no meaning at all.

“This is where Western thought tends to leave off, ending in Quantum intelligence, having presumed that physical laws are at the basis of consciousness and not the other way around. However, this is precisely where the science of Eastern or historically Vedic thought begins, that of and about the intelligence and consciousness at the basis of all Life and our selves.”

Bio-Algae Concentrate F3:

<http://cosmicheaven.blogspot.ca/2013/04/micro-algae-super-nutrition.html>

A Friend: “Vísí Trímma does indeed have anti-inflammatory properties. Pretty significant amount at that from what I understand of it. Recent studies have shown how constant inflammation is a serious health concern.

“I have heard of people who have needed 'crisis healing' and have had some effects from Trímma that were initially concerning. The one specific case I know of is one lady who had been sexually assaulted on the streets. For the last two years she has always constantly been on 'flight or fight' alert level. Because her system was so cranked full of adrenalin and cortisol, when she started taking Trímma she actually had serious withdrawal sensations as her body dissipated those two hormones.

“I haven't personally heard of the situation in regards to inflammation, but I do not see why it isn't possible to have the same sort of effect on that also. I don't recall you mentioning that the first time you tried it, but if you were taking the collagen chews they would be acting to repair cellular structure that may have been damaged from the inflammation. Not sure if that is really the case, somewhat speculating in this case.”

My response:

Wow. That's is all really helpful information.

This "fight or flight" hormone thing is very interesting to me, since I have definitely been in chronic and acute situations like that (in a way) in my my life - in fact, this is what I attribute much of my lethargic energy to.

No. I did not get any of these effects (extreme muscle strain) the first time I tried it. But I also wasn't spending 8 - 10 hours a day writing on the computer, either :-)

I myself have been editing a lot of work.

I am 'with you' on the inflammation as a health concern. Been watching a doctor of integrative medicine (west and east) talk about how everything from heart disease to cancer, from arthritis to Alzheimer's to gum disease is connected to inflammation, so much so that now cardiologists (she is a cardiologist) are focusing more on inflammation than on "bad cholesterol" as a precursor to heart attack and stroke.

From my other research (particularly the work of Dr. Michael Kiriak, who developed a food-based cure and prevention – BAC “Bio-Algae Concentrate” F3 - for many types of cancer after the Chernobyl disaster), the body, having sustained chronic pollutants, chemical additives and stressful lifestyle, can adapt to the stressful or inflammatory state as "normal", resetting its major hormones for energy and metabolism. This can lead to all kinds of illness and inflammation (which is really the body's way of trying heal, with or without our help i.e. changes to lifestyle and diet, environment and associations).

This is why the Trímma interests me, the suggestion being that it can help restore the markers for energy production and hormone regulation.

And so the doctor of integrative medicine was saying that when the body receives what it needs to deal with the pollutants or imbalances, what have you, then any inflammation, whether we have noticed it before or not, can increase for a period of a week or two as the body finishes, with vital help, dealing with the response to invasion or attack.

I often work for hours a day on a computer, but never have I felt the level of muscle strain that I have the last few days.

This is what prompted me to mention it to you (my friend).

Feel better today. I have a shoulder strain from a couple months back, so that is also a "marker" for me, as it was decreasing in stress and then increased after I started taking the Trímma. May or may not have to do with the Trímma, as I was also doing some physical exercises that may have strained it as well. But it makes me think.

I have had serious assaults to my upper body, shoulder and back in the past due to personal attacks which I need not go into. However, these attacks and the chronic stress and threat to my life led my energy to go way down, a condition lasting now many years and one for which I have done a lot of emotional release, writing and rebuilding. What is also been very troubling is that my attackers (my psychotic family) think they know more about my health than I or more doctors do, suggestion that my low energy is caused by anything and everything (including congenital “mental illness”) but their severe violent rape of my person in every possible way, from my character to my body, physical, mental, emotional and spiritual. However, I have long embraced this as a way to illuminate the power of kindness.

Sometimes, as you say (and this is my belief), shocking or chronic threats can semi-permanently alter the hormone levels and production levels in the body - this is the whole nature of shock - the body "saves" the threat state and "normalizes it", greatly effecting health in the long term. This can also exacerbate inflammatory responses and disease and so on.

But, let's face it, hypothyroid or adrenal fatigue is, in its way, an inflammatory response saying, "something's wrong here we need to deal with", "the body needs some extra help." As just such an inflammatory response to personal attack from several members of my family, much of which was sustained over the course of years (til this day) and also acutely led to my needing reconstructive surgery and thousands of dollars and what amounts to years of physiotherapy due to recurrent shock and trauma-based re-injury, each one sending me to the hospital emergency room in the most profound agony and distress; an inflammatory response to this can and has come in the form of anger, which forced me to take immediate action to place as a long-standing provisional condition that such family members needed to, as a priority, take a demonstrable interest in the severity of the injuries that they had incurred upon me and, failing that, I needed to keep as much distance from them as possible, since their psychotic brain-states cannot fathom my need in this regard, no small contributing factor, no doubt, to the original injuries, their stated needs, in fact, in turn, being that any kind of relationship they indeed wish to have with me (as though nothing has happened of any great interest to them) need be on the condition that no such interest in the severe life-altering and life-threatening extent of their injuries to me, or indeed interest in any of life-changing effects their violent behaviour and attitudes have had upon me (though it has all been for the best, over all) will ever (that is, never) be expected by me. My belief being that a family member that says they love you that needs that kind of "condition for relationship" (which is really a form of violence) is the real victim of these attacks, a victim who has sustained a much more serious "disability", a psychosis, as this whole book is about.

My hope is that the ingredients of Trímma will be that extra help on the nutritional and medicinal level that I have been needing and looking for.

Thought I would let you know more about my perspective.

So far I would say positive results over all, but I need more time to see.

Anyway, that's that.

Really appreciate your input and your interest in how the Trímma is working.

I have provisionally decided to take one ever two days, as yesterday I took one around 8:30 AM and had a bit, just a bit of a difficult time getting to sleep around 9:30, 10:00 PM.

But, again, my body does not metabolize caffeine very well at all. This is not a huge concern for me, considering all the other benefits, as the sustained energy is very comfortable for me at this point.

Really appreciate your input and your interest in how the Trímma is working,

Rayn.

To be clear, it is fair for someone to have a need to not discuss or not have a particular interest in discussing anything, even violence they have committed to someone else. It may not be comprehensible to many non-psychotic people, but it is fair. There is that respect.

However, when this “no personal” interest turns into

- 1) No such interest need exist
- 2) No reasonable healthy adult would ever take such an interest
- 3) Any dialogue can only take place on the condition no such interest can ever be expected and;
- 4) Because they do not need or want such a discussion, nor should any reasonable healthy adult;
- 5) Any such interest is routinely perceived as threatening and anti-social, for which threats are made and ultimatums are issued to attempt to squelch any such interest as a moral imperative and primary basis for any healthy relationship and;
- 6) Any such interest is only conceded to on the most aggressive, resentful and deceptive basis and thus, in fact, not really conceded to at all and;
- 7) Any such interest could only be a sign of mental illness or trauma that has nothing to do with the actual violence involved;

Then this is a form of psychosis and psychotic violence in itself.

On top of which, anyone who, under emotional duress, concedes to such psychotic requirements for any healthy adult relationship with the aggressor is conceding to highly unstable conditions in which healthy human trust (the basis for any healthy adult or infant relationship) can never be regenerated or maintained, conditions that cannot possibly lead to any sustainable relief from suffering but only to more violence.

In other words, the conditions that a psychotic or alcoholic needs (which is fair) and demands aggressively from (which is violently unfair), even with threats and insinuations as to the “health” of their friend, spouse, brother, sister, child or mate are conditions in which no stable relationship or trust can ever truly be formed, much less regenerated post-violence; they are conditions in which only violence can be the result, as such conditions are themselves a form of violence that greatly destabilizes and agitates the mind of any non-psychotic person, no matter how much they attempt to “go along with it” (which is, to be fair, a kind of sickness in itself).

There is no known cure for psychosis of this nature; it is pathological and developmental. Only conditions may arise in the life of the psychotic, as with anyone, that may lead them to learn to process the emotions their greatly inflammatory state of mind and body and brain is unable to process and in fact emotions which their own immune system (those of their body and the culture of their family of origin, if not society itself) aims to fend off (often with either outright violence or a diminished capacity to take a reasonable and reasonably consistent socially appropriate interest in the needs and feelings of others) as though a threat to their very existence. Such a level of development, as such, is so incomprehensible to an adult, much less to a child, that the psychotic brain development is adapted by a child in order to survive it, to varying success measured, as one might well imagine, by a totally perverse set of criteria as to power and control, aggression and “weakness” within a society or within such a sick family, where all society begins and ends.

The best I personally know how to do is to observe what is happening. When observed well enough, this should serve some practical purpose, if only with respect to one's own safety and sanity, as I believe both trauma from and “adaptation” to these very conditions are at cause of most illnesses in our society, as most illness is linked to the very kinds of inflammation, physically and emotionally, that have prompted me to study this behaviour, inflammation of any kind an immune response so great because the threat to the life and heart of a human being, and by extension all life (as we can see today) is so great, a level of inflammation that at times looks like an auto-immune disorder, like the body is actually attacking itself – it is only that, in terms of both body and emotional being, the body and emotional being has been and is under so great an attack from the self-immolating responses created around instinctual pain management systems the body uses to help manage (and most of us have a tendency, like the medical system, to associate managing our pain with actually dealing with it, in the name of which may psychotic healers and teachers aim to help people deal with, really control, their problems); it is only that the body and emotional being has been and is under so great an attack from the self-immolating responses created around instinctual pain management systems the body uses to help manage acute and chronic social and physical trauma (such as from toxic food, air or trauma-based emotional states of human personality and behaviour that do not perceive or respond to the harmful effects of those states of behaviour but to escalate them in response to the “threat” of the “effect”), thereby causing the immune system, as advanced an intelligence as it is (extending out to all celestial systems of intelligence all the way down to the most transcendent intelligence in creation, that of eternal Happiness and Life itself or an absolute Life Principle that sustains all its relative orders as the endless expression and realization of Itself for the joy of all forever), to co-create conditions or health problems and situations that may lead us to create a safer environment and to help the immune system in creating a safer environment and a less toxic environment for ourselves and for anyone else in which to gain and process emotions and information (which are often the same thing) that will lead to a more enjoyable way of Life than we have, perhaps, ever realized before.

In other words, any emotional or physical problem in a person or in a family (and all disease is a family issue) is attempting to tell us something that may help us to lead a more enjoyable Life. Opening the heart is a courageous process that is also a very private process that cannot be reduced to mere quaint sentiments and affirmations. And yet opening the heart can often help any situation, the purpose of which may have always been, at the Soul level, to open the heart, the organ and the invisible energies (and immune system) probably most challenged today, in terms of health and well being, and that upon which the entire biosphere is most dependent.

As such, even events in our biosphere can have much to tell us that can lead us to enjoying a much higher quality of Life. Opening the heart is never a punishment. It always makes a day or a Life much easier. And, what's more, opening the heart has no negative side effects.

Yet, it is a profoundly personal process that cannot and should not be over simplified, much less used to devalue, in any way, shape or form, the vital importance of all our emotions, from anger to sadness.

The Cause Of All Disease On Earth

One does not have to be a medical doctor or have in one's possession any form of formal medical training to be able to identify, with a few common observations, the primary source and cause of all forms of social and personal disease on planet Earth today or ever, cumulative as they have been, by nature, over generations of using the problem to effect the "cure" (which means to cover up the problem). We tell our children not to use drugs when, in fact, our entire culture is oriented to sedating our emotional Motherland or mental and emotional development through whatever means possible de rigueur as it were, as an entire way of Life. And it is precisely these kinds of violent contradictions between what we profess and how we actually live that constitute, I firmly believe, the unspoken moral codes of the whole World today, those which in fact must and do lead to every kind of continued and escalated violence, though it may transform into one kind or another, usually in the "name of Love", "safety", "security" or "protection". This is a virus, the only sane remedy to which must include both immediate family and wider social and cultural conditions in which no one need ever get sick at all and in which no violence, natural disaster or war need ever take place, for any reason.

I hope that makes sense to some people. If it does not, I sincerely invite you to read it through again and pay attention to your own feelings and thoughts as you do.

For a child is not just raised by their parents. A child is raised by their entire culture and society. A culture, then, should provide - it is its job and one, if it does not do its job, no amount of labour on the part of parent or child can ever make up the deficit - it is the job, as such, of any human culture to provide a filter for and a means of Life-enhancing correspondence or communication with the forces, elements and energies of the surrounding Nature in its entirety, that of the entire Universe of Life. This is as essential as a mother's breast milk to the development of a child's emotional and mental being, their brain, their heart, the proper and complete coordination of their immensely powerful spirit (think of all the stars in the sky and the force of Life itself) with his or her wee body and the proper Life-enhancing orientation of their priorities and values in their brains, that which can only be attained, according to the ancient aboriginal wisdom of our ancestors (who fought and died, babies in one hand and swords in the other, for a true culture of peace herein), when a child can make daily contact with the living creative intelligence of Nature, every part of which contains the essence of the perfection and boundless fullness of all Life and only through contact with which the perfection of Man and Man's whole brain (through the essence of the mind, ad astra per ecstasis, to the stars through Happiness at the eternal basis of all Life and time out of mind) thereby. A truly peaceful culture, a truly healthy culture of truly healthy families and homes provides not the means to Happiness but speaks directly, as a priority, to the born Happiness of a child at the basis of all Life. The means to Happiness can only be provided based on Happiness "in the beginning" and "within the Soul". This why Jesus referred to seeking first the "kingdom of heaven within". He was referring to the entire culture of our ancestors, the culture of Life.

The brain works properly and can only determine the wonders of creation, that of coordination of spirit with body, cells with cells, girls with boys and Man with Nature as a whole, when first brought into contact with the essence and Happiness of Life. A truly sane culture does not offer Happiness as only the goal. It also recognizes and provides, as a first priority of its entire celestial pageant, contact with inner Happiness as the means. Instead our culture fails to do this and then sets up various mercenary and social "moralities" as to how you have to "work harder" and "earn your Happiness" and "make better choices", choices that were meant to be made based on Happiness and never in search of it. Happiness is our birthright. And a culture that does not know that is a culture of death and violence, aiming, whatever it may aim to do, to kill the souls of all children everywhere, making them slaves and agents of such a monstrous technocracy, sad as that may sound. Sad as that may sound, a proper comprehension of the root problem is essential to bring to light the perfection of Life "in the beginning" that is the cure, that which also runs throughout everything every human culture has ever aspired to.

That is, again, a lot to take in. I invite you to consider that or read it through again, paying attention to your own personal thoughts and feelings, which can say more than I or anyone ever could.

The purpose of a culture is to provide a filter for all the forces of the Life of the World as well as a means of correspondence with all the forces of Nature and the World - not necessarily to comprehend the intelligent integration of all forces, emotions and elements (which is impossible) but to nonetheless gain the full benefit of such a comprehension (and living integration or infinite knowledge, however it has ever or will ever be spoken of, live as it will as uniquely as one's own name or place of birth within ourselves, the ancient at once changeless essence, fullness and most substantial aspect of the entire Universe of eternity unfolding according to nothing less, the basis of ancient science and culture) through the nurturing of our own emotional being and the entire divine range of our spiritual and emotional sensitivities, those in born infinite correspondence with every form of living creative intelligence.

We can see how this is the proper home for a child when we look at its converse. When we listen to the human body today taken as a whole. The human body, like the World, is very sick.

Even our contemporary spiritual "new age" gurus do not say much about improving the conditions of human existence but to point to each individual "pulling up their proverbial bootstraps". This is their training. Just so, for generations of child psychology, children exposed to the most violent conditions, conditions of totally unfiltered poisons on every level psychologically and chemically (examples of which I will go into at some length) for personal development are told by professional psychologists that they "have a problem", treating the child and not the whole family and society as a whole. In this way neither the child, the family nor society, nor the psychologist, gets any less sick. Our Happiness, according to even the most popular "spiritual gurus" today, is an entire individual process of meeting our own unfulfilled desires, whilst I would argue that, in accord with the most infinite living intelligence of all creation (and our own supremely individual experience of Happiness structured into all memories, images and filaments of both cosmos and body), which rises to serve nothing less to the fullest, our born deepest urge is for the wellness and Happiness of all the Earth. It is not, as one might guess, for animal sex with our mother or father. That is a perverse corruption of the essence of the birth of Man and the mothers of Man, of the womb of the Love of our mother and father and God all at once, that of the most highly accelerated and accelerating speed of thought imaginable.

This is part of the program we have been living, even though it greatly disagrees with what any parent or psychologist would consciously or has been taught to consciously profess. This is also why my work has been led to focus on psychosis to a great degree, though I will not go into that so much here, at least not specifically, except to say that psychosis is a shock and trauma-based inflammation of the brain (which has no immune system) crying out to every other immune system in the World for help in creating safer and saner conditions for the brain for the sake of all Life, a brain as though enraged.

It is statistically telling to me that three of the last three books recommended to me involve the main character being abandoned by their father, mother, lover or all of the above. What is really telling to me is that this happens in our society as much as it does, that we write stories about it and that we purchase and read stories about it as a source of entertainment whilst none of these stories provide any sensible remedial care pertinent in any way to the underlying cause of this tragic violence to the brain and heart of a child, so toxic is our military indoctrination that we simply aspire to help one another "deal with it" and "get over it", the emotions provoked as such serving less (or never processed or indeed even expected to be processed enough by the traumatized brain as) to bring a level of understanding capable of making any lasting or remedial corrections so much as to, instead, nurture the very compulsive and even pathological hopelessness for which we seek such constant sedation and even entertainment by vicariously participating in the tragedy of others.

Society exists to make the entire divine range of all our emotional and spiritual sensitivities acceptable to society, which of course they are and then some - for they exist at both the most abstract fullness and most substantial strata of society, coursing subterranean currents harken back to the very foundations of the World.

Parents exist (or once did) to use all their creative intelligence to make society acceptable to the entire divine range of all our emotional and spiritual sensitivities, those in infinite correspondence with every form of living creative intelligence on Earth as in the entire Universe of Life, one eternal indivisible boundless whole or ever unfolding totality exactly like our kindest mother, a mother or Woman whose entire beauty is meant to inspire, as a reflection of the most powerful Energy of Love, just such a creative intelligence, that with which, alone, Man can be fully Man and ever hope to conceive of not only a child in the image of the supreme living Dream of God as well as conditions sufficient for a child of the Creator of the entire Universe of Eternal Life.

That fact that this may well seem daunting to most people is some indication of the depravity to which humanity has allowed itself to be led. Though it may seem superstitious or overly "mystical", it is rather our culture, that of minds dimmed beyond the pale of the Sun by military-grade spiritual, religious, intellectual and "new age" propaganda, that is steeped in occult, religious and even scientific superstitions, elevated levels of suggestibility beyond that, perhaps, of any other age of the World, those of a greater ever escalating range of perils beyond that of any imagined by our most crude perception of our own pristine history on Earth.

For, mark my words, the self-proclaimed high priests of every respective society on Earth know that we did not descend from apes and that the Theory of Evolution is, for the most part, a total crock, that our ancient land-based ecstatic human existence (and divine natural inheritance) has been colonized by a modern or technocratic way of Life the most perilous in all of human history, a way of Life we routinely send our children away to foreign lands to murder and die for, so effective has been the occupation by way of severely dimming the human speed of thought far beneath that of the self-proclaimed high priests, human beings who have led us down a path of almost complete atrophy of the human mind and imagination, much to the peril of the health of all people on Earth.

And then there is the invincibility of the dawn.

Let us bring this back to what the human body is saying.

Life has been perfectly set up for the conscious thought and will of Man, just like a car is set up for you to decide what kind of gas to put in it and when. If you put sand in the car, failing to exercise the level of thought granted you by the car manufacturer (or by God), then problems will arise to alert you to your mistake in thought, not as a punishment, but as a help, as part of the perfection of Life, in terms of the perfect place of your capacity of will and thought in your Life, your capacity to learn better far surpassing any mistake you could make or have ever made. As a further note, the body, unlike a car, can actually run on the food analogy to "sand", though not for very long, and not very long very well.

Does that make sense?

We have been given the will and thought to know not to put cyanide or arsenic into our mouths and swallow it. If we do put these poisons into our body, thinking they are good to eat, then our body becomes the only filter (excluding our own will or thought) for these poisons. And since Life is set up for the perfect place of our own conscious will and capacity, our body will alert us to this problem. The body will send out a call to our primary filter of our will and thought. This is called "inflammation", the "itis" in dermatitis or gingivitis, or arthritis, and so on. All forms of bowel disease are caused by or calls of inflammation, that there is something we need to learn. And this is as much a personal as a social issue. This is a truly cosmic communication from God and from the very conception of all Life on orders far more practical than any spiritual, intellectual or "new age" propaganda.

In many cases, under ideal conditions, the body can deal with an immense amount of unforeseen toxins. However, if we continue to place even minute portions of toxins into our body over the long term, then the body will have to alert us to this.

The body's primary alert in this regard is called, "inflammation". And this for the sake of all Life, given Man's vital place in creation, as with our Happiness and that of our own most inspired creativity!

Inflammation, in turn, leads to almost all disease on Earth, from heart disease to stroke to cancer, from diabetes to, as we shall see, all kinds or most kinds of obesity - not to mention every type of mood disorder and even psychosis, which is another way of saying diminished mental and emotional development normalized by the hormonal markers of the body and brain in order to adapt to and survive the effects of parental and cultural psychosis, the brain and personality forming a lasting "negative impression" or what I call a "biological mirror" of the psychosis around it, that which routinely includes a flood of chronic and acute psychological and chemical poisons unlike any child in the World has ever been subjected to before, those of divorce, chemicals in food, psychotic and violent entertainment, electromagnetic and nuclear radiation (and they are all leaking, be sure of that), poverty, financial stress, labour demands that take parents out of the home, sexual perversity, compulsions, addictions, sexual and emotional abuse, arguments, bouts of rage, psychotic as though enraged brains "frozen into a scream" for generations through "biological mirroring", the effects of war, toxic air, food and water and the list goes on.

Now, we may live much longer than did our recent ancestors. We have managed a lot of disease control and sanitation. But this does not mean we have any better quality of Life. In fact, I would guess that it is far less. We are, in my opinion, the wealthiest most under-nourished and under-educated peoples in the history of the World living in escalating levels of crime and chronic disease beyond which the World has ever seen before. What "helps", however, is that we live in the most advanced military-grade propaganda, also, in the entire history of the World, with a ready consumer-accessible pharmacopoeia of sedatives and mind-altering drugs and "foodstuffs", not the least being money, as we shall see.

All these things are supposed to be filtered out with the conscious help of human beings and Man the parent, even unto the time of conception. This was the value of our ancient garden cultures much more advanced in though that we are today, despite the propaganda we are given in schools, propaganda or occult history that turns the priorities, values and logic of human birth and history upside down. And this the value to our self-proclaimed priests (who own all the money) of destroying such cultures or their memory and languages, concepts and "graven images", images used to subconsciously sell us a "new World", a plastic, concrete-choked, bio-mechanical "Paradise" ready to "serve our every need", failing to mention, at least overtly, that most modern needs have been propagated through mental and emotional torture since birth, using our own parents, without whom, given their God-given power, none of this could happen at all. Such needs can be managed by the technocratic apparatus and the mass help of brains dimmed beyond the pale of the Sun by trauma-based greed.

Inflammation of every kind, from anger to disease, from war to natural disasters to violence of every kind, crop up to alert us that, as Life is perfectly set up, we need to take a more educated conscious will and thought with respect to all our environmental and social conditions.

We cannot always change what country we live in, but we can change what choices we make as to what we eat and drink, and this will serve as a good example of what I am speaking about.

Most obesity, I am convinced, is not caused by over eating or lack of exercise; it is not caused by genetics or "retaining water". And, even if it is, it is also always caused by inflammation. Weight gain is a form of inflammation, the most noticeable kind.

When organs, particularly the liver, face way too many poisons on a daily basis and over years, combined with emotional trauma also stored in the liver awaiting time and conditions in which to process that and get the best out of that experience as much as any food (experience being the food of Life and of the Soul and our body being an living organism in coordination with our Spirit or Soul and its divine purpose in Life, to expand our capacity for the vast creative intelligence of Life, upon which all Life depends - hence the need for inflammation), then it moves to protect itself by storing fat around the belly as a protection - this is actually a special kind of fat.

I see belly fat everywhere I go and more and more. This is an inflammatory response to people eating poisons in their food that have been, unfortunately, labeled as "food grade".

No matter, it is up to us to communicate and co-create both healthy filters and higher levels of will power.

When we give up our will, our body cannot replace that will any more than our body can replace its animating spirit. And when we allow toxins to enter our body, without the benefit of our conscious will, then the Earth cannot replace that will either (its divine vital place in all of creation) and so we get inflammation. All inflammation is saying, "You need to pay more attention to what you are taking in, psychologically and physically. You need to change something for a more enjoyable experience of Life." This inflammation, our body's last line of defense, does not accept excuses and rationalizations, even if they are "supported by science". We are talking here about the working perfection of Life itself beyond all comprehension. These personal experiences of disease (and diminished blood flow to and around the brain, the electromagnetic current of our hearts and of the stars, that, in turn, of all creatures, food and beauty on Earth) are the front lines of combating every other level of social propaganda and military economics. And the self-proclaimed high priests of the World know this very well. So should you.

The most toxic elements we ingest or learn to ingest as children (as did I) are refined white and brown sugar (in "non-fat foods"), food preservatives (good for the company producing that food but not good for you), and chemical dyes and flavourings. Then, in a class all its own, is animal fat of every kind. Hundreds, hundreds of vascular diseases have surfaced over the last fifty or sixty years based on the increased quantities of embalmed meat and animal fat consumption. Here is a medical statistic for you: 60 percent of people's bodies' cannot, cannot properly digest milk products beyond infancy. That means that it is actually abnormal to be able to digest milk products after infancy.

And then, beyond toxic food, we have food sensitivities and allergies to common foods like soy, corn, gluten and wheat.

If you eat like this, assuming that something on the order of cyanide is food, no matter how much nature if not FDA scientists disagrees with you, you will not get sick - you already are deathly ill. But the mistake is not the greatest aspect of this situation. What is the greatest aspect of this situation is your and our ability to learn better, to communicate with one another, listen to one another and listen to our own body's and planet's "inflammation", which is there to help provide not a punishment but to co-create conditions with our own mistaken thought to encourage and nourish our own conscious will and thought as the primary filter for our minds, our homes and our lives - and especially those of our children.

When I see visibly obese people with heavy bellies, I know that the lack of conscious filters of human will or sufficient childhood conditions to form such healthy conscious filters is the greatest epidemic facing all Life on Earth. And this has not been an accident. We have been led here. And we have allowed ourselves to be led here. Though no dietary expert ever talks about this, our ancestral wisdom does. Our food effects the purity of our blood (the liver is a blood filter, the kidneys a filter with "return" capacities for any remaining nourishment left over, as in the wisdom from emotional experience of any and every kind) and the purity of our blood, in turn, effects the purity and power of our thought, while our thought and conscious capacity of thought and will is the greatest factor with respect to our entire Happiness in Life and that of the health of all Life on Earth. The liver and kidneys, connected to the function of eyes, has to do with our spirit-informed vision of the future of our Life, one of most primary functions, that first nurture by the divine beauty of our mother with respect to every e'er unfolding of the totality of the birth of Heaven and Earth for eternity. Is it any wonder, then, that so many people in the most toxic cultures on Earth, our own, believe that the future is defined by total destruction and/or the landing of extraterrestrials of an order of political in-fighting of truly "astronomical" proportions - or that such peoples are like our real "mommy and daddy"? Is it really that are to predict that the World has to change and that some of those changes can be more difficult than not based on human conscious will? Do you need a Bible to tell you that?

If you are sick or obese in any way, you need to consider (consulting a doctor) removing all of these toxic food additives and perhaps one or more other foods from your diet entirely, forever, for not only your own sake, but for the sake of your children, their children and their children, and for the sake and for the joy of all Life on Earth.

And food is just one of the ever increasing array of things we have allowed to filter into our lives and minds, not the least of which being the pollution we send into the air.

Our body is not meant to filter much of the heavy metals in our air because God gave us a mind to avoid that condition for human existence. And yet we have scientific military-grade propaganda telling us that Carbon Dioxide is the worst thing coming out of our cars. If only

Carbon Dioxide came out of our cars, that would be something of a revelation! Carbon Dioxide, to any true scientist, has about as much capacity to warm the climate as my own breath has the capacity to start a hurricane.

But, you may ask, why do so many scientists seem to support this contention?

To answer this question, I would like to introduce you to what may be a novel idea: that money, fear, peer pressure and psychological and political propaganda can change and diminish the functioning of the human brain, any human brain.

And don't just take my word for it. There is a large body of research to support this contention. This research by experts all over the Earth has been going on not for one or ten or even twenty years; it has been conducted, rigorously, over the course of thousands of years. It has a special name you might recognize.

It is called, "Human History".

Imagine a World that lived every day with the nectar of the easy and innocent science of devotion to Love as to the boundless Happiness of our own kindest mother and all people on Earth. For there is a law in the Universe that says that such a World can never be fought for lest it already be possessed by a mind as sharp as an iron blade and a heart as pure as a mountain lake, eyes of an eagle, legs of a jaguar, roar of a lion and the song of a nightingale.

I ask you, Are you that Woman? You that Man?

If so, for the Love of God and of your own children, Claim your Motherland.

The good news, if you will, is that the very force and fullness of all Life is the total most joyful infinite coordination of every aspect of Life or a supreme Life Principle of every aspect, shape or form of one living creation intelligence inspired by our own individual Happiness or the Life the very force of our own most inspired creativity (the force, fullness and boundless essence of the mind and all Life), the force and fullness and emanation of as though all possible information for the endless unfolding, expression and realization of all Life from our own emotional being, the music of the wind and leaves, the unchanging fullness of the Sun, the Moon and leaves as from "Once upon a time" or from our mother as "In the beginning..."

Life were the fullness and force of Life, or prana (Happiness), the essential fullness and force of the most joyful harmony of all mind and matter, all subject and object and each and every of infinite links between the two. Life is Happiness (or prana), allowing for the total most joyful coordination of all aspects of Life or the miracle of Life, the only miracle that any reasonably sane Man or Woman should ever need.

The aim of all culture on Earth, therefore, is to bring the human mind in contact with a greater experience of the force of Life (of Happiness) and thus the most joyful total coordination of every aspect of living creative intelligence or Life for the sake of all Life and to ease the suffering of the divine Goddess of Mother Earth (the Heart of Heaven, whose sorrow is our sorrow and whose Happiness is our Happiness), a fullness and force of Life's most joyful coordination of every aspect of creation for the sake of our own greater and greater contact and experience with the force and fullness of every aspect of Life – to realize the divine reality of prana.

The force, fullness and very structure of Life (and the Soul) were absolutely indestructible.

The thing that human beings desire the most (linked as it is the fulfillment of any possible desire) is to experience something of the total most joyful coordination of every aspect of Life (this has been called the "music of the spheres", but it can be the music of anything, of the leaves, of the streams, of children's voices or anything, really) and that is Happiness and Happiness is that, the very force and fullness and essence of the human mind, the eternal unchanging depths and blissful cosmic unchanging status expressed and absolutely maintained at every ever changing level of Nature and creation, the relative phase of an absolute Life, the force of prana. Prana is the fundamental transcendental intelligence of Life whose unfathomable codes no one shall ever comprehend, as they go much further "upstream" than genetics, though our feelings alone may decode them for the joy of all Life into endless sequences of the letters of the Dream of Life living in Nature, Nature the visible manifestation of God's everlasting thoughts of and for the total most joyful Happiness of all Mankind for eternity, every aspect of which very force of Life aims, by the divine logic of Life and God, to nourish and nurture, in turn, the force of the Cosmic Mind (and Prana) of Man's every conceivable Happiness, invisible emanations from the heart and mind of whom reflect off of the cosmic mirrors of all the planets of the stars, setting them in their proper course, nourishing, in turn, all Life and living celestial systems on Earth as they, too, are in most joyful infinite coordination with every aspect of living creative intelligence in the unfathomable cosmos at every plane of being (here or hereafter) simultaneously into eternity.

Happiness (prana) or the force of the mind provides for the total most joyful coordination of every aspect of living creative intelligence, of all mind and matter, subjects and objects as distillations as though at a distance from the boundless reaches of our own inner invincible divine bliss-intelligence, from all the cells of our body to all peoples on Earth. And the aim of every respective culture is to nurture from conception and birth the experience of prana, of Happiness for the sake of all Life on Earth.

A boundless Nature is the right place for the human heart.

Inside the heart of everyone living on the Earth is just a kid who loves to live in the Heaven of their birth. To such a child, I believe, the very grass beneath our very feet is alive with the invincible total everlasting integration of every force, energy, element and emotion in existence forever.

And so, I feel, are we alive with the Fullness of Life for all forever forever passing by.

Anyone who has read my work over the last several months and years might be reasonably justified in thinking that I had exhausted my interest in writing about the "new age" (which, I am sorry, I cannot spell out without quotation marks, for various reasons I will go into).

They would be wrong.

The fact is, I get an enormous amount out of examining my experiences with all kinds of "new age" gurus and healers, disciples and "light workers" (picture the fellaheen building the Great Pyramids, except that "they" or "we" (since I have been called a "light worker", too) are building a Great "Pyramid of Light" with regular non-light-worker humans being lifted up like heavy bricks weighing the whole Earth down).

Actually, I believe it will be discovered by physics that the invisible Light of Love emitted by healthy warm innocent human feelings free of all selfish-vanity and vain pride (cultivated by safe and sane human living conditions for which we need our brains healthy and whole as possible) actually illuminates and provides for the purpose and "gravity" of all things in Heaven and Earth, the expansion of truly wholly Life-enhancing and mind-enhancing Happiness and Prana the force of the mind and all Life, that of the total most joyful infinite coordination of all aspects of Life or living creative intelligence, that of our own emotional being, our own Happiness and that of our own most inspired creativity, particularly that directed toward conceiving not only a child ruler of the Universe, a human angel (who has always been given all necessary DNA from the start, despite what the military-grade "new age" will tell you) but also conditions fit for a child of the creator of the entire Universe, creators ourselves.

Much is made in both "scientific" and "new age" circles of human DNA, as though DNA sequencing determines our lives, while in fact peer-reviewed published science has proven without a doubt that our lives determine our DNA sequencing. Crop Circles are often interpreted by "psychics" (whose opinions are given the authority of the authors of the crop circles themselves) that we are going to get "new DNA" and "new strands of DNA". I have even met "new age" psychics who are convinced that children are born with "better DNA". This may seem quite harmless (and I suppose it is to an extent) until we look at another perspective, that the crop circles (art, I believe, from the deepest reaches of the power of human thought in Nature, summon as it can the help of every angel of creation) are more likely describing a change in awareness (not of DNA), a vision of Life with a more open human heart. Less "fantastical" perhaps but much more effective in changing our perspective on Life as a whole. That an open heart, in itself, is a vital part of Nature's total harmony, one that includes unfathomable living codes only some of which are visible as DNA, codes that relate to the consciousness of creation and the most joyful infinite coordination of every aspect of Life or living creative intelligence in the Universe. Our feelings, in turn, inform the sequencing of DNA much as they inform the sequencing of these words now.

It is interesting to note that the "specialty jargon" of "new age" and "scientific" propaganda, that of "the genetic fine print of Man" tends to create a fictional designation of those that are and are not "in on it" or "spiritual or educated enough to know" what is "really going on" (DNA causing or not feeling response to human living conditions that need therefore not undergo any deeper scrutiny than that of changing how people and children are "genetically disposed" to respond to them (social Darwinism)), "evolved DNA" lending itself to yet another fictional measure of "spiritual status" to unstable human minds whose vision of the future has been narrowed to that of being lifted into another dimension with or without the help of extraterrestrial "mother ships", to, by virtue of more "spiritual DNA", being able to live unaffected by poisonous food additives and other social toxins. (One "new ager", an owner of a health food store, told me (in no small contradistinction to all the profound social effects of organic gardening the world over) that soon "we would not even need to eat at all, we will just eat the spiritual vibrations" - another "new ager", a "healer", told her sister, jokingly, that her newborn daughter, who wasn't breast feeding because of all the drugs the mother was taking, was really a "breatharian", someone who can live on "air alone", and the sister, when confronted with this child abuse, suggested to me that "it is meant to be, it is all a part of Love and Light" - I told her that even though there are very private Soul contracts for experience and growth, that when we are confronted with violence to a child, we call social services, which I did promptly, because we do have wills of our own and maybe God or Love was showing us that abuse for a reason? She ignored me.) This then becomes even more shocking when "psychics" claim that we do not have to consider the psychological and chemical conditions of the "new children" because their "more advanced DNA can handle it". This is military-grade "new age" and intellectual propaganda attempting, as ever, to insinuate itself into the vital communication between Man and his parents, Man and his environment through feelings and feeling-informed critical thought that, when healthy, would never dream of disregarding their child as a human being and not as some "new age" spiritual robot (in the name of a "new human racial class" - psychotics are robotic about emotions, emotional bio-robots) immune to poison. "New Age" jargon actually conforms with ancient insinuations into human brain function and communication with Nature and even with our ancestral wisdom, and our own children, our children with us (through proper living conditions in continuity with our pristine origins), suggesting that we do not need to change the way we live, all of creation is actually going to change to accommodate toxic human living conditions (with "more spiritual (read psychotic) people") the same way that a brain becomes psychotic to accommodate psychotic living conditions as a child. The only difference is that, through the "new age" propaganda which seems to make people believe in a fairly narrow and in many ways racist (against all Mankind) vision of the future not so unlike any fundamentalist cult or religion, this is being called "spiritual" even as it rubs against the grain of existence or spirit itself, against all natural logic. But this is what military-grade "new age" propaganda is for - to get people to so accept (as a form of self-soothing and personal social acceptance - for the psychology is well understood by those in charge of "psychological operations") so many kinds of fantastical distortions of logic that they themselves become less logical, changing their whole emotional thermostat for what is logical or not through yet another extension of trauma-based "education" in league with any Dark Age religion.

It is in the best interest of the military (which does a lot more than drop bombs on other countries) for everyone to be as psychotic as possible, something even they know is next to impossible, given the power of the human Soul, that of an energy beyond all the weapons in the World, the energy of loving kindness, which is why so many hundreds of billions of dollars is spent on it, that of our own labour and mental energy!

This is nothing less than an attempt to change how human beings think of human beings in terms that actually detract from treating human beings as human beings. And it doesn't require as much effort at one might think, for psychotic human beings (or inflammations of the human brain from living conditions unfit for a human being) generally feel more mollified than not by identifying themselves and others with capacities or mythologies of identity and heroic endurance for which feelings are irrelevant (see all military-grade forms of popular cinema). You cannot get a better human existence (only a more enslaved one) by imposing the effect upon the cause, "DNA sequencing or evolution" upon how people think and feel and live, a statement that goes for the "new age" as a whole, that of imposing a critical thought-numbing "spiritual fantasy" upon Life (and our children, every generation of whom are genetically whole cosmic angels until we impose "they are fine, just look at them or their DNA" - the long term effect of appropriate living conditions for a child to develop healthy will and conscious spiritual awareness - upon children in otherwise psychotic living conditions, every generation of whom are convinced they will "fix the World" and every generation of whom grow up unhappy and sick because their parents do nothing practical to nurture their emotional well being and stem the tide of emotional and chemical poison that wants to crush their very souls) rather than empowering people to make real (will and feeling-powered) decisions about actual conditions (and real feelings, feelings without which no such psychosis could exist at all and exists to tell us we have to start making better decisions about our social and living and dietary conditions to help our over-worked immune systems) leading to better communication and more frequent contact with the spiritual essence or very being of our individual lives, that alone through which each and every personal expression of the desire for all Happiness realizes its infinite most joyful coordination, dispelling mental superstitions and psychotic tendencies with increasing blood flow to the brain, by increasing the conscious capacity of the brain beyond that of the mind-numbing onslaught of either secular or "new age" dogmas and psychological propaganda, combined with all the other emotional and chemical toxins with which a human infant is faced at every level of material wealth and often the more so the more the material wealth or "status".

What Mother Earth most observably needs, as with every situation on Earth, is an open human heart. Nature always aims to encourage this. Man craves this intuitively and the deeps of the human mind clearly wish to say what we may, at this point in our history, otherwise lack the conscious capacity or emotionally-based mental development to articulate. We and all children already have divine DNA. However, if we close our hearts, this will effect how our brains function, since our hearts inform our brains. And any fear-based perspective will limit, in turn, the range of sequencing of our DNA, DNA that connects to the functionality and fulfillment of every celestial system and meridian of Nature and the Universe. In attempting to place their stamp of "spiritual know-how" onto the crop circles and every other dimension of human development "new age experts" tend to play down, amidst all the specialty "spiritual jargon" the very essence of the issue, becoming just another expression of the problem through the aggressive delusions of self-importance they grant themselves and one another, those in an ever more exclusive class of "spiritually advanced beings", missing out on the very real possibility that the crop circles depicting human DNA sequencing are not depicting how our DNA "will be" but how it already is.

Imagine, for a moment (and you are given a lot to imagine in our World today), imagine for a moment that your feelings are how you "read" not only your DNA but much deeper invisible codes as to your whole vital place in Nature and creation, feelings every aspect of Life aims to nurture for the sake of its own Life, as we can perhaps more observably determine today than in any other time on Earth.

Now imagine that someone puts a contract before you, a contract that will determine every aspect of your existence. Imagine that that someone, a "scientific or new age guru", tells you that most of that contract is in the "fine print", the "fine print of DNA" that "only they can read".

And so imagine that you are told you have to depend on them to tell you what it actually says and what it actually means for you and your children. Would you sign it? Would you, as Man, as a male or female human being of any age, actually sign that contract?

For this is what you are doing when you accept without any critical thought, without even consulting your feelings, whatever either scientific Darwinian or "new age" gurus and self-proclaimed priests (or their trauma-based mind controlled slaves) say is the "fine print" of human DNA as though the most refined codes of the Soul upon which your whole existence and place in Life were based.

You were given everything from the beginning. Any indication otherwise is nonsense and is only meant to steer you away from the vital value of your place in creation, something dark dogmas have been attempting to and always need to find new ways to attempt for thousands of years, for the truth of the pristine Dream already set up for Man will always surface from its invincible reaches within the human heart and Soul.

The fact is the "new age" is a repository for both ancient tendencies toward prejudice (often toward our own species) by a malnourished, weakened and highly suggestible and superstitious human mind as well as the ever new methods used to steer human beings away from the truth - that we can live in a World of peace and everyone is our brother and sister.

The military-grade "new age" propaganda, which has moved heavily into the publishing industry over the last fifty years or so, plays upon the understandable vulnerability and desire of people, already disposed, due to trauma of air, food, water and social situation, to magical thinking and other control-based coping mechanisms. This bears out with my observations of dozens and dozens of "healers" over the last twenty years of my life. Being a psychic in any way is no guarantee of mental health or even sanity. And yet this is a presumption many psychics enjoy, much to the violent detriment of their clientele, many of whom are disposed through traumatic childhoods to think this helpful and even miraculously so.

One woman I remember clearly, who called herself a "spiritual counsellor" (to distinguish herself from actually trained counsellors, a distinction highly vaunted by the fairly non-existent criteria for safe and effective methodology on the part of any "new age" healer [if one is a "spiritual doctor" can one perform open heart surgery without any medical training? one psychotic I knew said that whenever they were hurting someone it was because they were performing "psychic surgery" upon them] - because it is really about control (an understandable need in itself, but when you start selling such services for money one gets into some very unethical territory but for, again, magical thinking)), this "spiritual counsellor" claimed in front of a group of people that she came from an alcoholic family. My ears pricked up.

She claimed that she was the "only one" in her family that had managed to cope successfully with alcoholism (since no one, if you know anything about this disease, copes with alcoholism, although children of alcoholics are some of most inclined to think that they have "coped with it" and, in turn, the most often unsympathetic to other children of abuse). My ears pricked up even more. She felt that she had simply "magically" (through her own spiritual talents) learned at a young age to "deal with" the profoundly disturbing issues involved with family disease of any kind, as I well know.

And so I observed. And this is what I observed, nothing really new to me, that when this "spiritual counsellor" (who charged for her services) was given the opportunity to witness, as with I, a terrifically violent attack by one woman (a "new age psychotic") upon another who was doing nothing wrong or out of the ordinary, she said to the woman who was attacked, "you should learn to be more understanding" or words to that effect. She blamed the woman attacked for having caused the attack and not being "flexible enough". I have had other psychotics use those exact words on me when I took exception to violence of any kind. My contention is that traumatically-hindered brain development (and the capacity to process emotions or indeed even deal with emotions as anything but a disease, one's own or that of one's victims or clients, whatever the case may be), psychosis, is always aggressive by nature. Any diminished capacity to process emotions will always be aggressive by nature.

And what had this innocent woman done? She had published online what may well be a vital contribution to the literature on human psychology, a paper suggesting that so-called psychic people who felt a greater than average need or desire to identify the emotions of others (self-proclaimed empaths and the like - not empathetic people, "empaths" - there is a difference, believe me) did so according, in fact, to some relevance to themselves. It is interesting to note that psychotics often re-arrange words and word meanings to confer talents upon themselves for which they otherwise lack all normal human capacity - this is just another shape of the alcoholic-type personality (and the "new age") that must turn words and meanings upside down as in "you have this emotion but really I have this emotion" "you are not OK but really I am not OK".

This is going to sound really strange but it is really worth exploring to see the extent to which psychosis in our society has gone. In their own words an "empath" (what sounds like the extreme version of a "light worker") can sense the emotions of others but need not relate to that emotion with their own emotions (that is, they need not be able to "empathize" with them). Such emotions do not belong to them in any way. They are more like a robot who senses emotions. One psychotic whose feelings I inadvertently triggered (I myself had published a paper about the role of feeling in human existence) actually asked me to prove that "you are not a robot", meaning "I am a human and you are a robot, but really I am a robot and you are a human" in the psychotic script of pathological tension-release (this tension is created by brains that cannot process emotions, psychotic brains) through unprovoked aggression and social malfeasance. If they do not know they are "empaths" they may come to believe these emotions belong to them or that they have to relate to them in some way (like a normal human being), even though they cannot hope to process them since they are not "their emotions" - in this regard the emotions of others can be like a disease to them, invading their highly sensitive minds. Unfortunately, their own definition of an empath dovetails with that of a psychotic, who cannot process emotions due to developmental inflammation of the brain (that treats and causes the immune system to treat emotions like a disease) and personality, a brain shaped into a silent scream that in fact speaks volumes to their victims. In fact, most if not all empaths I have met come from severe trauma, some from military battle conditions, which are on the order of any traumatic family, as any child of such knows all too well. Empaths I have spoken to enjoy such "powers" as being able to control the minds of others and know what someone feels before they do. In other words, this is just a special case of a psychosis based in very real emotional trauma adopting a "special talent" in order to associate one's coping mechanism with a special ability, one that, in the above case, led a group of self-proclaimed empaths (one a self-proclaimed "spiritual counsellor") to commit gang emotional rape with no more provocation than the mere suggestion that emotions they could sense might have some relevance to them, an ingenious form of remedial treatment for psychosis, though it has no known cure that I am aware of. And then this "spiritual counsellor" had only one response to this, one a lot of victims of domestic violence will know all too well - "it is all your own fault".

This may sound very strange to many people. It is. But it is also normal for a psychotic. To a psychotic, they are "fully responsible/to blame" for any trauma ever incurred upon them by their family of origin. Every child does this to cope with the much larger trauma than any other trauma that their parents might not Love them, since traumatic actions are not Loving actions and a child cannot begin to understand this without blaming themselves, in order to take compulsive and reflexive age-appropriate control of that which is totally out of their control and, shockingly enough, has "nothing to do with them". Counsellors still tell people this today, that their child abuse had "nothing to do with them". That is itself a form of violence. In a sane family, everything should have to do with considering a child as a child. Someone who thinks anything in a family, much less violence, has or should have "nothing to do" with a child are themselves in trauma-based mental pathology and should not be counselling anyone. Everything in a home should have everything to do with caring for any child in that home and appropriately considering their feelings for the sake of all Life on Earth. Motherhood has been called the hardest job. It is, in my opinion, also the most important one.

The thing is, it is very easy to believe that our methods of coping with pain are the same as our methods for dealing with pain.

To a psychotic, this is even more extreme. By making everything their "full responsibility" they no longer need to wonder as to how anyone feels about them or their behaviour - they don't even have to wonder at their own feelings or anyone else's since this highly refined form of self-immolation effectively neutralizes any role any traumatic emotion (or anyone else's traumatic emotion) need have in the proper formation or reformation of their brain pathology, which is pathologically inflamed.

The result is they feel very in control and even more capable than not to help others "deal with their emotions". Psychotics often over-identify with roles and particularly caretaking roles. The military-grade "new age" plays to this. It is as though they have lost the capacity to see an oncoming bus about to hit them or anyone and but to feel "in control" over any emotions that might suggest anything but that this is "normal". They have attained to what is called a delusion of grandeur common to post-traumatic brain pathology.

However, since they are "to blame in order to be in normal control" for anything that has happened to them, so do they think that everyone else is, too. Such a parent, when their child comes to them crying, having been bullied at school, will ask their child what "did you do to make them hit you?" The bullying is "about them" but not in the sense of taking reasonable account of how anyone may feel about being harmed in this way. It is only "about them" to the extent that they are to blame for it, teaching them how to "be in control" of themselves and everyone else - a psychotic. Most if not all "new age" healing dynamics involve one person who is in "total control" of the "healing". The lady who wrote "Hands of Light" would regularly interfere in the energy system of vulnerable people (with the help of spirits of unknown origins) and then report that any negative result was "their own fault" for going back to their "old ways". She took absolutely no responsible consideration that she did not herself possess enough understanding of the infinite complexity of all learning and disease on the Soul level. This showed a clear hostility or mental aggression (again, diminished brain development and thus emotional empathy) toward her clients, something to which "new age healers" are more disposed than not by virtue of the very roles with which they most seek and need to identify themselves, disqualifying themselves by any normal socially-appropriate standards of professional conduct at the very same time.

Such people will often be distinguished further by a "light in the eyes". This is very misleading. People with a noticeable light in their eyes are usually psychotics. The light is a product of excess organ heat or "fire" caused by inflammation, usually including that of the brain, of an as though enraged brain. It is the light of pathological rage response to shock and trauma, the "warmth" of a nuclear bomb and not a campfire. I have seen this light a lot in drug addicts but also among many whose characters I came to know personally in various "new age" communities. This excess light is in bold distinction to the light of genuine sane human warmth, but may be why, fittingly enough, "new age" people are so fond of calling themselves "light workers", since much of that work, as I have seen, much to my cost, is that of pathological rage-based incompetence, combined with a shocking lack of any interest in gaining any competence beyond the non-existent standards of practice set for the "spiritually gifted" "new age healer", as though, since the Earth is in a state of "spiritual emergency", such standards are superfluous at best rather than more necessary than ever in a complete distortion of basic human ethical reasoning.

And that is just one example of "new age" healing. For if this were not part of a much larger pattern, I would not be writing this now. And add to this that most people who go to a "new age healer" as to many psychiatrists, chiropractors and the like, are probably so vulnerable that they may not complain about or even apprehend any undue aggression. There are always plenty of very hurt even psychotic people who will seek the "help" of the most developmentally under-qualified "professionals" in every healing field so as to effectively avoid any genuine growth in the name, instead, of total emotional control, a reflexive pathological adaptation to psychotic trauma as a child.

In general, most "new age" healing arts have no interest in discussing feelings or even in hearing much about the experience of their clients save to "rid them of their uncomfortable feelings" or "tell them what their feelings are". There is nothing new about the "new age". Feelings are treated like a disease, which is how psychosis treats feelings that are difficult to process. It says, "I don't have to process them. All I have to do is make them go away by sending them 'into the light'".

I have had more than one "new age healer" tell me that I would be a better person if I "swallowed my feelings". And, further, that I could be a healer, too, but only if I learned to "swallow my feelings" - otherwise (are you ready for this?) you might "hurt someone".

You have to spare some critical thought for anyone attracted to a "profession" founded on magical thinking that has no evident standards or criteria for safety or effectiveness.

And that would be enough except for the fact that in getting people to accept illogical and highly improbable concepts of Life and Man's place in Life lowers their critical thinking skills even more. This stuff is military-grade.

Every new generation needs to be corralled. Through one crisis or another, through one dogma or another, human beings are controlled and prevented from gaining levels of feeling-informed brain development and critical thought capable of a safer and saner way of Life, the safer and saner conditions for human existence being cried out for by every pathological inflammation of the human brain (which has no immune system to deal with the inundation by every kind of psychological and chemical poison it faces from infancy), psychosis.

The "new age" is just such a system, I would argue, of corraling people not already corralled by other dogmas, people flattered and vulnerable, due to trauma, to any dogma that makes them feel in control and special. These can be healthy feelings to have. However, where are you getting them and under what conditions? Do these conditions withstand scrutiny?

Just the other day a friend of mine, an actual trained counsellor, told me, in frustration, that they cannot understand their sister because she, the sister, is convinced that the Pleiadians ("advanced spiritual beings" - they always are - from the constellation of the Pleiades who have taken a great even parental interest in helping the so often portrayed as helpless human race) run the World. These beliefs are mixed in with vortexes in Nature that are more beneficial in certain places - which I personally believe. However, it undermines valid, aboriginal-based, perceptions of a truly wondrous Earth when they are mixed in with military-grade psycho-spiritual and intellectual propaganda. What eludes most "new age" would-be gurus, however, is something so awe-inspiring as the pyramids all over the World could have been made by human beings probably a good deal more developed than they and those pyramids could have divine capacities based upon encouraging contact between the human brain and the blissful essence or prana of the mind and all Life, that upon which any truly Life-enhancing learning and growth is based in a sane learning and cultural environment, not through titillating "new age" beliefs that undermine one's own sense of logic and play upon trauma-based mental development in the name of "being a healer" and getting attention from aliens that I didn't get from my parents, to gain the social status of past "incarnations", now of whom are ever boot-lickers but always "priests and priestesses" from Atlantis and Egypt. Me, I am interested in restoring a culture that provides the sufficient conditions for people to maintain from birth the bliss and vital place in all of Nature of their God-bestowed feelings and creative intelligence, that of a true god or goddess, a Man beyond all need for such pulp fiction superstitions, however real I believe the culture if not "new age" descriptions of Atlantis to be.

What also shocks me about the "new age" is how ready so many "light workers" are to be boarded onto extraterrestrial "motherships" and taken away whilst all other human beings (as much as half of us being consigned to "homegrown morons" with no "alien/super-spiritual DNA" those the "more spiritual" people put up with) are left to experience the destruction of the planet/WWIII with all the other "unbelievers" summarily consigned to some such similar hellish fate (and no lower rung on the spiritual food-chain) by every other religion on Earth.

Are we really this gullible?

And, if so, this is more than a critique. This is a moral obligation to correctly assess the state of the human mind and get to the cause of this madness. In support of this statement, I would note that this essay has already distinguished itself by reaching the top five viewed writings on this website within less than 24 hours.

Because another interesting quality of "new age healers" or "new age" people in general is that any "heightened psychic sensitivity" (as much a symptom of trauma as anything else) whatsoever is automatically assumed to be one that can be used with all due safety, discretion and effectiveness upon anyone in any state of illness, grief or vulnerability.

This is, of course, sheer madness, the madness of an inflamed brain and personality. On top of which "new agers" are religiously uninterested, to a person (in my experience) in any feedback about their "healing abilities". "It works." That is that. If it doesn't work for you or hurts you (which it is a form of violence, essentially, a vastly inappropriate and unsound psychotic subterfuge with which to gain invasive access to the mind, emotions and body of a highly complex human spiritual and physical energy system few if any people on Earth today even remotely understand), then that is just because you are not "spiritual enough" or "don't believe" or "have enough faith". I have personally heard all of these, usually to describe people other than myself, myself being given some kind of honorary status as "spiritual" by people I greatly pity, very sick people, indeed, people that believe that in order to be a whole human being you have to become something "more than human" a "light worker" or a "star child". God created Man and gave the miracle of Life to Man. No sane person should need any other miracle or racial designation. It is that simple. We may want other ways to help us become enlightened or, really, back to normal human beings as in the beginning. But it is not fair to invasively impose those beliefs on others for money, which is what all "new age" healing and much other healing is, healing, in contrast to the whole purpose of healing, that is really only there to benefit the psychotic compulsions of the "new age healer" who is "doing you a favour". Such "new age" healers are themselves honorary members of the military quest for total human domination. One doctor invited a dozen or more "new age healers" to a healing and asked them to sit quietly and watch. This doctor reported drastically lower indications normal to his healing practice and concluded that the "new age healers"/psychotics were impeding the healing. When he asked them if they were doing anything, they enthusiastically responded, "Yes. We were sending our light". Take careful note of what this 'light' really is - violent psychotic self-delusions of grandeur. None of these "professional new age healers" had been asked or invited to send or direct any energy at this patient. And what "help" they did try to give actually greatly impeded if not fundamentally blocked all genuine healing. Please take note of this if you are thinking of bringing your serious health concerns to any "new age healer". In my experience, invasive intrusions by the psychotic disposition of healers of all kinds was, for me, as or more sickening to me than any of the major complaints that caused me to seek their help in the first place. Humans are so sick today, virtually nobody should be given invasive access to the energy system of anyone except under the most dire necessity.

There are, as such, no standard or criteria for the safety or effectiveness of any "new age" healing modality. This in itself should be a red flag to any reasonably sane human being. And the fact that it is not a red flag to most "new age healers" gives no small indication of their psychotic state of mind. They are in this for themselves and not for anyone else, though they will claim otherwise quite sincerely. They need to "be a healer" like they need to "control their own pain", a psychotic compulsion that is based, truly enough, on the emotional pain and reflex actions of a child who has not been treated the way a child should be treated and whose feelings have not been considered the way a child's feelings should be considered, plain and simple and as profoundly universal as these abject conditions are for most all human beings today.

Sadly, "new age healers" could relate to their "patients" on a much more human level if they dared to have the courage to do so.

For the fact is they have already mostly "left the Earth".

This might explain the mystery I started to unravel a few paragraphs back, that as to why "new agers" are so comfortable with the idea of boarding space ships to the "fifth dimension" or witness the mass deaths of all the people who have not "turned on" (as in the sixties) their "higher DNA" (dogma around DNA is so prevalent in every quarter) that I wonder how any reasonably sane human being could contemplate such an "inevitability" without any signs of stress, that of a transformation on the order of death itself. The answer is that their minds are already froze into a highly stressed state that they cannot feel. This is the same reasoning as to why people who use street drugs are not anxious about what the drugs might do to them. Because they are already under so much stress. It is only that this stress is coded into the very development of their brain, brains "as though enraged".

The military-grade "new age" propaganda (whose purpose is to get the brain to accept illogical premises and thus become itself less logical or "dumbed down") is very good at catering to a wide array of human whims and fantasies and needs for self-soothing. Hell, it has helped lead people into the very traumatic family and social conditions that most people spend their lives trying to soothe and heal.

As such, all kinds of street drugs are advocated on the same shelf as "The Pleiadian Agenda" (an oddly truthful title), drugs alternately treated as common as household herbs fit for any child's breakfast table (except to "squares" like me) or shamanic tools for higher and more purified spiritual power and development. You yourself can become a "galactic shaman" with a book on DMT and the courage to "transcend" this dimension in an endless array of "parallel universes" with a "galactic politics" that would rival the most iniquitous Biblical allegory.

The extent to which the CIA et al will go to get people to molest their own brains is rivaled only by the extent to which "new age" "galactic travelers" will go to help them. This is perhaps one of many reasons why there are rarely any well marketed published materials on the negative and Life-altering side effects of marijuana, much less DMT or peyote, one dosage of which can greatly distort brain waves for years to come and whose negative effects are often exponentially cumulative from dose to dose, a known studied medical quality of THC or marijuana listed in any reputable drug manual.

Real Shamans take generations to become equipped and qualified to be a shaman or medicine person. This is not just because the amount you have to learn is prodigious. This is also for two main other reason that elude most "new age healers".

These are that the capacity to heal can only be truly effective if you yourself are clear. One "new age healer" I met said they knew is and so never "went into bars" or "anywhere there was "negative energy" like "smoking".

This would be like saying that sludge from a polluted river is clean enough to drink if it never goes into a bar and betrays their profoundly limited concept of their relationship to the massively violent conditions of the World today, much less their lifelong effect upon them. This same person related to me that many people on the ground around the crop circles (which I personally Love as human co-creations with Nature and the Planetary Mind) are in fact alcoholics and drug addicts, she herself an "abductee" by "the greys" who "did all kinds of experiments upon her". Based upon my personal experience, I believe her to have been sexually abused. This is not great magical power on my part. Most people can read the body language of anyone's childhood if they choose to. This was a woman advertising "healing shamanic services" who could not, mark my words, even look me in the eyes.

Another main reason it takes so long to become a qualified shaman in ancient cultures is because you have, as did one Master I knew, to start from birth. And this is because, on top of all the training necessary, the potential shaman has to be helped to deal with, get through and remain safe from the violent conditions of the World into which most of us are born, in order to even hope, whatever their training may be, to be able to do more good than harm to those they aim to heal.

Add to this that, in the past, the entire culture acted as a filter for all the negative and violent influences in the World. Does this sound like something that can be achieved by reading a book or attending a weekend "new age" workshop? You could just as soon learn to steer a rocket ship to the Moon on the weekend. And the effects are just as disastrous.

Anyone, for instance, can do "pranic healing" or "laying on of hands". Everyone is born with this ability as surely as you are born spiritual as you are existing (for spirit is existence, being). You do not need a fancy "brochure-perfect" initiation by a "Reiki Master" (costing hundreds or thousands of dollars) waving their hands in "special patterns" to be able to direct Life energy or prana. The question is, "Should you attempt pranic or Reiki healing on someone, anyone?" And this is a question that opens up a whole host of ethical and logical considerations that most people disposed to "new age" thought are not disposed to so much as take any interest in, having learned to identify themselves with "being a healer" or a "light worker" (targeted as they are by military-grade propaganda that knows such people want to feel powerful and spiritual and in control while lacking and even gaining greater diminished capacity as such to take an ethical socially-appropriate much less qualified interest in the needs and feelings of others), someone who is, by nature, infallible (because they are "psychic" or "spiritual") with respect to the highly personal needs and experiences of a given individual human Soul, that of a supremely personal and private conversation between them and God that very few people on Earth are qualified or pure enough to insinuate themselves into, even when invited.

These are charlatans or confidence tricksters. And, like most confidence tricksters, they really believe what they say, only they have been deceived so well themselves. Even our parents are charlatans to the military World at large, so how is any child to know any better?

As one truly competent Master (a Doctor of several healing arts and sciences) told me, having been trained himself since childhood, it is probably best, and very helpful as is, to simply picture someone getting better or being well, without any invasion of their energy system with our mostly adolescent levels of emotional and sexual and mental development. Any other more invasive treatment, however well-meaning (and it almost always is), is more harmful than helpful to both the practitioner and the victim/client.

And yet, people love the special albeit fictional spiritual "status" it confers upon them to be able to heal animals and people by touch, though how far this healing really goes (versus how harmful it is) is a question that remains unanswered and, most conveniently for all concerned, unanswerable. It happens to me all the time, anytime someone I know says they have "healing abilities", I notice signs of psychotic aggression and narcissism, as well as pathological blindness to such.

And yet just wishing or picturing someone well calls forth so much of the force and prana of the cosmos (that of the total most joyful coordination of all shapes and expressions of creative intelligence and eternal Life and Soul, the most splendid divine Dream of a World every child rightly feels at birth shall always be meant for a child) as lay beyond all human comprehension.

The alternating hostility (and pathological blindness to hostility and unprovoked aggression) and delusions of grandeur I have seen in every "new age" healer I have ever gone to is truly as "out of this World" as the "new age" claims to be.

They have succeeded in waking me up to a truly new World. For it is because I do believe a truly new age is and will continue to be upon us for the next several thousand years, that which would, with all due grace of God and Man and Nature alike, help to open us up to a vast natural inheritance (a power that the military knows we have as Souls), that I cannot with all due respect for my fellow man refer to the "new age" in any other way but with quotations, as it is a special case or "new age" of military-grade social, psycho-spiritual and intellectual propaganda used to deflect, as always, Man from his real power and the sweetest eternal truth of how all of Life comes about - and what for, a truly wondrous World that, unlike the "new age", keys into and helps coordinate in a truly Life-orienting fashion the priorities and values of the human brain.

For, mark my words, the self-proclaimed high priests of every respective society on Earth know that we did not descend from apes and that the Theory of Evolution is, for the most part, a total crock, that our ancient land-based ecstatic human existence (and divine natural inheritance) has been colonized by a modern or technocratic way of Life the most perilous in all of human history, a way of Life we routinely send our children away to foreign lands to murder and die for, so effective has been the occupation by way of severely dimming the human speed of thought far beneath that of the self-proclaimed high priests, human beings who have led us down a path of almost complete atrophy of the human mind and imagination, much to the peril of the health of all people on Earth.

And then there is the invincibility of the dawn.

To author Edwin Bekker:

Good on you, E

This is truly groundbreaking, and not just in the sense of "doing or saying something new" but also in opening up a new (and perhaps ancient) field of awareness for yourself at such an honest emotional level as raises the bar for truth in fiction, in feeling, feelings, I agree with you, being the precipitous factor in any truthful story, fictional or not.

A factor of most people's experience, though one little spoken of, perhaps because it is so shockingly prevalent, so much so that it has achieved a kind of de facto (illegitimate leadership of its) necessity in our cultures, is the tendency for many if not most people to act or talk in ways in complete seeming contradiction to their professed values or character under the influence of various conditions, such as under stress, under the influence of money or sex (which I believe alter and diminish the functioning of the human brain) or drugs or alcohol, or even just under the influence of other "psychotics".

That is, in a culture and in an education system that does not nurture one's emotional being and will, as a full human being, as the primary means of every other kind of learning about any subject of human existence, but instead imposes such learning in violation of one's emotional rhythms and spirit, one's mind cannot attain to a correct orientation of priorities and values toward Life. One's education will to a degree always conflict with and thus be limited by the very complex of cosmic energies and feelings that were meant to accelerate all truly Life-enhancing whole brain human emotional growth, what I call the emotional brain.

I believe all mental illness and, in particular, depression is actually an attempt by the brain to develop a greater nutrient-rich, particle-rich access to and processing of emotions from the deepest level of the mind and soul, the feelings and invisible energies that make up a human being and which are in vital correspondence or try to be with every aspect of the living intelligence around and within us.

Historically, it was and is through this kind of communication that we grew more nutrient-rich food which, in turn, nourished proper and sufficient human brain development as well as proper coordination between the invisible energies of Man (Man's spirit or soul) and the physical body, which in turn nurtures every other kind of harmonic or most joyful coordination with and correspondence between Man and Woman or Mankind with Mankind.

We can see the veracity of this proposal in the disastrous absence of its basic criteria today, that of the absence of a culture, as in the past we seem to have been trained to forget, that nurtures from birth, as a priority, the emotional being and whims of will of a child, as well as contact with home-grown food and trees.

As such, it is a matter of great urgency for most people, whether they know it consciously or not, to form higher levels of understanding and communication, for their own sake and that of their children, with the laws of Nature, the desires of the soul and means to articulate those desires in ways that are more in accord than not with patterns of creation already set up for the most harmonic correspondence between Man and Man and Man and Nature, in terms of the deeper and, whence deeper, greater speed, power, precision, effectiveness and purity of our feelings and thoughts, feelings and thoughts with which any child can master any other subject known to Man, provided it serves their private passion for Life-enhancing activity, Happiness for themselves which attains to measures, at its purest essence, of Happiness for everyone else, all other Life.

There is no artificial system one could impose upon a child that could match the perfection of Man's contact and the contact between a child's emotional being and Nature; there is no system possible but that of the natural rhythms of a child's own emotional being in infinite correspondence with Nature (with the rhythms and living images of the seasons, the leaves, and every small and large creature and living system in existence, each of that perfect unbounded essence without contact with the perfection of which (Man's own perfection - one cannot become wealthy without being around wealth, for the same reason) a child cannot reach their own perfect sense of their most commanding and vital place in all of creation) and the Universe far and away beyond any artificial or imposed "system of education", none of which has ever, clearly, provided a truly correct or Life-enhancing orientation of priorities and values for the human brain, consigning people to ways of Life in vast tension-ridden contradiction to their own emotional being and that of all their children to come. Replacing this natural system, that of a child's own most profound emotional rhythms and spirit in vast correspondence with every living everlasting perfect thought in creation, that of the river of everlasting Life passing through all the Earth, a boundless myriad of unfolding genius and perfection truly fit for the genius of a child, with that of the artificial and death-obsessed (death-inducing) productions of Man the psychotic can only create hopelessness for a child, most of whom finally surrender to the possibility, despite all their born reason, that their place in Nature is really not all that important after all, thereby surrendering to a level of "education" about as far from that of a whole human being as learning to roll a wheel down a street is from driving a car.

This just makes logical sense, if you think about it.

What I am saying is that your book touches chords with me, and chords that did not take very long to manifest in my experience, particularly last night.

Lucy had some family over. She was stressed about her daughter and had spent 5 hours cooking a meal for 6 people after a very long 2 weeks at work.

Under the effects of this stress and whatever other urgencies or urges lay dormant within her, perhaps in her repeated statements and profusions of angst regarding "finding a man" (on top of which the other forms of sexism I told you about - none of her sisters is with anyone either, I think), she chose to articulate 2 or 3 clearly demeaning statements to me in front of the guests, all females.

The first was in a reply to a statement or confession I volunteered regarding the quality of my driving when I first got my driver's license, that I ran several stop signs and was therefore, in my opinion, driving in a "death - defying manner".

Lucy laughed at once. Shook her head and exclaimed, "Rayn, I have only known you a little while but I would NOT describe anything about you as "death - defying"".

End of that discussion.

I felt a slight irk but mostly I found it a part of her quirky sense of humour and laughed it off.

Later the adults (all females but me) were gathered around the living room table playing with her "tarot" cards.

It came to my turn and I turned over a row of cards that signified the element of fire.

Lucy piped up by exclaiming, this time, that "Rayn, one thing you definitely do NOT have is fire" "I don't know what those cards could be saying." Can you imagine the reaction if I, in turn, on spying of Lucy's cards containing the figure of a slender woman, exclaimed "Lucy, that card couldn't have anything to do with you because that woman is thin!" And if I said that, would one think I was correct in assessing some deficiency or diminished capacity in Lucy or rather than I was expressing some no small (ironically, excess heat or fire-related trauma-based pathological inflammation of the brain) diminished capacity or unmet need on my own part, included with which were a definite diminished capacity to process my own emotions enough to take a socially-appropriate and ethically-appropriate interest in the feelings and needs of others?

Her sister looked at her and said quickly, embarrassed, "Lucy, I don't think you should be saying that", which Lucy summarily ignored and shrugged off.

I muttered something about "sure, its Okay (which it was not) I am not a very fiery guy". And we moved on. Then Gina exclaimed that she wanted to turn another card (which she had not done for the other two previous guests, women) to "see if there is a WOMAN in Rayn's future", which she proceeded to do and got one that satisfied her and the rest, for everyone laughed.

At this point, I just wanted to be polite. (Yes I catch your knowing smile and I don't take any offense)

So I did. I wasn't even angry. Frankly, I am used to this behaviour from alcoholics or children of alcoholics, which Lucy and her sister are, children of alcoholics and of an alcoholic or psychotic culture.

Her and her sisters are very "masculinized", very shoot from the hip. At one point in the dinner discussion, Kathy (another roommate) and Lucy's sister (who share an occupation in health care) began to chat about their work and Lucy immediately cranked up and said "I KNEW you two would GO ON about that", right after which both women stopped talking and changed the subject. This was done in the manner of a "joke" as Lucy and her sister seem to do most things related to how they feel - it is "all a joke", which I find a sign of a psychotic coping mechanism, using jokes to express and also at the expense of their own feelings and that of others - the classic alcoholic "script".

Add to this that, that day, I had been sensing something a bit aggressive in the air, even though I had no intellectual sense that this was warranted.

As you might expect, the day unfolded in such a way as to confirm my suspicions.

But I don't think the aggression is conscious. And I don't know if this makes it better or worse, more or less shocking. They have learned to make jokes to express and at the expense of their own feelings and those of others.

Again, this kind of behaviour does not correspond with Lucy's professed values about mutual respect.

The fact that her sister, also a psychotic, was embarrassed for me (or for herself perhaps) is no small indication of the demeaning nature of Lucy's remarks to me, coming as they do on a day when she waxed on, again, about "how men are" "men like to eat" and so forth.

These are the kinds of generalizations I have always known came from passive aggression. They are trauma-based and have no real logic.

Aggression is never logical, a telltale sign. And the effects of aggression on the brain is an aggressive (under developed brain capacity to process and gain the Life-enhancing benefits of one's own emotional "Motherland") brain. This is why I believe so much of the illogic of the "new age" and "intellectual" world is actually catering to and encouraging illogical and aggressive mindsets. All "new age" psychics and the like I have EVER met were engaged in violation amidst indulging their "psychic sensitivities" and beliefs. Lack of emotional nourishment can make the brain illogically aggressive and aggressively illogical. Also, acceptance of aggressively illogical concepts can make one less interesting in considering the information from one's deeper emotions - this is the essence of any cult, of which any religion and bare proof of.

So I thought you might not be terribly averse to hearing about my recent experiences and thoughts on the matter.

It is a wide social issue that starts with our education (or not) as the case may be, since real education to me nurtures emotional well being and autonomy as a priority. This is why, in today's systems of education, even if someone excels at school, they can never really attain to a truly whole brain and truly Life-enhancing global perspective on Life, which might explain why so many doctors and scientists work in fields of study that run so converse to human ethics and health while consciously professing to want to help.

A psychotic society is no accident of history. We are training our society to be psychotic. We put effort into it. And I think we have been led into it by private interests who can make more profit and gain greater security for their revenue streams by, among other things, diminishing the blood flow and conscious capacity of the human brain, and this by primarily violating the emotional being of a child in the name of "education" and being "equipped for the world".

For instance, there are many stories where children left to do as they will who do not take any interest in reading until even twelve years of age and actually, at that point, gain a reading level higher than their contemporaries within the year.

A child does not have to learn the "3 R's" at five years of age, and certainly not every child. Our criteria for a child's intellectual diet were as perverse as that of their so called "proper nutrition".

I for one screamed and cried all day long when first forced to go to preschool, spending all day crying in a room by myself with no adult supervision or interest in my well being.

This began my violent indoctrination into the school "routine" during which time, every day at 12 we were given a glass of milk, whether we wanted milk or not. This is trauma-based mind control. It is nothing else. I did not need to go to school to learn to spell at 4 or 5 years of age. And it was torture for me to leave my family. I used to think that I was an exception in this regard. Now I no longer believe this, only that most people's minds block out the emotional torture to spare them the agony, compounded by that of the betrayal of their parents to such a system of torture in the name of "education".

No matter what "system" of education we are talking about, we are normally talking about giving our children away to another "family of strangers" to "raise us". No one, no matter how passionate or well paid, can ever care for your child the way you will. And no artificially imposed system can ever replace the child-guided rhythms and natural systems (that in tune with their own spirit, their own pathological memories and images of their vital place in every conceivable Happiness of Life since the womb, those of truly prodigious speeds of thought without which the entire Earth sails off as though without Her proper guidance system as much as any nuclear reactor would melt down without a truly well functioning computer) of their own emotional being in vast innocent correspondence with all that of Nature's living systems. And why do people do this, give their children away? So they can work to earn money for a World that will only ever get farther and farther away from the grasp or even interest of their very Soul, whilst their children will long to flee them as well. No matter what system people use, no one grows up happy in any area of society and most marriages become loveless. To keep Love in our lives we have to make ourselves worthy of an Energy, that of Love, that only wishes to support Life-enhancing human creativity. Instead, we focus on finding someone that will fill up our lives as they are, conceiving children out of vain lust that sex and money-induced lower brain function that tells us, hopelessly, that this will make us happy, when it doesn't and, even further, that our children will be able to be happy inundated with the same systems of chemical and psychological poison when they will not and never will be. We rarely consider raising ourselves up to be worthy of our children, attracting a suitable partner by engaging in creating a World fit for a child rather than resorting, contrary to all logic, to making our child "fit for the World" and thus a World fit only for the death of our bodies and Souls but for the miracle of Life itself.

Love like the bees is extremely intelligent. Like a bee will not visit a genetically-modified flower, Love will not visit much less remain with any two people mentally, emotionally and developmentally incapable of creating truly Life-enhancing conditions in the World around them. Our culture can only provide living conditions (though "advanced" and "better than ever with respect to our 'primitive ancestors'") that effectively lobotomize Man compared to our ancestors. Finding a romantic partner, therefore, should be a Lifelong aspiration to that of merely even glimpsing the far horizon of anything truly resembling normal human mental development. These are the kinds of considerations that should occupy the thoughts of anyone looking for a mate and certainly anyone looking for Love to last, a Love Who and That is absolutely necessary, a primary consideration for providing sufficient Life-enhancing childhood conditions, and nothing do to with sexual positions and animal lust, all of which severely diminish the functioning of the human brain even further, disabling one from any reasonable consideration for the feelings and happiness of another, let alone one's own child. Why would Love wish to encourage that? (See "Non-Sexual Conception: A Study In", Page 279 of My Motherland My Child: A Book Of Kin, at lulu.com/rayn)

Hence the world we live in today, one we work for and pay for and even send soldiers (our children) to murder and die for with all the religious superstition and dedication of any Dark Ages sycophant.

It is not logical. And human beings are exposed, in fact, to so many "new age" and "intellectual" streams of utter illogic that the more we accept it the more illogical we ourselves become. This is happening with a military-grade strategic efficiency and a cold and deathly precision.

We have become cultures of the death of the soul, cultures of death given lenses of dead and artificial systems and superstitions about Life that would rival any Dark Ages cloister, an education in dead things deadening to the emotional being of a child, deadening to familial bonds, imagination and speeds of feeling and thought for which Mother Earth is crying. THAT is logical, if we only think about, only think about how a cat purrs under the merest touch from either the physical caress or emotional warmth of Man - so does the Earth need and aim to encourage and nourish the warmth of our very Souls for the sake of all Life. And the high-priests of the military psychological operations know this.

And in that regard, rather than cast a dark pal over the world, rather is illuminated the incredible power of the human spirit nonetheless, that such dark forces and interests constantly require new lies, recycling them like old songs are recycled into new. Such is the immeasurable and very real power of the spirit of our ancestors and of ourselves.

I commend books like yours for opening up these kinds of thoughts.

Your thoughts about women and relationship are right on. Although, the more I think about it, I believe the demeaning tests they (women) dole out may have less to do with nature and more to do with the nature of human emotional "development" today. I don't honestly know. Or, additionally, the demeaning tests are in continuity with a desire to test men one way or the other, and this is the kind of testing to which women have been forced to sink.

Something to think about.

I totally rooted for the narrator. But boy did my experiences yesterday become a little too close for comfort.

Although I have long suspected and hoped otherwise, I must now resign myself that, for good or ill, I live with an alcoholic-type personality and all that means.

Though I must say that Lucy is exceptional in many regards, as children of alcoholics often are. I say that trauma both brings out great strengths and great weaknesses in us, almost to more extremes, one of the reasons why, to compound all the stress of an alcoholic family or family with any substance abuse or violation, children in such a family have such an impossible task communicating honestly about their feelings in all due safety and mutual regard for the magnitude of importance of such a task and how they equally lack all such tools in that regard - their coping systems are not the cure. Most of the time, they are the problem itself biologically mirrored onto the next generation.

Although, now I see how she does everything in a very compulsive fashion and tends to over do everything, though she can never do enough. She even told me that, in her family, you have to "work for reward", "nothing can come easy" taken to the extreme. Here is a person, one of billions, who does not believe she deserves to relax and be happy.

Talk about money effecting the brain. She has become convinced that working 12 hour days will make her happy, even doing so to pay for yet another week of retreat/training in the name of "mental health". She never seems to have any time to herself.

Sorry, I had to sort of blurt things out.

Good Writing!

Best,

Rayn

Anyone interested in Syria specifically and military apparatus in general might benefit from comparing the statements, that there is "A war IN Syria" with the statement that there is "A war ON Syria", the difference between two mere pronouns able to convey no two more distinct fields of meaning and innuendo, one highly fictional, even military-grade, and the other a very truthful narrative with sufficient socially and ethically-appropriate input from actual Syrians, the combined field of comparison providing some means to make determinations about various agendas and interests involved in all of war "ON Syria", war "IN Syria" and the ease with which those in and dependent upon mass Media outlets in Canada, Britain, the U.S. and in the Middle East can be led to believe that U.S. military intervention is to protect them (the Syrian people or any peoples) from attack and not, in fact, an attack upon Syria (and all Mankind, witness our stupefying dependence upon military-grade "weaponized" mass media) entirely.

This opens up and has opened up such a discussion as, I believe, (for all the untold benefit that it may provide for the prevention of root "upstream" social and emotional, even socio-pathological causes of military conflict throughout the World in the future) should and must take place in every public and private place on Earth, in one language or another, in earnest.

Having said that, whenever there is sufficient considerable agitation in society, in Man or Nature, it is bound to find a way to express itself, under whatever pretense - those that need to create or partake in deception for their own private interests will do so, as such, and those interested in the truth of what is actually going on will search out and find that out, as such.

And the end of the day, the violent Life-altering conflict is taking place and Man and Nature suffers incredibly for untold generations.

And so as much as there needs to be a discussion opened up between the field of meaning and innuendo created by a contrast of the two statements, "A war IN Syria" and "A war ON Syria", of which I believe there needs to be such a discussion in every private and public place on Earth, in whatever respective language, there also needs to be a discussion about the kinds of conditions for human existence that lead, to a considerable degree, to levels of agitation in the human mind as in Nature that are bound to express themselves through violent conflict under whatever pretense or array of special and selfish interests.

That is the first thing I wanted to say.

The second is an appeal to everyone to consider what kinds of conditions we are living in if a world wide Media apparatus can, conceivably, convey such a divergent expression of events leading up to and about violent military conflict anywhere in the World, so much so that educated people by the millions can be led to believe that a military attack ON a country is a military "intervention" on behalf of the very innocent people they are actually attacking, killing and maiming whole families of men, women, grandmothers, grandfathers, aunts, uncles and the unborn, men, women and children who have just as much right to non-violation as any of us?

Full as it is with very nice people called to help what could and still can be a very Life-enhancing service, the media, the Media is the Military. Believe me, the people media moguls and top politicians work for are much scarier to them than we are. Can we afford to delude ourselves otherwise? Can millions of victims of murder all over the World? Do you wish to be the emotional and labour-base (depending on where you work, where you bank and what you buy) for a killing machine that eats our children alive, thinking of new and better ways to plug our children full of "disease-preventing" vaccination poisons, "mental health" poisons and poisonous food and violent sex-laden development-hindering images for profit of every kind, that from and for the sickness and weakness of the human mind? You have a mind, use it! These words are not a threat to your existence. They are about a threat to your existence. Snap out of it.

On a related note, since the wider conditions for human existence (including education, medicine, history and religion) are so unfit for human existence, we get a lot of trauma-based inflammation of the human brain, what is also known as excess fire or heat (corresponding with the disease known as alcoholism) - psychosis, as I treat exhaustively in The Victimized Aggressor and Family Alcoholism: A Life Story, each a free download eBook at lulu.com/rayn. A psychotic, often a sadist or psychopath, is not someone who is needing to hurt someone all of the time, nor are they necessarily "evil" or "bad", nor do they often mean to hurt anyone. Their brains simply have developed or under developed in such a way (adapting a psychotic functioning to survive the shock and trauma of family and cultural psychosis) as they simply do not have the capacity to or even see the necessity for consistently sympathizing with the feelings or needs of others in a socially-appropriate or even ethical way all of the time.

How this is relevant to this stage of our discussion is that a psychotic or human with chronic inflammation of an as though enraged brain will typically demonstrate shockingly inconsistent communication skills, times of shockingly diminished capacity to anticipate and sympathize with what other people may need to hear or be informed about for their own well being. Again, they may not mean to hurt anyone. This is just normal to them, and as such they possess a pathologically higher than normal tendency to ridicule people who do not either show their excess (to them, normal) levels of "fire" and "aggression" (not necessarily anger, though it may seem that way to the observer) or those that do not feel properly communicated with in either content or manner. They do not honestly understand why other people might not like being spoken to in a sadistic manner or not being considered enough to be communicated with in a reasonably ethically consistent manner. This is reflected in our current systems of Media and Entertainment, and answers the question as to how so many people could be organized and motivated to provide such a military-grade shocking and abysmal lack of truly Life-enhancing and accurate information, or how many people are disposed not to notice or want to notice this.

A simple example of a psychotic that I knew once involved her changing our plans as to where we were driving one day, without telling me, then making a joke out of the fact that I "didn't know" where we were going, as though I could have read her mind. She actually and sincerely believed that not only was this my error but that it was OK to ridicule me about my own communication skills. She was a child of sexual abuse and alcoholism, as well as a sexually and emotionally abusive culture, our own. The inflamed brain of a psychotic will often perceive their own distorted "values and skills" as deficiencies in others. One psychic spend two hours (I did not pay for this) explaining to me how dealing with violent trauma to my body involved "swallowing all my emotions" to be "more of a Man", something she explained using fanciful "new age" myths and "higher guides". It is curious how every experience I or my friends have had with "new age" psychics involves "new age" psychic violence. More than once psychotics have ridiculed me for not being "fiery enough", while it would be more accurate to say they have excess fire and not me too little. This is just how they perceive things, through an aggressive brain that they believe disposes them to "help" others to attain to what they feel are a set of skills and values that others need acquire for "freedom", the obsession with which they need wholly identify with the caretaking and "expert" roles that they tend to gravitate to rather disqualifying them for any competence in those very roles.

The other day while visiting a friend in the intensive care unit, I witnessed a nurse treating my friend in a totally sadistic manner, accusing her of trying to deceive her nurse because she asked me to get her some water (she had not drank any water for days and could only suck on a Styrofoam popsicle she dipped in water). She forced my friend, in dire agony, to attempt to defend her request to place any moisture in her mouth. I explained this to the nurse who quickly though I suspect insincerely apologized for being "too harsh". The same nurse then returned to my friend, who was in agonizing abdominal pain that, as I well know from experience, no amount of morphine can relieve, only to tell her "I know. I know. We keep giving you medication but you keep complaining you are in pain. You are always complaining." I took the nurse to one side to let her know her gross professional error, as politely as I could, to which she responded that "Oh. Yes I know that. I didn't mean to suggest I did not care." This I believe. She did not mean to at all. She is a sadist. They do not necessarily want to be sadistic. They just are and tend to pity those that think this is unusual. She then became nervous around me and eventually had to invent a reason to ask me to leave the ICU, all in the course of "doing her job", as I was clearly interfering with "her work" as she say it. Psychotics feel like eagles living in a World of "turkeys". Unlike most people, they are less inclined to feel nervous or anxious about what any reasonably stable person would see as overly aggressive, risk-taking or unethical behaviour. If anything they will treat the negative feedback of others as though a disease itself that they will pity or respond to as though a threat to their very existence, hence their tendency to escalate the conflicts they are prone to create with others. Hence the classic alcoholic script: "You are not OK (deficient in some way) but really I am not OK". You can easily see why the main cause of psychosis is psychosis, it is so confusing, shocking and incurable or why so many sadists and psychotics gravitate to jobs where, like a child molester, they can be provided with a ready train of vulnerable people to tell how to feel and how to behave in the name of "being healthy" and "powerful" and "free". No human being can deal with this, nor with the great lengths to which a psychotic will go to defer all normal human accountability as though having to deal with far "inferior" human beings for whom they often feel great concern and sympathy under that psychotic subterfuge, that which is consistent with their brain's aversion to processing and incapacity to process all those emotions necessary for any higher brain development come threats on the order of a disease (a physical tension they routinely release with pathological aggression, sadism, drug use or any other kind of compulsive or promiscuous violence to self and other, the results of which are always as compulsively interpreted by them as "deficiencies" in others) - which is how they thus treat the emotions of others (as a disease), greatly effecting their communication skills, since communication requires the capacity to sympathize with and even anticipate the needs and feelings of others, brain function for which they have not the blood flow nor development (due to trauma-based pathological inflammation, brains "frozen in a scream) nor any interest in gaining such, more disposed than not to want to "educate" others to "their level". A common phrase as such is, "you are just too sensitive", as though sensitivity were not something of a premium in a World with hundreds of wars raging every day. You may want to vent your anger at a sadist or psychotic. Don't. Between the both of you, whether you like it or know it or not (as indeed no one is expected to know or like), you are the only one who does not have to pathologically escalate the conflict. You have to imagine that their brain is this way based on some pretty severe trauma, so severe that the brain has trained the immune system (since the brain has no immune system, in addition to all a child's brain is forced to endure) to treat emotions, yours and theirs, like a disease. This explains the so called "dry" alcoholic. Because, as ever, since the psychotic's brain and immune system treat emotions (inconsistently) as a disease, their body treats their unprocessed and pathologically unable to be processed emotions as a poison on the order of alcohol, gaining power and confidence thereby to compensate for their terrible sense of powerlessness coded into the very structure of their as though enraged brains, acting as such with extreme prejudice and authoritarianism to any suggestion that this is harmful to others. Though they may not report the emotion of fear, or indeed any anxiety at all, the psychotic is as though terrified of any sign of victimization in others, prompting them to escalate. You cannot do anything about this but observe what is happening and try not to add any fire to the nuclear bomb of a person you are faced with, a person who thinks their nuclear explosion is "normal" and you "have to have a problem" to have a problem with it in any way, something for which reason many psychotics will pander, resentfully, to the injuries reported by others, having no comprehension or indeed any pathological capacity to gain any comprehension of the degree of harm they are inflicting, and one should act, knowing this, accordingly. It is not your fault. But, not knowing this and therefore not heeding this, I inadvertently escalated past conflict with psychotic family members by attempting to report the extent of my injuries, for which I required surgery.

How is it possible, today, to create an enemy out of the good and good out of the real enemy? We are disoriented from the start, adapting emotionally uninformed lenses, often provided by the same systems intent on disorienting our minds, with which to perceive the World and make value judgments about what we are seeing and being told by Man, Nature, our body, our children and each other. Once you can conceive of how unlimited are the funds for military "psychological operations" against all Mankind, then you can conceive or get some concept of the prodigious nature of intellectual and spiritual propaganda in our lives, all our lives, about the place of Man and Nature. If you want to get rich, you have to make contact with riches. If you want to perfect your mind, your mind needs to make contact with the perfection only exists in living intelligence, that of our own feelings and in Nature in infinite correspondence. And yet invisible barriers hair thin are set up, partly as a protection against the steady assault of psychological and chemical toxins and false information (that creates inner tension with its contradiction to what our emotions as children tell us, emotions that are responsible in themselves for the whole development of our brains in rhythms like nature that no system could ever emulate without harming our minds), in order to protect us from the perfection that daily reaches out to us, one that steadily grows more and more contradictory with everything we have been told about our concept of Life, Man and God, if at all, compared with what we felt as a child. The truth is our forebears fought and died to protect the very conditions that were set up over generations, after the example set by God in Nature, in order to nurture and nourish our God-bestowed feeling sense of the vast orders of our divine inheritance in all creation, our vital place in Nature.

What I am saying is if you can get a sense of the enormity of military-grade propaganda that suffuses every dimension of human existence today, specifically aiming to place us under mental and emotional conditions (chemically and psychologically) in which we will discount the role of emotion in the development of our speed of thought and understanding, that upon which our lives and all Life most observably depends, then you will know that that propaganda wants to work. If it does not work on us, it cannot achieve its purpose. And that so much money, over and above that of any other branch of the military establishment, is spent on psychological operations, that herein we have the greatest capacity to neutralize its effect, its effects reaching to those of all war, violence and personal and social disease on Earth. And they wouldn't spend that much of our own labour if it didn't work and didn't need to work, given the power of human thought and understanding, electrical and celestial currents of which define all energy and monetary social systems on this entire splendid planet Earth.

And so how much can someone control if they control our thought? Think about it.

How is it possible, today, to create an enemy out of the good and good out of the real enemy?

The answer, to me, is that none of us live in appropriate conditions for a human being. It is that simple and profound.

To think, that children of all ages are watching the TV screen of a military apparatus that has access to unlimited funds to make it easy as possible (easier than you or I could ever imagine) to gain your consent to kill anyone on Earth by the millions, an apparatus called BBC, CBC or CBS et al that has absolutely no interest, ultimately, in the lives any family on Earth, only in preserving and expanding its revenue streams from the maximum sickness of Man possible, from the destruction of Man and all Life on Earth.

Just think about what you are actually allowing to touch your mind, your children's minds, using words like "peace", "national security" and "democracy", calling good innocent peoples like you and me "terrorists" and "threats to the safety of all Mankind", ironically enough. As you will have seen through much of my writing, this is a common quality of psychosis, the conditions of and for which I consider some of the most causative of all social and physical disease on Earth, including war, conditions (like parental psychosis) not fit for any kind of healthy human existence, those of poison at every psychological and chemical strata of all children's lives at every level of material wealth in our respective societies, in schools and amidst "Health Authorities" of every respective nation, schools and institutes that are fifty years behind and lagging farther all the time from peer-reviewed research in major journals with respect to our entire orientation to food, human history and emotional wellness. Schools and Universities have become anachronistic in their own lifetimes; they will be known as schools of the "dark ages" within this century.

Please, for the love of God, spare that some thought. Even if it pains you to do so, I dare not imagine that pain shall ever compare to that of losing your brother, your sister, or mother to a military attack the rest of the World thinks is "necessary" and for "your own good", routinely listening to people who, knowingly or not, work for the killers of your babies, as though they are the friends of any Man on Earth.

This requires our understanding. It requires yours and my urgent attention. You say you don't want to "dwell on the negative" whilst your ignorance is being used to kill your brothers and sisters. There is such a thing, after all, as "criminal ambivalence", a term coined by victims of domestic psychosis.

This requires your immediate attention and thought. Please give it some. On behalf of all children on Earth, thank you.

As a final note on the cause of all disease on Earth, I would like to say that there is "money on our mind".

Long have I observed at close range the effect of money on the brains of almost anyone. Have you ever noticed? Many people act differently when it comes to money. I don't necessarily credit Man with a fault in this regard. I simply believe that money can have potentially very mind-altering effects upon Man.

An interesting study was released (whose methodology and agenda I trust) where lie detectors were used to find out the difference, if any, between what women said they valued most in a potential male mate and what was actually a priority for them. What it found was startling - that more women than not would actually compromise every other standard or quality of character or person in a man if that man had lots of money.

Now, as much as this may say about the relationship between men and women, to me it also says volumes about the effect of money and sex upon the functioning of the human brain - that this may explain much about our societies. Based on the promise of both money and sex, the functioning of these women's brains was clearly altered in ways that they would never consciously consider.

What if I suggested that there was a better than 50 percent chance that you would get into a life-altering car accident or accident of some type in your lifetime? What, then, if I suggested that there were the same chance that, at some point in your life, you would make a decision or series of decisions based upon the mind-altering (and brain function - diminishing) effects of either money or sex, decisions with repercussions on the order of a life-altering accident to those around you? These are decisions effecting your life or that of your children under the influence of elements, money and/or sex, directly diminishing the functioning of your brain such that you would make decisions or act or speak in ways that you would never consciously think you would act or speak.

Money and/or sex, I would suppose, has a direct effect (or can) upon the functioning of the human brain and, as such, on human behaviour, even if it completely contradicts with a person's conscious stated values or wishes. Money and/or sex alters blood flow to the brain and can create a greatly diminished capacity as such at any time for anyone.

And more than half the people in the world will likely at least once in their lives make a potentially life-altering decision based on money and/or sex having a direct effect upon the proper functioning of the human brain (on action, decision or speech) in ways that we would never consciously consider.

Throughout our lives, money and sex are on our minds, as though a spell greatly undermining the blood flow and capacity of our brains to reach those very levels necessary to create truly full and Happy Life-enhancing conditions, with lasting concern for others and our children.

For, mark my words, the self-proclaimed high priests of every respective society on Earth know that we did not descend from apes and that the Theory of Evolution is, for the most part, a total crock, that our ancient land-based ecstatic human existence (and divine natural inheritance) has been colonialized by a modern or technocratic way of Life the most perilous in all of human history, a way of Life we routinely send our children away to foreign lands to murder and die for, so effective has been the occupation by way of severely dimming the human speed of thought far beneath that of the self-proclaimed high priests, human beings who have led us down a path of almost complete atrophy of the human mind and imagination, much to the peril of the health of all people on Earth.

And then there is the invincibility of the dawn.

Often a liar or confidence trickster is so good at convincing others because they themselves are so convinced by their own trauma-based "magical thinking", a soft form of Schizopbrenia where, instead of hearing voices, per se, they compulsively need to associate their stories and lies, really, with an outside or divine source whose authority they do not question or think anyone else will or even should question, either, a form of aggression (lying) that extends the trauma they themselves endured as a child, stunting brain growth.

This does not necessarily say anything about the validity of psychic abilities or "channeling", only that it could easily be presented as just such magical thinking and, ultimately, compulsive aggression.

There is going on right now a revolution unlike any this Earth has ever seen, a quiet revolution of Life by and for the lovers and heroes of Life with the full support of all the energy and infinite intelligence God has been putting into the Sun for hundreds if not thousands of years.

Resurrection of the depth of rest restores the throne
Though uninvolved with all the forces of creation yet
Grand influence on all its endless limits thrive the soul
Connected that intelligence that is not manifest
An castle passes through the mind, the mind through windows o'er
The leaves are drooping rain and snow an freedom we identify With the surrounding Nature of creation born into our very lives
g Remember that sweet depth our brain's inheritance were like
As uninvolved as with the goodness such an Paradise
Or boundless drama that unfolds unfathomable laws
An Happiness we may or may not share with one another yet we steal
Into those depths of Being rest that Being reaches thoughts
In harmony with every force in Nature's breadth we feel
As rolling lands before the castles of an child's play
Those shadows weave into the grass an mansion never goes away.

A Fantasy Journey

Into The Human Heart

Taken from Vision Quest at lulu.com/rayn

There is something about being immersed in God's creation (through the devotion of our acts or through our physical location in Nature) that allows one to sense the very best and brightest of Mankind, the best for which Man and from which Man was born.

I am laying on the grass down by the shallow pool of a stream that runs through our back yard. Carol has gone to the baseball park to pick up our son, Jack.

It is already getting dark out, but it is warm as only summer can be in late August.

Staring into lakes of blue sky in between white floating clouds, clouds of storms gathered and passed over thousands of years, I can just faintly see a few brief stars, beacons, I feel, of the endless reaches not only of the darkness of outer space but of the entire Universe of Nature, of Life.

As I close my eyes, I can picture the deep black panoply of stars and, as if as far from my mind as the first stars of night, I can sense without letters a story about everything to do with everything that has ever or could ever happen on Earth, the whole center of that story, a story about a Dream, the Dream of Man on Earth and in eternity.

I have to say, it feels really good. The story captures today, my birth, mother, my father, Carol and little jack, playing baseball in the park and every miniscule yet infinite science of how every leaf of every tree unfolds under innumerable conditions of not only day and night, of winter and spring but also beneath the invisible light of the Earth and of our own warmest feelings right now, of every new feeling born within the heart, grasses and living systems o'er this shining planet (truly immense in every possible dimension of Man and Nature alike, of a living language and imagination that inhabits both at once) adapting to every conceivable human dream, need and feeling as though powered by the grace of little else.

I open my eyes and stare up into a sky just a little less blue and just a little more purple and black, sunlight reflected from millions of miles away (though my thought travels this whole journey in an instant as in some boundless all-embracing image and rhythm and spirit of all the brightest Life could ever be or has ever been for Man) creating such uplifting colours in the drifting cloud, a living work of art just for me, just on the chance I might be laying here this day and feeling like paying attention.

This recognition strikes as deeply as though someone had told me a train of angels guided my every step or bent boughs of sweet berries down to my waiting lips even as my thoughts soared to empyreans as far from those berries as the stars on which that light was born in infinite accord with berries and lips and all the whispers of goodness and light that slips between them.

Relaxing, taking a deep breath, letting out an even deeper sigh, I rest in the natural surroundings that, like those angels, take up the whole entire story I am living in (a splendid Dream), letters of a sense of a story without letters about everything blowing in the delicate soft evening breeze, caressing memories and leaves alike filled with all the fullness of Life, that of a sense or gladness beyond yet gently caressing the bounds of all physical existence, a sense of ourselves and an easy, innocent and natural familiarity as though with every plane or place we could ever be, each a reflection of condensations of feelings comprehending, alone, our entire place and those of our good feelings in every aspect of the birth of eternity's every unfolding, every engendered moment of existence, our own. Within the language spelled by forever and forever passing by, having been, we could never cease to be.

I can see in my mind's eye Jack waving to his mom as she walks up to him from a distance. The park he has been playing in is just a couple blocks away. They smile at each other, smiles in a Dream. She reaches down and he takes her hand - Mom's hand.

And they begin their walk home to see Dad.

Where am I now? I wonder.

Looking around, the way I feel I could be in another dimension, an heavenly world.

Or maybe I am just in my heart, my heart opened by degrees by the reaches up to which I gaze in amazement, reaches of our heart and stars of a kind and childlike nature, a child's stars, a mother's stars, a father's stars, stars of letters I sense without reading and feel without seeing, my thoughts speeding into images of a living and endless Dream spelled, "L - I - F - E" as though upon my very lips, the song of my own feelings syncopated and carried forth by the wind, the leaves, the light and trees, that of the language and song of this little stream as it gently flows into and out of this little pool beside which I lay, letters like voices whose words and streams go back, like this one, into the very reaches of the boundless depths of eternity itself and God's own most inspired Dream having considered and been created to thrive upon our own feelings and dreams about all where this Life may go eternities at a time, having given us all that He has thought and all that we may yet think up ourselves.

It were as though God's limitless image of Life, His everlasting ever regenerating thoughts of Life were also for our thought proceeding in every conceivable way in limitless Life-enhancing directions, creators ourselves.

Life like thought has limits, bounds, but those limits and those bounds are of the unlimited and the boundless. Life has forms of Life, their every inter-relationship as though having been considered by one almighty thought to which our own most emotionally rich thoughts for Life or for a child might aspire, that of a living Dream written and read in endless directions, shades and gradations, colour, scent, and sound, perfectly coordinated gradations of intelligence each and every aspect of which, like every blade of grass, filled with the essence of Life and of the mind of Man, every aspect of that essence corresponding with every other aspect considered across every possible memory or condition across infinite ripples of causation for and inspired by our own most inspired creativity, our own emotional being, food and beauty for our feeling and thought ripening upon every bough according to every conceivable influence of everything among the stars or on Earth, every perfectly balanced element of creation, degeneration and birth at once in according with our body and Soul's own inner feeling intelligence, particles of an eternal Mind and of a power, that of kindness and concern for others, beyond another power, a power reflected by all the heavenly mirrors of the planets and the stars, their every motion servant to the will and grace of Man's very Soul.

True, even our thoughts must have their rigidity, if only long enough to attain to some measure of relevance to our lives. And yet it could be said that thoughts are born by that which would completely consume them, waves by the ocean attaining to a rigidity or ignorance (either one) without which they could not even begin to exist at all.

Life were both of bounds and boundless at once, and so were we. It is only within these parameters that we can possibly conceive, in words, our vast inheritance of a Dream powered by God's own feelings and inspiration and ours at once, feelings and inspiration of and for the Good of Life as it commanded, quite innocently, quite naturally, the otherwise incomprehensible integration and balance of every force, element, angel and emotion in existence.

It is only that if our thought were directed in a way that was not Life-enhancing or rubbed against the bounds of Life, then we would experience resistance and, if we did not listen to this resistance, fear or pain. Although, our thoughts or beliefs about this kind of pain are much worse than the pain itself, since it is no kind of punishment - it is a direction to our thought to proceed in a more Life-enhancing fashion within this living pageant of both bounds and boundlessness woven together at once, a flutter of encouragement, confidence and concern by the grand Energy of Love, that in our own infinite and invisible capacity to learn about our own vast inheritance in the boundless reaches of the essence of every aspect of living creative intelligence.

My thoughts feel like Love probably because they are being powered by it, powered up to levels or speeds that do not seem higher but brighter, both more abstract and more substantial than any I can recall since perhaps being a young child myself. The leaves and bushes around me take on a timeless quality though it were their very substance all along, time, like the mind, when filled with its essence and fullness (its Happiness!), became timeless and truly alive, it had never been alive, like ourselves, with anything else.

And if everyone had these speeds of thoughts, they would not compete with one another but join (as in many ways we already do), effortlessly, like the rays of the Sun or the notes of the songs of birds, merging to conceive the Heaven of forever on Earth.

Does not the Nature all around me, from the stream to the orchids, from the swaying grasses nipped by the bud of encroaching darkness to the warble of birds, their beaks feeding their young, their throats singing for the feelings in our Souls, speak of such a pageant as must resound within the deepest desires of all Mankind?

The murmur of human voices mingles with that of the stream, shallow deeps of the coolness of its pool forming a chamber of echoes as from webs of every good memory that could ever be, webs of invisible light living in every space.

It is Carol and Jack, and my heart leaps and feels at leisure to leap as it leaps not only for our Love, our good Love, but for that would surround every child and all the world, compounding that Love with the never ending illimitable reaches through though it moves, like us, through Heaven and Earth and all whom She would touch through these the lands of all their dreams come true.

There is a leap that could only be one of joy. There is a brightness that could only be that of Happiness and Life, spring as it does in kind with the individual fullness of the Life and Happiness of every living being in eternity surrounded by images in league with speeds of feeling (so like our mother) for which and from whom Life itself were born.

A song is born on my lips, feelings condensed into so much information as I could never lose and so many filaments and codes as I could never comprehend, that in the most joyful infinite correspondence, like starlight, with every shape and song of the boundless fulfillment of creation therein.

I save it for later, gather as it will the images of memories that will never cease to live.

A Man looks at a Woman's body, Woman looks at Man
Between their gaze a passing rays invisible the miracle of Life,
Codes were woven in their Souls like seeds into the land
The thought of wind and rain and snow in every shade of sky
The meanings that transcend the hallowed burrows all our words
Ascend the warmest Sun's caress the petals and the leaves
An Life eternal were created for so splendid birth
Of Man the mother tongues of Light illuminating these
So vast inheritance in its own agitation pow'rs
That grow only in their kindest moments born within our hearts
The whole fulfillment of creation ripples through the hours
Every season of the warmth our mother, Heaven, Earth, and all the stars
The child that would make a science of the fullness of the brain
The birth of every thought the boundless ocean every wave.

The normalizing of the abnormal even when there is clear evidence that it is to one's own detriment to do so applies to all battering of the physical, emotional, creative, spiritual, and instinctive natures. Women [and Men] face this issue any time they are stunned into doing anything less than defending their soul-lives from invasive projections, cultural, psychic, or otherwise. [by who else but those who have had the same done to them and developed around normalizing it, much to their own detriment and that of others]

Psychically, we become used to shocks aimed at our wild natures. We adapt to violence against the psyche's knowing nature. We try to be good while normalizing the abnormal. As a result, we lose our power to flee. We lose our power to lobby for the elements of soul and life we find most valuable.

Yet, when one sees and senses thusly [with the “skull-light” of ancestral continuity and living wisdom], then one has to work to do something about what one sees. To possess good intuition, goodly power, causes work. It causes work firstly in the watching and comprehending of negative forces and imbalances both inward and outward. Secondly, it causes striving in the gathering up of will in order to do something about what one sees, be it for good, for balance, or to allow something to live or die.
